PREFACE.

IN presenting to the Public the New Commercial Directory of Scotland, Ireland, and the Four most Northern Counties of England, the Proprietors feel great pleasure. Since the first attempt to render assistance to the commercial world by works of this nature, few publications have had greater obstacles to surmount, or have been completed with more unabated activity. To give a commercial and professional representation of a population amounting to more than eight millions, spread over a tract of country, equal to one half of the superficies of the United Kingdom, and engaged in such various branches of commerce and manufacture, was an undertaking at once bold and hazardous; involving no common expence and requiring great perseverance, and knowledge of the routine of mercantile transactions.

To complete a volume embracing so many subjects, has proved an arduous, but it is presumed a successful enterprize. Through a Winter of unusual severity—and at the time of a renewal of the popular representation, for many months have the publishers and their numerous agents toiled with unremitting perseverance to complete the work, but they feel most sensibly that with their utmost endeavours, it could not have appeared in its present state but for the great facilities that have been afforded them; to the Nobility and Gentry, to numerous Professional Gentlemen, as well as to the Merchants and Traders of the districts into which their labours have called them, the Proprietors are happy in having an opportunity of acknowledging themselves deeply indebted; a patronage unprecedented, the most prompt and effectual assistance, polite personal attention, and continued proofs of kindness in contributing information on every subject required, these obligations demand the most heartfelt gratitude, and their warmest thanks; and they beg leave respectfully to urge the assurance of a determination to deserve a continuance of their patronage and support.

In referring to the subjects of the work, the Historic department naturally claims precedence. In the formation of this leading feature of the book, access has been generously afforded to the libraries of many gentlemen of taste in Literature, by which extracts from valuable works have been obtained and connected with the actual observations and remarks of the persons employed in the compilation. The Directorial part next comes under consideration, and here the most formidable obstacles have been encountered. Although the language is the same, still peculiarities of diction, difference of idiom, and the danger of misconception from varied pronunciation, operate powerfully to increase the difficulties ever attendant on works of this nature, but which, through the patient attention shewn to the numerous enquiries, have been generally overcome; and it is hoped that comparatively few inaccuracies will appear. In laying down the plan of this work, attention has been paid to the existing connection between the countries From the eastern coast of Ireland to the opposite coasts of Scotland and Cumberland, the communication is incessant and mutually advantageous By combining them in the same volume, it is imagined that a desirable contact has been effected. Demonstrated in the public approbation, and the extensive support which the arrangement has received.

The pages of reference attached to the conclusion of the larger towns, will greatly facilitate the search for names, particularly where the designation of business is unknown,

Under the article Miscellany, are comprehended the addresses of many persons of respectability, which could not with propriety be inserted under the trade heads

The Maps annexed, engraved expressly for the embellishment of the Directory having been completed with the greatest care, it is hoped will give satisfactiou. The Table of Coins will be found of value to the export merchant, and the List of Bankers, compiled principally from individual inquiry, will contribute much to the advantage of the general trading community. In addition to the foregoing Table and List, are added Tables of the reciprocal Distances of the principal Towns in Ireland and Scotland and a variety of subjects of information, which will be found of great local, as well as of general interest.

* To be continued Triennially.*

The currency of the United States varies considerably in point of relative value. Thus the par of 3 shillings sterling, is equivalent to 5 shillings of the currency of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland; or four shillings of the currency of New Hampshire, Massachusets, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Virginia; or five shillings and fourpence of the currency of New York and North Carolina; or of three shillings and one penny and a third, of the currency of South Carolina and Georgia.

The Dollar, also, has a varied currency. In the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and New Jersey, it passes for seven shillings and sixpence of their currency. In the states of New England and Virginia it passes for six shillings of their currency. In the states of New York and North Carolina it passes for eight shillings currency And in South Carolina and Georgia for four shillings and eightpence of their currency.

EDINBURGH AND LEITH.

EDINBURGH.

THIS elegant city is the metropolis of Scotland, and the county town of Mid Lothian. It is situated 55° 57″ north latitude, and 3° 14″ west longitude from London, is large and populous, and the old part very ancient. It is utterly impossible to speak with any certainty of the origin of its name, or who were its first inhabitants; it is conjectured that this part of the country was included in a Roman province called the province of Valentia, in the days of Agricola, though it does not appear there was any fort or town on that part where Edinburgh stands. When the Romans departed from Britian, this district fell into the hands of the Saxon invaders, under their leaders Octa and Ebusa, in the year 452, and continued in their possession until Egfrid King of Northumberland was defeated by the Picts in 685. In the ninth century the Saxon kings of Northumberland re-conquered it, and their successors retained it until about the year 1020, when it was given up to Indulphus King of Scotland, and the Lothians were then ceded to Malcolm II.

It is not known with certainty by what prince Edinburgh was constituted a royal Burgh, but it appears to have been honoured with that privilege at a very early date, so long since as the year 1128, when king David I. granted a charter for the foundation of Holyrood House, where the town is mentioned by the title of "Burgo meo de Edwinesburgh," and as this monarch is supposed to have beeu the first who erected royal burghs in Scotland, it is probable that Edinburgh is indebted to him for this distinction. For a long time after this period Edinburgh seems to have been a place but of little note, its situation exposed it to frequent invasion, and rendered the possession of property very insecure. In the year 1215, and in the reign of Alexander II. a Parliament was held in the city for the first time, but it was not until two centuries after this (about the year 1456) that Parliaments were regularly held in it, or that it was considered the capital of Scotland; owing to the want of written records very little can be said of the history of the town before this period. The oldest charter in its archives, is one granted by king Robert I. May 28th. 1329, in which he bestows upon Edinburgh, the town of Leith, with its harbour and mills, and his grandson, John, Earl of Carrick, who ascended the throne in the name of Robert III. conferred upon the burgesses the singular privilege of erecting houses in the castle, upon the sole condition of their being persons of good fame.

In the year 1461, when king Henry VI. took refuge in Scotland, as a mark of gratitude for the kind and hospitable reception he received in Edinburgh, he granted his letters patent, for the inhabitants to have the privilege of trading to all the English ports, on the same terms as the citizens of London, but as this unfortunate Prince was never restored, his gratitude had not its desired effect. In the year 1542 Edinburgh was invaded, and almost wholly destroyed by conflagration, however it soon recovered from its ruinous state, and rose to comparative splendour; two centuries passed without much alteration, until the year 1753, when its more modern and magnificent improvements and enlargement commenced. Public attention was first called to the state of the city in the year 1751, by part of a very lofty building falling down, this circumstance occasioned a general survey to be made, many houses were found to be in a state of great decay, and consequently were taken down, in the year 1752. The royal burghs of the town were convened, and a scheme laid before them for the erection of national public buildings, on the scite of the old houses that had previously been pulled down, this design was approved, and an immediate subscription was opened in all the county towns, and the designs were carried into immediate execution, by commencing the erection of the Royal Exchange; the foundation stone of which was laid on the 15th. of September, 1753, by George Drummond, Esq. the magistrate. In the year 1767, the magistrates having with difficulty procured an extension of the royalty; an Act was passed to extend it over a large space of ground on the north, where the building of the new town commenced, when means were devised by the committees, to build the projected new town elegantly uniform. The buildings proceeded so rapidly, that St. Andrew's-square (the first of any consequence built) and the streets connected with it, were all nearly completed in the year 1778. During the progressive enlargement of the new town to the north, a contention arose between the magistrates and their new town feuars, which had the effect of exciting speculation towards the south, a large space of ground was purchased by a private individual, and immediately laid out for the erection of various new and elegant streets, George's-square forms part of the superb buildings at that time projected. The great increase of streets in this quarter soon suggested the necessity of a good communication between the two towns, and an Act of Parliament was accordingly obtained for erecting a bridge over the valley (similar to the one that was begun to be built over the North Loch in 1765,) the foundation stone of which was laid on the 1st of August, 1788. Besides these leading improvements then going forward, others not less prominent were undertaken to beautify its approaches, and perhaps no city in Europe ever so rapidly increased in extent and magnificence as the new town of Edinburgh. At the same time we must observe that the old town has by no means been neglected, many elegant streets and various superb erections have been added to it within these few years, particularly towards the south, where another new and beautiful town is rapidly building; several fine spacious streets are already finished, and many others are in a state of forwardness. In the old part the principal leading streets are spacious and a great length, the High-street, which is very properly named, by the peculiarity of its situation must always be rendered an interesting object to all strangers who visit Edinburgh, its greatest elevation is 140 feet, which commences near the castle and gradually declines to the east, nearly in a direct line to Holyrood House, a length of 5570 feet; the houses in this street are of an extraordinary height, and few streets in Europe equal it in ancient grandeur. We must not omit observing that this fine street assumes various appellations, although in fact it is but one continued range of building, but owing to circumstances it has at different periods received several denominations: it was anciently called Market-street, on account of the public markets of the city being held in it; the part which is situated nearest the castle, is called Castle-hill, and a little farther down, it received the name of the Lawn-market, that description of merchandize being sold in that part of the street; below this it has the name of Luckenbooths, and much lower down near to the palace of Holyrood, it assumes the name of Canongate, because it was formerly the property of the regular Canons of Holyrood House. The most conspicuous object in the old town is the justly admired castle, situated on the western extremity of the central hill on which the ancient part of the city is built. This extensive and grand structure stands on the summit of a rugged and almost inaccessible rock, which is separated from the buildings of the town by a large space of ground, which has lately been embellished with iron palisades, and now forms a fine terrace, leading to the main entrance of the castle. The area of the stupendous rock on which it stands, is upwards of seven English acres, and is elevated 383 feet above the level of the sea, it is accessible only on the eastern side, all the other sides being nearly perpendicular. This fine edifice is so favourably situated for defence, that it could soon be made impregnable, it now possesses strong barriers, pallisades, batteries and portcullises, a fine arsenal capable of containing 30,000 stand of arms, besides other magazines. The fortifications are by no means corresponding with the rules of art, as they are built according to the irregularity of the precipice on which they stand. In the south east part of the castle are a number of houses of considerable antiquity, forming a square of about 100 feet in diameter, which are barracks for the officers of the garrison. In a small room on the ground floor in the corner of the same part, Mary Queen of Scots was delivered of her only son James VI. a prince whose birth was fortunate for the whole island, as in his person the crowns of two nations, which had been at enmity from the earliest ages, were at last happily united. In another apartment, in this part of the building, called the Crown room, the Scottish Regalia was deposited, on the 26th of March, 1707, consisting of the Crown, Sceptre, and Sword of State, and it was long doubted whether these ensigns of Scottish Royalty had not been removed; for in the year 1794, the commissioners who were appointed by royal warrant to search for them in this apartment, doubted their power, and did not cause the chest, in which they were said to be deposited, to be opened, consequently the general belief was that they were not to be found; however other commissioners being appointed by the Prince Regent, on the 5th February 1818, the large oaken chest in the Crown Room was forced open, and the relics of the Scottish monarchy were discovered in perfect preservation, consisting of a Crown of pure gold, superbly adorded with rich diamonds, and costly precious stones, viz. jacinths, oriental garnets, chrysoprises, and amethysts, all interspersed with valuable pearls; a sceptre of silver richly double gilt, 34 inches in length, on it are several figures of saints, under which are the letters J. R. V. A sword of state five feet long, the handle and pommel are of silver, double gilt, 15 inches in length, on the blade is indented in gold letters Julius II. P. and was a present from that Pope to James IV. it is of exquisite workmanship and richly ornamented. A Rod of Office, said to have belonged to the Lord Treasurer, was not in the inventory, but was found in the chest, it is silver gilt, and finely executed; a keeper of the regalia has been appointed, and the public can now be gratified with the sight of the venerable and valued relics. The whole of this very interesting exhibition is placed in the Crown Room, in an oval space inclosed by iron railing; the room is hung with crimson and lighted by lamps.

Edinburgh castle has a governor, (generally a Scottish nobleman) a deputy governor, who resides in the castle, a store-keeper, master gunner, and a chaplain: in its present extended state it can accommodate upwards of 2000 men. The antiquity of it is at least equal to that of the city, and perhaps the security derived from the protection of the one, may have been the chief cause that gave rise to the other, a situation like this must have been occupied as a strong hold from the earliest times. It is quite impossible to speak accurately of its origin, but it might be referred to the same source as that which gave rise to the city, of which the castle was probably the beginning. We can, however, trace an historical account of this castle as far back as the year 1093, when Queen Margaret the widow of Malcolm Canmore, died in it, a few days after her husband was slain. After this it was frequently besieged, taken and retaken, until the year 1313, when King Robert Bruce ordered it to be demolished, and it was consequently in ruins till about the year 1336, when King Edward III. on his way from Perth in his return to England, visited the ruins of Edinburgh Castle, and ordered it to be rebuilt, and a strong garrison to be placed in it. Since that period it has been the residence and the prison of many Kings of Scotland. In 1650 it sustained a two months siege against the Parliamentary army commanded by Cromwell, and at last surrendered on honourable terms. In the year 1715, the rebels attempted to surprise it, but did not succeed, and since that time the history of this fortress consists only of a series of internal improvement, for the accommodation of soldiers stationed in this part of the country. During the period of the late war a number of French prisoners were confined in it, but it is to be most sincerely hoped that it will be long 'ere it will be inhabited again by such unwelcome guests.

The Palace of Holyrood House, though less conspicuously situated, is not less deserving notice, it stands east of the city, at the other extremity of the High-street, it is a superb edifice of a quadrangular form, with a fine open court in the centre, 94 feet square. The western front consists of two large castellated square towers, four stories high, which are joined by a low building or gallery, of two stories, with a flat roof, and double ballustrade; the towers have each three circular turrets at their exterior angles, rising from the ground to the battlements, the fourth angle of each great tower being concealed by the buildings that surround the inner court. The grand entrance is ornamented with four Doric columns, which support a cupola in the form of an Imperial Crown, and over the gateway are the Royal Arms of Scotland. The front to the east is of equal elegance; round the area in the inside, is a handsome arcade, faced with pilasters of the Doric order, and on the entablature of these are cut the ensigns of Scottish Royalty, the Thistle, Crown and Sceptre; on a pediment in this area, fronting the west, are the Royal Arms. Some parts of this palace, consisting of the north west towers, were built by Jame V. about the year 1528, for a royal residence. During the minority of Queen Mary, a great part of it was destroyed by fire, but it was soon after repaired, and considerably enlarged, much beyond its present size, as it then consisted of five spacious courts, and extended itself towards the south; great part of it was afterwards again burnt by the soldiers of Cromwell, but at the restoration, King Charles the second repaired and altered it into its present elegant form, Sir William Bruce was the architect. This palace is almost the only entire royal residence which remains in Scotland; it is a magnificent structure, and is hoped it will long remain what it is, a grand ornament to the metropolis. Adjacent to the palace stand the ruins of the Church of the Abbey of Holyrood House, which was founded by David First, 1128; the original charter is in the archives of the city, it was bestowed on the Canons regular of St. Augustine, who were brought thither from the priory of St. Andrews, in the county of Fife; in the south east corner of the Chapel is the Royal vault, in which were deposited the remains of David second, James second, Prince Arthur, third son of James IV. James V.; Magdalen his Queen, Arthur, Duke of Albany, second son of James V. and Henry Lord Darnley. This repository of the Royal dead was broken into at the Revolution, and many of the leaden coffins were taken away by the Rebels, the bones that were afterwards collected are now locked up in the Royal vault. The precints of the Abbey of Holyrood House, including an extensive park, enclosed by James V. are a Sanctuary for Insolent Debtors, but before any one can receive the benefit of this privilege, he must be provided with a protection, signed by a Magistrate, this may always be obtained, from a person who resides near the Abbey for the purpose, and for which he receives a guinea, the Debtor can then take lodgings within these precincts, and bid defiance to all legal proceedings against him for Debt, and on Sundays his walk may be extended to any part. The Palace, Abbey and its environs, are objects of peculiar interest, and may be viewed with great pleasure by a stranger. A person resides on the spot to show the Chapel and Royal Apartments, and of whom may be had a book fully descriptive of the whole.

There are numerous other ancient and modern structures that embellish the Old Town; the Royal Exchange, which is situated on the north side of the High-street, is a noble building of a square form, with a fine open court in the centre; as before observed, this was the first erection in the plan of improvements, which have raised Edinburgh so superior in elegance to most other cities; it was opened in the year 1761. The Bank of Scotland is also another magnificent National Edifice, it is situated at the bottom of Bank-street; the back part of the building faces the New Town: its design is chastely elegant, and from its situation it is a considerable addition to the architectural beauties of Edinburgh.

The University may be justly esteemed an architectural wonder; a faint idea can only be portrayed of the grandness of this stately College, the foundation stone of which, was laid on the 16th November, 1789, by Lord Napier. The ceremony on this occasion was peculiarly impressive, and the procession to and from the place was truly grand; it consisted of Lord Napier, as grand Master Mason of Scotland; the Magistrates of the City, as Patrons of the University, in their robes; the Principal and Professors in their gowns; the Students, with sprigs of laurel in their hats; the Free Masons of all the Lodges in the city and neighbourhood. After the masonic ceremonies, were performed, two chrystal bottles, cast for the purpose, were deposited in a vacuity formed in the stone, in one of them was put various coins of the present reign, each being previously enveloped in chrystal; in the other were deposited seven rolls of vellum, containing a short account of the original foundation, and present state of the University, together with several other papers, and some News-papers, containing advertisements relating to the College, a list of the names of the Principal and Professors, the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and the officers of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the bottles were sealed up and covered with a plate of copper, wrapped in block tin; upon the under side of the copper were engraved the Arms of the City of Edinburgh and University, and also the Arms of the Right Honourable Lord Napier. The building was then begun, but the sums that were previously collected, though large, were soon found far from sufficient to complete such a princely and extensive edifice as it was designed to be. It is impossible for our limits to admit of giving more particulars relating to this monument of science and national grandeur. The grand front, which faces the east, is compleat, and exhibits a magnificent style of architecture and fine taste, and the entire of this very extensive fabric is now fast approaching to completion, its form is square, the east and west sides are each 255 feet in length; the south and north 358 each. Over the grand entrance, which is on the east side, is a fine Portico, supported by massy columns of the Doric order, each column is 26 feet high, and formed of one solid stone: a fine dome adorns the centre. We cannot avoid noticing the interior of this pile, which corresponds, if it is not superior, in point of elegance to the exterior; it contains a Library Room, the most magnificent in the kingdom, it is adorned with many finely painted portraits, and a most valuable and extensive library; a Museum which occupies two rooms on the west, each 90 feet long, and 30 wide, the lower room is 22 feet high, and the upper one is considerably more lofty, in the centre of which, is a fine lantern dome, 18 feet in diameter, with two other large lanterns, and three fine windows in the side of the room; added to these great rooms, there are smaller side apartments and external galleries, and Lecture Room, and a superb grand gallery surrounds the whole. The walls of the rooms are covered with splendid cases and rich plate glass, containing objects of Natural History; the cases in the galleries contain a magnificent collection of birds, lately purchased by the College, from M. Dupesme of Paris, besides a valuable collection that belonged to the Museum before, the whole combining the most extensive, valuable and rare collection of birds in Great Britain; they are valued at many housand pounds sterling. In the middle of the great room above (the floor, which is iron painted) are magnificent tables covered with plate glass, and containing beautiful sepecimens of shells, insects, and corals of the most rare productions; the lower great room is gorgeously ornamented with fine pillars, between which are placed splendid cases for objects of natural history, principally quadrupeds, of which there is a most interesting collection; the lower external gallery is a very beautiful apartment, 50 feet in length, containing great and valuable collections of insects, and a fine cabinet of minerals for the use of the students of mineralogy; the upper external gallery is 90 feet long, divided into three apartments of great beauty, and lighted from the roof by splendid lanterns; the smaller apartments contain a collection of comparative anatomy; the middle and lower room fine specimens of minerals. Another extensive room is preparing to be added to this great Museum, intended for all the rocks and minerals of the British Empire, which will be arranged in geographical order. Besides the numerous acquisitions lately made, the College Museum is likely soon to receive considerable valuable additions from Scottish Gentlemen who reside in distant countries, and who overlook no circumstance which may tend to improve this splendid and extensive collection of natural valuables, which is not to be surpassed (in its present state, by any Museum in Europe. The number of students who attend the different classes, in in the year 1819, amounted to 2160. The University of Edinburgh is not like most other Colleges; as far as regards the students, there is no necessity for any particular mode of living, they mix with the other inhabitants of the city, and live in such manner as best suits their circumstances and views, neither do the rules of the College require that the students should appear in any particular dress different to others. In the arrangement of their academical studies they are also left at perfect freedom, it being only necessary, in taking degrees in medicine, to have attended the prescribed classes a certain number of sessions, and in divinity to have attended the Divinity Hall, in addition to the other branches of study which the national church prescribes. The degree of Doctor in Medicine, is conferred annually in August; the candidates prepare and print a thesis, and the last examination is a public one. The Magistrates of Edinburgh are the chief patrons of this excellent and noble institution. The winter sessions of the College continues for about six months, beginning in October and November, and ending in April and May. The summer sessions begins in May, and generally ends in October.

Besides the University, there are many private Academies and Lecture rooms in Edinburgh, for classical and medical instruction, superintended by men of great abilities; several Class Rooms for chemistry, and also for instruction in botany. The High School is also a justly celebrated literary establishment, it was founded in the year 1578, and the present school, (which is erected on the spot where the original stood) is a plain, neat and commodious building; the number of scholars who annually attend the High School, is upwards of 800; the teachers are a rector and four masters, each of whom has a separate class. The four masters conduct the scholars through their elementary studies, progressively, for four years, until they are fitted for the more advanced classes of the rector, with whom they remain for one or two years. The course of education in this seminary, is a regular course of Latin study, until the fourth year, when they commence with the study of Greek, with translations from English to Latin, viva voce. An annual examination takes place in the month of August, and to those whose merit is deserving, premiums are adjudged. The teachers of this school have deservedly long held a high place in the opinion of the public; many of the first characters of the present day received the rudiments of their classical knowledge at this seminary, and some of the teachers have attained considerable celebrity in the literary world. The late rector, Dr. Adam, was the author of many useful works; and the present rector, Mr. Pillans, has introduced many important improvements in the art of teaching. The foundation stone of the present High School was laid by the late Sir William Forbes as grand Master Mason of Scotland, on the 24th of June, 1777; it is situated to the north east near to the Royal Infirmary.

In regard to literary attainments, Edinburgh justly claims one of the honorable stations among the seats of learning in Europe, but it has been comparatively, but lately obtained, the gothic darkness, which overspread Europe for many ages, extended to Scotland, and though a ray of genius, illuminated the scene now and then, yet the period at which Edinburgh, began to expand its genius is very recent. Before the reformation, literary acquirements were almost wholly confined to the Clergy. In feudal times, the martial pursuits of the Barons made them regardless of the more elegant accomplishments. The progress of science, and the more gentle arts which embellish civilized life, was very slow. The union of the Crowns, in the person of James VI. and the union of the Kingdoms in the Reign of Queen Anne, removed great obstacles to this progress, and the subsequent change of manners, which followed these eras, has gradually paved the way for that improvement in science, and extention of knowledge, which has since distinguished this corner of the united kingdom, and shone forth so conspicuously in the metropolis of Scotland. Of late years, the periodical publications, have also done much towards promoting a taste for literature and science, the earliest of these known, to have been published in Edinburgh, was in the year 1660. Before that period, most of the Scottish affairs were published in London. In 1643, a paper called the Scots Scouts discoveries was published there; also the Scots Intelligencer, or the Weekly News, from Scotland and the Court, and the Scots Dove. The benefits of news papers, were first communicated to Scotland, by Oliver Cromwell, who was so well aware of the influence which the press is calculated to have on public opinion, that when his army invaded Scotland, he carried a printing press with him; and when he fortified Leith, he settled his printer, Christopher Higgins, in that town, in Nov. 1652, and he began to print a Diary, chiefly for the information of the English soldiers. The first news paper, of Scottish manufacture, was printed in Edinburgh, on the 31st. of Dec. 1660, entitled the Mercurious Caledonius, comprising the affairs then in agitation in Scotland, with a survey of Foreign Intelligence. The Proprietor and Editor of which, was one Thomas Sydserfe; but after printing ten numbers, it was discontinued altogether; the form in which this first Scottish News Paper appeared, was a small 4to of eight pages, which was printed by a society of stationers, and published once a week. In February, 1699, a paper appeared, entitled the Edinburgh Gazette, published by Royal Authority, and which was continued to be printed for some time after the Union. The Edinbro' Evening Courant was established on the 24th December, 1718, at which time the Town Council gave an exclusive privilege to James Macewan, Stationer, Burgess, to publish this paper conditionally, that before publication "he gave ane coppie of his print to the Magistrates." It has always been popular, and has now the widest circulation of any paper in Scotland. It was comparatively late before the Scottish metropolis produced any periodical work, professedly for the purpose of criticism; the first attempt at which, was a Review, entitled Bibliotheca Universalis, in January, 1688, being an historical account of books and transactions of the learned world, only one number of this work was printed, and no other work of the kind appeared in Edinburgh for the long period of 65 years. It is only within these last 50 years that Edinburgh has made any great figure in the literary world, but since that period the value of literary productions, of the Scottish metropolis, has been greater than in any other country; for instance, David Hume received 5000*l.* for the second part of his History of England, and Dr. Robertson, for his Charles the V. received 4500*l.* and it is believed that Walter Scott has received more money for his admirable writings than any preceding author. 'Till within these 20 years, it appears that the booksellers of Edinburgh were not aware of the great importance of the most material branch of their business, they suffering most of the great Literary productions to be sold to publishers in London. But in the present day the entire emoluments of native talent are justly secured to Scotland by proper estimation of the admirable Works that are so frequently produced in Edinburgh.

The Fine Arts are also making considerable progress in this metropolis; an Institution for their advancement was founded in February, 1819, and opened in March following, with an exhibition of 92 valuable Paintings, by ancient Masters. The Pictures were of the first order, from the collections of Earl Elgin, the Earl Wemyss, Sir James Erskine, &c. &c. The exhibition of these master-pieces of ancient art, cannot but have the best effect on the progress of the fine arts in Scotland, both with regard to artists and the public; and it is in the contemplation of the Directors that the works of modern artists shall be displayed in this exhibition. Several painters of first rate abilities are residents of the city of Edinburgh.

NEW TOWN OF EDINBURGH.

This part of the city excels any other in Europe in elegance and proportion, it is built in a style of beautiful simplicity, three principal streets, which extend a mile in parallel lines from east to west, are intersected at right angles and at equal distances, by six cross streets about a quarter of a mile in length, form that part of the New Town, which was first projected. Princes street is a beautiful range of elegant houses, a mile long, and is divided from the Castle and part of the old town by the North Loch, about the centre of which is a communication with the opposite side formed by a great earthen mound, the making of which was an undertaking unrivalled by any but Alexander the Great at Tyre. It consists of no less than 580,334 cubical yards of carried earth, supplied gratis, from the foundations of the houses of the New Town, and if it had been paid for at only 6d. per cart load, would have cost 32,643*l.* 15*s.* St. Andrew's-square is situated in the north east, it is a fine pile of building, the regularity of which is agreeably interrupted by a superb structure, occupied as the excise office. From this square to the west, extends George-street, running majestically through the centre of that part of the town; this street is a mile in length, and the houses on either side are of the most elegant proportional uniformity, On the northside it is adorned by St. Andrews Church with a beautiful lofty spire, opposite is the Physicians' Hall, and the superb Assembly Rooms, are a little further west. This spacious fine street must be the admiration of every stranger who visits Edinburgh.

At the extreme end to the west it opens into Charlotte-square, in the centre of which the terminating object presents itself, which is George's Church, and is grandly conspicuous, the whole length of George-street; this beautiful sacred edifice is elevated on a flight of steps, 68 feet in width. The front consists of a vestibule, with four massy pillars, and two pilasters of the Ionic order, 36 feet high; behind the vestibule a fine dome sublimely rises from a basement 48 feet square, above which is a circular row of columns with their entablature; the whole is surmounted by a lantern of 8 columns, 150 feet from the ground. This grand pile of building was founded on the 14th May, 1811, and was opened for public worship in 181-, at an expence of 33,000 pounds, it will contain 1600 people. The square in which this church stands cannot be surpassed for splendid magnificence. A noble edifice, called the Register Office stands at the east end of Princes-street, its south front looks immediately towards the North-bridge. This grand structure was erected for the purpose of preserving the public records of Scotland, and was first suggested by the late Earl of Moreton, then Lord Register; the foundation stone was laid on the 17th June, 1774, the ceremony was extremely grand, and performed under a discharge of artillery, in presence of the Judges of the Courts of Session, and Exchequer, &c. &c. This Edifice, although of considerable size, is not above one half the extent of the original plan, and what it is still intended to be, the front and one half of each wing only are at present finished but in this state it is particularly elegant. The front is ornamented with a fine entablature of the Corinthian order; in the centre of this truly grand national pile, is a noble Dome, 50 feet in diameter, and 80 in height, at each corner of the front, is a projection, with a beautiful stone ballustrade, and a lesser Dome; in the middle is another great projection, with four fine Corinthian pillars, supporting a pediment, within which are the Royal Arms of Great Britain, which considering their elevation, and the magnitude of the building, are considerably too small, and convey to a spectator, rather an idea of a large Medallion, than an appropriate ornament for the Register-Office of Scotland. The whole front is embellished with a rich entablature, and the grand outer staircase is particularly elegant. The interior of this magnificent structure, is equal to its outward appearance. The walls inside have numerous arched divisions, disposed into presses for holding the records, the access to which is by a grand hanging gallery, that encircles the entire edifice. Two elegant staircases lead to the chambers, and the Clerks apartments, the number of which, when completed, will be 97; the whole of the building, is a fine design of architectural taste and judgment; in its present state, it cost 40,000 pounds. On the East of the Register-Office, opens Waterloo-place, which for its length, is one of the grandest streets in the New Town, its situation is peculiarly adapted, to add the most beautiful and novel effect; it leads to a rocky eminence, at the extreme end of the street, called Calton-Hill, on which, crowning the most elevated part, stands a fine monument, to perpetuate the lamented Nelson; it has a most pleasing and stately effect. The Observatory, which is a fine building, stands also near it. In the centre of this really magnificent street, is the Regent's-bridge, to the east of which is the new Post-Office, a most superb edifice of splendid architecture. At the top, leading a little to the right, the new Prison, erected in the Saxon style of architecture, is very extensive, and for elegance of design, is perhaps not to be surpassed in Europe; it is a fine object, in the view from the North-bridge. The ascent is easy and pleasing, to the summit of Calton-hill, from Waterloo-place; and the walks that are formed round it, present at every step, views of unparelled variety and sublimity. The city from this eminence, is seen below, as if delineated on a map. Leith, the Frith of Forth, with its shipping, and the mountain wild scenery around, present a succession of beautifully varied objects, which are rarely seen so richly combined. Nor must we omit the prospects from the high terrace on Castle-hill, although different, are not less grand and interesting; it commands a view of an extensive part of the subjacent country; and the buildings of the city, from the Castle itself, takes in a still more extended range: on the North appears a fine sight of the Frith of Forth, the opposite coast of Fife, with its fishing towns very distinct and romantically scattered along the margin of the sea. On the east, is seen that conspicuous elevated spot, called Arthur's seat, with the rich cultivated fields of East Lothian, and the conical-hill of North Berwick Law. On the south, are the hills of Braid and Craiglockhart and the Pentland hills, terminate the perspective. Such views as these two eminences command, for a combination of beautiful variety and rich scenery, probably cannot be met with in the immediate vicinity of any other city in the world. The bridges also present views, which from their singularity to a stranger, would almost be terrific, appearing, as if one immense city, was built over another. From the North Bridge, a scene presents itself at night, not to be seen in any other city; when the lamps are lighted, it has the wonderful effect, of a firmament below, with the glittering of numerous brilliant stars, occasioned by the various lamps which surround and are placed in the immense valley, which is immediately beneath the bridge. It has a singularly beautiful appearance, and must be seen to form a just idea of its peculiar grandeur.

In addition to the original plan of building the New Town, a further design was formed to extend the city to the northward, to the water of Leith; and eastward to the town and port of Leith, part of this plan is already executed; and the remainder is approaching fast towards completion. In the parts more recently erected, the houses are improved in architectural elegance, and interior conveniences, and the entire are in the first style of modern taste. Many of the streets are magnificent, particularly Herriot-row; and its continuation, Abercrombie-place, Queen-street, Northumberland-street, Great King-street, with many fine squares, and cresents, altogether embellished with many sacred edifices, whose majestic towering spires produce an air of grandeur to the entire of the splendid New Town, of the Scottish metropolis.

The religious establishments of Edinburgh, are numerous, they consist of 56, viz. 15 Established Churches, 5 Chapels of Ease, 6 Scottish Episcopal Churches, 1 Cameronian, 6 Burghers, 4 Antiburghers, 4 Reliefs, 4 Independents, 4 Baptists, and 1 each, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Glassites, Society of Friends, Berean, Unitarian, and New Jerusalem Temple. St. Giles's Church, is one of the most remarkable of these places of public devotion; it is situated upon an elevated part of the High-street, and is built in the form of a cross, with a lofty square tower from its centre, from which a Turret ascends, composed of four arches, intersecting each other, in the form of an imperial crown, a pointed spire terminates this ancient stately tower, in which is placed a set of music bells, a man tinkles them from one till two o'clock every day, to resemble various popular airs. This Church is an ancient gothic fabric, at what period it was founded is uncertain; the first record relating to it, is in the year 1359, when David II. granted a charter of some lands to the officiating Chaplain, and in the year 1387, a considerable addition was made to it. In the year 1466, it was erected into a Collegiate Church, by King James III. In 1599, the tower was used as a common prison, by which means the roof was damaged, and the town Council discharged it from being used for that purpose ever after. In the year 1643, on the 13th. of October, the Solemn League and Covenant, was sworn to in this Church, and subscribed by the Committee of Estates of Parliament, the Commission of the Church and the English Commissioners.

The Iron Church, which is also in the High-street, is situated at the point, where the two bridges meet, that lead to the south and north part of the town; this Church was founded in the year 1637, and opened for public worship, in 1647. There are many other Churches and Chapels in the Old-town, which deserve particular attention. The Trinity College Church; Lady Yester's Church; The new and old Grey-friars' Churches, Canongate Church, St. Cuthbert's Church, Dr. Jamieson's Meeting-House, &c. &c. There are also many splendid Churches in the New Town, viz. St. Andrew's is on the North side of George's-street, and is a superb structure of an oval form, ornamented with a fine tapering spire, 168 feet in height. An elegant portico, supported by four columns of the Corinthian order, projects a few feet into the street, the whole is beautifully finished, and has an elegant appearance, St. George's Church, already mentioned, is truly splendid. St. Paul's Chapel, on the north side of York-place, is a handsome gothic building, consisting of a nave, and four elegant octagon towers, at the angles, and two side aisles; the design of this Chapel, does great credit to the architect, it was finished in June, 1818, and cost 12,000 pounds. St. John's, stands at the west end of Princes-street, its form is oblong, of the florid gothic style of architecture, the interior corresponds with its outward splendour; it was finished in 1818, at an expence of 13,000 pounds sterling. St. George's Chapel stands in York-place, which is small, but extremely beautiful, it is entirely gothic and is most tastefully fitted up; this superb little edifice, was built wholly by subscription, and is a pleasing ornament to that part of the town. The Roman Catholic Chapel, stands near the termination of York-place, it was built in the year 1813, and the adoption of the Gothic style of architecture in this erection, has led to the choice of a similar style in the chapels which have been since erected in the city of Edinburgh. This fabric is extremely neat and handsome, and is fitted up in the inside very elegantly; above the altar, is a fine painting by Vandyke, the subject of which, is a dead Saviour: it also possesss a fine organ.

Few cities in Europe can boast of more or better regulated charitable Institutions than this city, and from every appearance, it may be fully presumed, that they are all under most excellent regulations. The Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, was first projected in the year 1721, it is a grand, but not modern building. In a recess over the principal entrance, is a fine statue of King George the II.; this noble Institution, has accommodation for 228 patients in separate beds. The funds for its support average about 5000 pounds per annum. The public Dispensary, for persons who labour under diseases, which require no confinement, owes its erection to the benevolence of Dr. Andrew Duncan, sen. present professor of the theory of physic, in the University of Edinburgh. It was founded in the year 1776, and stands in north Richmond-street. Another establishment, of the same nature, entitled the New Town Dispensary, was founded in the year 1815, for the accommodation of the poor in the northern part of the city. The Lying-in-Hospital, under the superintendance of the professor of midwifery, in the University of Edinburgh, is a most useful Institution. The building is situated in a heathful part of Park-place, and receives all poor or unfortunate women, whose circumstances deprive them of proper assistance at their own places of abode. The Lunatic Asylum, the present building was opened for the reception of patients, in 1813, a part only of the contemplated buildings are erected. Patients are admitted to the benefits of this Institution, on payment of a regulated sum, according to the accommodation required and their former habits, the medical treatment is conducted by two Physicians and two Surgeons of eminence. Heriot's Hospital, one of the richest in Edinburgh, owes its foundation, to George Heriot, who was jeweller to King James VI. Heriot was son to a goldsmith, in Edinburgh, and being bred to his father's business, he was appointed goldsmith to the Queen of James VI, in the year 1597; and after he was constituted goldsmith and jeweller to the King, with a right to all the emoluments of that lucrative office. Upon the accession of King James to the English throne, Heriot followed the Court to London, and became eminent and rich. He then furnished jewels to Prince Charles (afterwards Charles I.) when he went to the court of Spain in 1623. These jewels were never paid for by James, but when Charles I. succeeded to the throne, the debt to Heriot was allowed to his trustees, in part of their purchase money of the Barony of Broughton, then Crown lands in the vicinity of Edinburgh; these lands are now part of the foundation of this hospital, the revenue of which is upwards of £5000 per annum, and is rapidly increasing. George Heriot died in London in the year 1624, he made his will in 1623, and in disposing of his immense fortune, after remembering all his relations, friends, and servants, both in England and Scotland, he left the remainder in trust to the magistrates of Edinburgh to found and endow an hospital, for the maintenance, relief, and bringing up of so many freemens' sons, who are poor and fatherless, belonging to the city of Edinburgh as the sum should be found adequate for. This magnificent gothic fabric was accordingly begun to be built in the year 1628, from a plan of the celebrated architect Inigo Jones, whom James VI. brought from Denmark. The building stopped for some time during the civil wars, which followed the murder of Charles I. but it was again resumed in the year 1642, and then prosecuted until 1650, at which time the whole was nearly completed. The boys are admitted at the age of seven and not more than ten years, they generally leave the hospital at the age of fourteen, unless preparing for the University, they are in that case retained for a longer period; those wishing to follow any of the learned professions are sent to the college for four years after leaving the hospital, and an allowance of £30 per annum paid quarterly in advance; and all boys when they leave the institution, are provided with a handsome suit of clothes of their own choosing; also an elegant bible. The whole management of the house is vested in a treasurer, appointed by the magistrates of Edinburgh, under whom are the house governor, housekeeper, and the masters of the different branches of learning.

Watson's Hospital which derives its name from the founder, George Watson, (who once held the appointment of Accountant of the Bank of Scotland) is situated likewise in the southern quarter of the city, near to Heriot's Hospital, and though less elegant, yet it is a very handsome building, it is for the maintenance and education of the children and grandchildren of decayed Members of the Merchants' Company in Edinburgh, of the age of from eight to eleven, and remain until sixteen years of age, it contains about 70 or 80 boys, and the Hospital is under the management of the Master, Assistants, and Treasurer of the Merchant Company. Gillespies Hospital stands in a delightful situation on the south west border of the city, it owes its erection to the late James Gillespie, of Spylaw, who by a deed dated the 16th of April, 1796, bequeathed the greater part of his property for the purpose of founding and endowing this Hospital, for old men and women; and a Free School for the instruction in reading, writing and arithmetic, of 100 poor Boys. the Governors of the Hospital were incorporated by a royal charter, dated the 19th of April 1801, and in this year the present building was begun; it is of an oblong form, and built after the ancient Gothic style, the whole of which has a very elegant appearance. The Charity Workhouse of the city stands likewise in the southern district, it was erected by voluntary contribution in the year 1743, it will accommodate upwards of seven hundred poor; the principal funds for the support of this institution are, a tax of five per cent on the valued rents of the city, the collections at the church doors, charitable donations, and voluntary contributions of the citizens, the Government of it is under the direction of the Magistrates of Edinburgh. There are two other Charity Workhouses connected with the city, in the suburb of Canon-gate and the parish of St. Cuthbert, which are conducted on a similar plan to the former.

The Merchant Maiden Hospital was founded in the year 1695, by a voluntary contribution, for the maintenance and education of daughters of merchant burgesses of Edinburgh, and a Mrs. Mary Erskine gave 12,000 pounds Scots. In the year 1707, the Governors were made a Body Corporate by Act of Parliament. The foundation stone of the present building was laid on the 2nd of August, 1816. This edifice, which is in the Grecian style of architecture, stands on a gently rising ground, with its front to the south, and bounded on that by the public walk of the Meadows; the principal feature of this structure is a fine portico, supported by four very handsome pillars, the design of which is taken from that of the Ionic Temple on the Ilyssus. The annual revenue of this Hospital is about 3000 pounds, and its erection cost 12,000 sterling and upwards.

Trades' Maiden Hospital was founded in the year 1704; the building is situated in Argyle square. This Institution is for the daughters of decayed tradesmen being maintained and educated, of which about fifty are generally in the house. Mrs. Mary Erskine was also a liberal contributor to this Institution.

Orphan Hospital is another most praiseworthy establishment; the present building was founded in the year 1733, and is situated a little to the east of the North Bridge, and children are received into it under seven years of age, from any parts of the kingdom; it is a handsome edifice with a neat spire and a clock, the Managers are a Body Corporate, and obtained a royal charter in the year 1743.

Trinity Hospital was founded by Mary Gueldres, consort to James II. in the year 1461, for the reception of thirteen poor persons; it is situated at the foot of Leith Wynd, and in the year 1819, the number of persons on the establishment were eight men, and thirty women, besides 93 out pensioners, who receive each six pounds per annum, none are received under fifty years of age.

The Asylum for the Blind. This excellent Institution was projected by Dr. Johnston of North Leith, and is chiefly supported by voluntary contributions, the establishment is situated in Nicolson-street, where the indigent blind are taught to work at professions suitable to their abilities; the produce of their work contributes towards the support of the Institution.

Institution for the Education of Deaf and Dumb Children, was established on the 25th June, 1810, and occupies a house and garden in Chessels-court, Canon-gate; great credit is due to the Master and Mistress of this Institution, whose success in teaching these unfortunate members of society, merits the highest approbation; those who receive the benfiets of this laudable establishment, are taught to read and write their native language, and even to use it in articulate speech, and the greatest attention is paid to their moral and religious duties.

The Magdalen Asylum was projected in the year 1797, under the title of the Philanthropic Society of Edinburgh, the objects of which is to reclaim to habits of virtue and industry, convicts, chiefly of the female sex, who have been committed to Bridewell, and others of similar character; it is situated in Canon-gate. The house was built in 1805; the charity is chiefly supported by voluntary contributions.

Ministers Widow's Fund. The plan of this meritorious scheme, originated with Dr. Webster, in the year 1743, and was sanctioned by Parliament in 1744; the object of the fund, which has accumulated considerably, is for the benefit of the widows of deceased clergymen, and provisions to children, which is encreased after the expiration of six years.

There are many other most excellent Charitable Institutions and Societies in the city of Edinburgh.—The Society for the Sons of the Clergy.—The Society for Relief of the Destitute Sick.—Horn's Charity.—Watson's Bequest.—Thomsons Bequest.—Society for Suppression of Begging.—Savings Banks, &c. &c.—all of which are well supported.

THE MUNICIPAL ESTABLISHMENTS OF EDINBURGH.

Edinburgh is governed by a Town Council of thirty-three Members. The ordinary Council consists of twenty-five, and the remaining eight are named extraordinary Members; the whole is composed of merchants and tradesmen, whose respective powers and interests were, by the constitution of the Burgh, intended to be so interwoven, that an equal balance should be preserved between the two parties. The Chief Magistrate is here styled the Lord Provost, whose office is similar to that of the Lord Mayor in London. The Lord Provost is high Sheriff, Coroner and Admiral within the City and Liberties, and the town harbour and roadstead of Leith, he has also a jurisdiction in matters of life and death, now in desuetude, and before the union, was an officer in the Scottish Parliament; he is likewise President of the Convention of Royal Burghs. In the city he has the precedency of all the great officers of state, and of the nobility, walking on the right of the King, or of his Majesty's Commissioners and Representative, and enjoys the privilege of having a sword and mace carried before him; the salary of the Lord Provost is 800 pound per annum. Besides the Provost there are four Magistrates, called Bailies, whose duty is nearly the same as the Aldermen in London; there is also an officer with the title of Dean of Guild, who has the charge of Public Buildings, and without whose warrant no house can be erected within the city; the other Members of the Council are a Treasurer, whose office is only nominal, (the money of the city being kept by a person with the title of Chamberlain) three Merchant, and two Trades' Councellors, and the fourteen Deacons of the incorporated trades, who with seven Members of the Council of the foregoing year, complete the Magistracy by which the city and suburbs are governed. The Merchant Company, from whom the principal part of the Town Council is chosen, were incorporated by a charter from King Charles II. on the 29th October, 1681; before this period, the Merchants of Edinburgh formed a Corporation called the Guildry, from which, for several ages, the Magistrates were solely elected, to the exclusion of the persons belonging to the crafts, or incorporated trades. By an Act of Parliament however, in the reign of James III. each of the incorporated Trades were empowered to chuse one of their number to vote in the election of officers for the government of the city, and by a decreet arbitral, dated the 22nd, April, 1588, in which King James VI. was himself umpire; the present constitution of the Burgh was finally established. The fourteen incorporated trades of Edinburgh, are 1st. Surgeons, who were incorporated first by the Magistrates on the 1st. July, 1505, the profession was, at its erection, conjoined with the Barbers, and both these occupations were exercised by the same persons, entitled Barber Surgeons, and it was provided in the charter of incorporation, that none of the members should take an apprentice without he can "baith wryte and reid," and the sole privilege was conferred upon them of making and selling aquavitae within the city. The charter of erection was confirmed by James IV. on the 13th October, 1506, and Queen Mary, to enable the Members of the Barber Surgeons to attend more closely on their patients and studies, did by her royal letters patent, of the 11th May, 1567, exempt them from attending juries, watching, &c. within the city and liberties of Edinburgh; these grants were confirmed by James VI. in 1613, as they were likewise by Parliament, on the 17th November, 1641; the incorporation continued in this state till the year 1722, when by a decree, the Court of Session entirely separated the Barbers from the Surgeons for ever; the Barbers are still obliged to register their apprentices along with those of their elevated colleagues. The Surgeons were again incorporated by a royal charter, dated the 14th March, 1778, under the title of the Royal College of Surgeons, their Hall is situated in Surgeon's-square.

2nd. The Goldsmiths who in former times were attached to the incorporation of Hammermen were erected into a distinct body, by the Magistrates, in the year 1581, this erection was afterwards confirmed by royal charter. Their hall is in south Bridge-street.

3d. The Skinners, whose charter was confirmed by the magistrates in the year 1630. Their Hall is in Skinners-close.

4th. The Farriers is a very ancient body, it is impossible to ascertain the time of the first incorporation, their original charter being lost.

5th. Hammermen were first erected into a body by the town council, in the year 1483, and since their separation from the goldsmiths in 1581, they have received an addition to the number of seventeen other branches of art, such as founders, coppersmiths, &c. &c, Their Hall is in the Cow-gate.

6th. and 7th. The Wrights and Masons, these two branches were first formed into a corporation by an Act of the Magistrates of Edinburgh in the year 1475, and their charter was confirmed by several successive sovereigns; at this time it consisted of these two professions only; but by a decree of the Court of Sessions in 1703 several others were added: the bow-makers, glaziers, plumbers, and upholsterers were attached to the masons, and to the wrights were added the painters, slaters, seivewrights, and coopers. Their Hall is in Burnet's-close.

8th, The Tailors. This society appears to have been a regular incorporated body before the year 1500; and they still retain many of their ancient privileges of superiority and direction of all the tailors within the suburbs of Edinburgh, and town of Leith. This body had the honour to receive a letter from King James VI. requesting the freedom of the incorporation for one Alexander Millar, gratis, on account of his "gude services in making and working the abulziements of oure awin persone." Their Hall is in Cowgate.

9th. The Bakers; the incorporation of this society is unknown, but circumstances cause it to be known that it was before the year 1522.

10th. The Fleshers is a very ancient body, but when erected is quite uncertain.

11th. The Cordiners, or Cordwainers, were by a charter from the Town Council, erected into an incorporated body, in the year 1449, and received the royal sanction of James VI. in 1598. Their Hall is in the Horse Wynd.

12th. The Weavers were formed into a fraternity by the magistrates, on the 31st. Jan. 1475.

13th. The Waukers were incorporated by the magistrates about the year 1500. The trade of Hatters was conjoined with them in 1672, and they form one incorporation.

14th. The Bonnet-makers, were anciently attached to the incorporation of Waukers, but were separated and erected into a distinct body by the magistrates in the year 1530; in the year 1684, the trade of a dyer was united to them.

The Candle-makers also form an incorporated trade, though they have not the privilege of sending a member to the Common Council of Edinburgh; they lost their privilege in the year 1582; however they possess all the other rights and privileges which are exercised by the incorporated trades. Such are the bodies from which the magistrates of Edinburgh are elected; the business of the city is managed by the ordinary council of twenty-five, the eight extraordinary deacons being only called on certain occasions, when their number is increased to thirty-three, the meeting is on this occasion called the extraordinary council. The ordinary council meet every Wednesday for the dispatch of business. To the town council are attached four advocates, under the name of assessors, who assist and direct them in their deliberations, in difficult or contested cases. The magistrates of Edinburgh hold a court in which are tried all criminal causes that occur within the city and liberties; they have a right to inflict arbitrary punishments, and the Lord Provost, in certain cases, has a jurisdiction in matters of life and death; but this jurisdiction is not now exercised, the magistrates only, in capital crimes, taking a precognition, or forwarding the business for the supreme courts.

The Bailie Court tries all causes for debt and civil trespass, that occur within the jurisdiction of the city. One Bailie only sits at a time, and being in office for one year, the four Bailies sit in this court each three months alternately; actions to any amount against an inhabitant of Edinburgh, can be judged in this court. The magistrates of the city also preside over a court for the recovery of petty debts, not exceeding 11s. 1¼d. sterling, except in the case of servants wages, which can be sued for to any amount; the whole amount of a process in this court does not exceed 8d. sterling. The Lord Provost is Lord Lieutenant of the city, and the four Bailies are Justices of the Peace, ex officio, within the liberties.

The trade of Edinburgh in a commercial view, is comparatively small, there are very few what may correctly be entitled general merchants in the city, most of them residing at Leith, although it would appear from the Edinburgh Directory that immense numbers of merchants reside in the town, as the generallity of shopkeepers in the smallest way from local usage invariably stile themselves merchants. There are however many shopkeepers of the greatest respectability, and who trade very extensively in their various branches; there are also some few manufactories in the silk and cotton way in the town and suburbs, two extensive distilleries, and many large and respectable breweries, the ale of which is remarkably fine. Many country gentlemen, and those who have made fortunes abroad, reside a great part of the year in the town, and by the expenditure of their incomes, keep up a brisk circulation of money in Edinburgh. A Merchant Company was instituted in Edinburgh by royal charter in the year 1681, and in 1786 a Chamber of Commerce was established by charter, for protecting and encouraging the commercial and manufacturing interests of the country; this institution has led the public attention to many useful objects, and has obtained many salutary regulations affecting the general commerce of Scotland.

The British Parliament, in the year 1727 passed an Act enabling his Majesty to appoint trustees for encouraging the fisheries and manufactures of Scotland, and for this purpose large sums provided by the Articles of Union, were lodged in their hands; the annual premiums given by the trustees, which amounted to about £4000, have had a great influence in diffusing industry, and exciting emulation among the Scottish manufacturers. Before the Union, Edinburgh had but a very limited trade; the unfortunate termination of the Darien expedition had a considerable share in damping the ardour of commercial enterprise; since that time, the trade of Edinburgh has been slowly extending, and the present enlargement of the harbour of Leith, and the erection of new and extensive docks, promise a further increase. The markets of Edinburgh afford all the necessaries and most of the luxuries of life in considerable variety; they are situated on the north side of the High-street, and occupy part of the declivity of the hill on which the old division of the city is built. The markets, to a stranger have a most singular appearance, they are disposed in terraces or platforms, descending from the vegetable markets, downwards to the fleshers markets, each communicating by flights of stone stairs, the first of the shambles is very handsome and lighted very brilliantly at night with coal gas. The fish market is contiguous to the lower butcher market, it is commodious and well supplied with almost every description of eatable fish.

The population of Edinburgh is within these few years considerably encreased, and is at present estimated at least 120,000 inhabitants.

LEITH.

LEITH is the sea port town of Edinburgh, but at what period it was first built, cannot be determined with accuracy. In the Charter of erection of Holyrood-house, founded by David the 1st. in the year 1128, it is mentioned by the name of Inverleith. In 1329, Robert the 1st. granted to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, the harbour of Leith, and its Mills; and in 1398, they acquired all the other rights and privileges of it by purchase from Logan Restalrig. In the year 1485, the Magistrates, (to prevent the inhabitants of Leith from rivalling them in trade) passed an Act, ordaining, that no merchant in Edinburgh, should presume to take an inhabitant of Leith into partnership, under a penalty of forty shillings Scots, and deprivation of the freedom of the city for one year; and also that none of the revenues of the city of Edinburgh, should be farmed to any inhabitant of Leith. The town of Leith, shared in the general calamity which desolated Scotland, in the year 1541; and when the French troops came to the assistance of Mary of Guise, then Regent of Scotland, they took possession of Leith, and fortified it on behalf of the Queen, who erected it into a Burgh of Barony. The inhabitants purchased the superiority of their town from Restalrig, for £3000 Scots. They likewise received promises of an extension of their privileges, by its erection into a Royal Burgh; but the Queen dying before this could be accomplished, Francis and Mary, sold the superiority of it to the citizens of Edinburgh, for the sum of 10,000, Marks Scots. In the year 1560, the French troops returned home. Shortly after the council of the Kingdom, to prevent any danger to the liberties of the country from the introduction of foreign soldiers into the kingdom, ordered the Magistrates of Edinburgh, to demolish the fortifications. Leith however was again fortified by Oliver Cromwell, who built a citadel with five bastions, which was nearly destroyed at the restoration.

In the year 1779, Paul Jones made his appearance in the Frith of Forth, when a battery of nine guns was erected a little to the westward of the citadel, for the defence of the harbour and shipping; this battery, is now the head quarters of the Royal Artillery, in North Britain. Two companies are stationed here under the command of a Field Officer. The Barracks are capable of containing 350 men, and 150 horses. The harbour is besides defended by a Martello Tower, rising from the sea, about three quarters of a mile from the pier. About the beginning of the last century, the harbour was improved by the Magistrates, by extending a stone pier into the sea. In the year 1777, they made another improvement by the erection of a stone quay, towards its westside, they also constructed two wet docks, and three graving or dry docks, all being of excellent materials, and finished in the most substantial manner. The building of these five docks, cost £200,000, a large wet Dock, is about to be made to the west, which is to be 500 yards long, and 100 wide.

Leith is two miles distant from Edinburgh, situated at the eastern extremity of a fine spacious road, called Leith-walk, which runs in a direct line to the town. This beautiful walk, has recently been nearly covered on both sides with houses, many of which are very elegant, giving it the appearance of an extensive street, rather than a carriage road.

The water of Leith, divides the town into two parts, which from their situations, are named South and North Leith, they communicate by three draw bridges. The new streets in the south and east, are finished in the modern taste, the houses are built of fine stone, and are very splendid. The Exchange Buildings, are in the Grecian style of architecture; and ornamented in front with fine Ionic columns. They contain a superb Assembly-room, Library, and Reading-room, a Sale-room, and a Coffee-room, the whole is a grand structure, and a beautiful ornament to the town. The Custom-House is also a spacious edifice, of the neatest modern style, it stands on the north side of the harbour, and contains the Excise Office, with the most complete internal conveniences and arrangement for the general despatch of business. Leith Bank, is another handsome modern erection, in Bernard's-street, it was begun in the year 1805, and finished the year following, it consists of two floors, and a circular projection in front, ornamented with four handsome Ionic colums, and three pilasters of the same order on each side; a dome rises from the top; a branch of the British Linen Company, and the Commercial Banking Company, are also established in Leith. The Trinity House, built in the year 1817, is an elegant building in the Grecian style of architecture, it stands on the west side of the Kirkgate. Opposite to it, is King James's Hospital, which was founded by the Kirk Session of South Leith, in the year 1614, for the reception of old women.

On the south west of Leith, in a fine open space called the Links, is situated the Grammar School, a commodious neat building, with a spire and clock, the rooms for the different classes are elegant and spacious. In the eastern extremity of the Links are excellent baths, called Seafield Baths, fitted up with every convenience in the most handsome style, their erection cost £8000, a good hotel is attached to them. North Leith contains a very handsome church, in the Grecian style of architecture, surmounted by a lofty elegant spire, the first part of which consists of three compartments of the Doric, the second of the Ionic, and the third of the Corinthian orders, the remainder of the spire is fluted, its height from the ground to the top of the cross being 158 feet, the proportions of the handsome portico, are taken from the little Ionic temple of the Ilyssus, near Athens. The expence of building this church was £9000, and it will accommodate 2000 persons. The church of south Leith is a very ancient Gothic building, it stands east of the Kirkgate; at a little distance from this church is a commodious Chapel of Ease. The charitable institutions of this commercial port are most respectably supported, and evince the humanity of its spirited and generous inhabitants. Leith is governed by a Baron Bailie, with the title of Admiral, appointed by the Magistrates of Edinburgh, under him are three resident bailies, who hold baron courts for the punishment of petty offences. There are four incorporations in the town, viz. the mariners, maltmen, traders and traffickers, the first including masters of ships and sailors, the second maltsters and brewers, the third coopers, bakers, smiths, tailors, wrights, weavers, &c. &c. and the fourth merchants, &c. there is also a merchants company, and a number of shipping companies in Leith, to whom belong the management of the smacks that sail between this port and London, these vessels are fitted up in a style of splendour and convenience not equalled by any of their size in Europe. The trade of Leith is extensive, and carried on with Russia, Denmark, Sweden, Hamburgh, Ostend and Holland. The merchants of this port also trade extensively to the Mediterranean, West Indies and America, and many vessels are employed in the whale fishery. Manufactures of various kinds are carried on in Leith, there are several very extensive of flint glass and bottles; the distilation of malt spirits occupies several large capitals; ship building also employs a great number of workmen, and the manufacture of sail cloth and cordage is extensive; there are besides, sugar refining houses, and large saw mills are erected on the water of Leith.

The streets in the old parts are narrow, and the houses mean in appearance; the irregularity of the old town would render any attempt at a description of the relative situation of the streets, totally unintelligible to a stranger, but the new streets are spacious and elegant, and the houses are finished in a modern and very tasteful style. A little to the west ward is the populous fishing village of Newhaven, whence the markets of Edinburgh and Leith are principally supplied with fish. Many handsome steam boats sail daily from this place to Stirling, and the intermediate places on the Frith

The population has encreased considerably since the last census, and may now be estimated at 25,000.

George Newton, Post Master.—Letters are sent from Leith to Edinburgh at six in the morning elevenin the forenoon, four in the afternoon, and seven in the evening.

ABERDEEN.

THE city of Aberdeen is situated 128 miles north-east from Edinburgh, and is the capital of the County to which it gives name. It is a very ancient town, and was known to the Romans at the early period of the eighth and last campaign of Julius Agricola, about the 84th year of the Christian era. Antecedent to this remote period all relating to any history of Aberdeen, or its origin, is involved in obscurity, and for many ages after no records appear to afford any authentic accounts relating to this city. Aberdeen is probably among the earliest of the boroughs in Scotland found entitled to any royal mark of distinction, and from various circumstances occurring in history, it is reasonably to be presumed that at a very early period it was comparatively respectable as a place of some little commerce, as far back as the year 1153, it seems to have been known as such to the Normans, and in Macpherson's treatise on commerce, it is observed that in the year 1179, Esteyn, one of the joint kings of that country, landed and pillaged the town, in the course of a piratical cruise along the British coast.

In early times Aberdeen was frequently honoured by the presence of royalty; and it appears in the early part of King William's reign he erected an edifice for his occasional residence here, it was situated in the lower side of the town, near the east end of what is called the Green, it was dignified with the title of Palace, this edifice he afterwards bestowed on the Monks of the Holy Trinity, who were about that time introduced into Scotland.

The first charter that was granted to Aberdeen is supposed to be about the year 1179, by King William, which confirmed to the burgesses the power of enjoying their free trade of merchandize, as they pleased, and when they pleased, as freely, quietly, fully and honourably, as their ancestors enjoyed their trade, in the time of Malcolm his grandfather; this charter was dated at Perth. King William afterwards granted two other charters to his burgesses of Aberdeen, whereby their goods and chattels were declared to be exempted from tolls and customs in all markets and fairs within the kingdom. Both these charters were dated at Aberdeen 28th August, are now in a state of good preservation, and have the great seal of Scotland in green wax appended to each. From these documents and other historic accounts it is beyond all doubt that trade and commerce was a prevailing pursuit at that time, and which has progressively extended itself to this period, by the industry and enterprising spirit so long characteristic to the inhabitants; it is now the third city in Scotland in population, rank and opulence, and may justly be called the Scottish northern capital. The port of Aberdeen is particularly well situated for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of trade with America and the West Indies. Several Whale-fishing Companies of great respectability are established here, who employ about twenty ships in that trade. On the north side of the entry to the harbour, a fine stone pier extends two thousand feet into the sea, the entire being composed of granite, many of the stones of the outside walls are upwards of three tons weight, with dressed beds and generally four feet long, the whole of this grand piece of masonry forms one solid mass, it is an improvement of the most beneficial importance to the shipping interests of the port. On the opposite side of the entrance of the harbour, is a breakwater, which projects from the land about eight hundred feet rather to the northward, extending partly across the channel of the harbour, and is a great protection from the violence of a storm from the south-east. In the interior of the harbour a new wharf upwards of nine hundred feet in length, running along the south side of what is termed the Futtie, has been completed, and is an excellent accommodation for the shipping. A fine canal runs from the Quay, a length of eighteen miles to the river Don. This canal was opened in the year 1807, and cost £60,000, it is a good width and proportionably deep, and is highly advantageous to the trade of the country, and considered beneficial to the proprietors. The principal importations to Aberdeen consist of wheat and flour, barley, rum, geneva, brandy, French, Spanish, and Portuguese wines; English and Scotch coals, wool, salt, tobacco, flax, timber, &c. &c. The exports are oats, meal, salmon, ling, stockings, woollen cloth, linens, tapes, threads, stones. &c. &c. There are many very important establishments in, and in the immediate vicinity of the town, such as very large Cotton Mills, Linen and Woollen Manufactories, extensive Thread and Tape Works, Cotton Printing and Bleach Works, Paper Mills, Iron Foundries, Ship Building, Breweries, &c. all combining to render employment to a great share of the working classes, and we are happy in observing that very few of that part of the population of Aberdeen appear to lack employ, where their exertions are excited by industry to obtain it. The first introduction of the cotton manufacture was in the year 1779, and since that time its progress has been very rapid, one house at present employs upwards of 600 work people. The art of cotton printing is also brought to great perfection here, extensive print and bleachfields are situated in the neighbourhood; various other manufactures in branches for domestic uses, peculiar to Scotland, are industriously pursued in the town.

The Banking Companies of this city, are of the greatest respectability, they consist of the Aberdeen Banking Company. The Commercial Banking Company, a branch of the Bank of Scotland, a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and a branch of the Exchange and deposit Bank of Edinburgh, also an agent for the British Linen Co's. Bank. These Banks all issue their own notes which are negociated through most parts of Scotland, and are paid and received in preference to Bank of England notes, which are with difficulty passed, except at the Banks. The Aberdeen Banking Co. was established on the 1st. January, 1767; before that period, there was no Bank in the town, one was attempted to be established some few years before, but did not succeed. The Commercial Bank of Aberdeen was established about thirty two years since, and is the other established Banking Company in Aberdeen, [the other three banks being branches of establishments in Edinburgh] it was instituted by a number of citizens, who were engaged in commerce and manufactures, it has we hear, proved beneficial to the public, and greatly tended to facilitate trade, and also productive of advantage to the partners. The present cashier is Alexander Chivas, Esq. who has filled that respectable office, since the year 1800. The fishing trade generally is very extensive, and may be named in three classes, viz. the whale fishing, the salmon fishing, and the white fishing. The salmon that are caught in the Don and Dee, has long been celebrated for quality and abundance. The white fishing consists of catching haddocks, cod, turbot, hallibut, &c. &c. of which there is generally an abundant supply in the market; much praise is due to the magistrates of the city for the encouragement they have given to the people who are employed in white fishing; a neat and commodious town is lately erected for the accommodation of the fishermen and their families, it is situated near the mouth of the harbour called Foot-dee, and must be of the highest importance to this class of people, as it renders them every possible convenience to their pursuit, besides comfort to themselves and families, and the whole appears a most judicious arrangement and worthy of imitation in other sea ports.

There are seven incorporated trades in the city of Aberdeen, viz. 1st the Hammermen, 2nd the Bakers, who were recognized as a company as early as the year 1458. 3d. The Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause from the Magistrates, Council and Community on the 5th August, 1527. 4th. The Tailors, supposed to have been incorporated about the year 1511. Their annual revenue at present is about £500 sterling, and from the nature of their funds it is likely to considerably increase, the whole of their income is distributed among twenty-two decayed members, twelve widows, and ten orphans. 5th. The Shoe Makers, who were instituted previous to the year 1484. Their funds are productive of a handsome revenue, which is distributed among twenty-seven indigent members, besides widows and orphans. 6th. The Weavers, who are a very ancient company; this corporation only consists of thirty members, and their revenue arising from their funds is annually distributed among thirteen decayed brethren, and widows and orphans. 7th. The Fleshers and Butchers, who were originally dealers in fish as well as flesh, but in the year 1518, they were prohibited, by an act of the town council, from exercising more than one trade, it is an ancient body, and were recognized, in the year 1444, by an act of Council prescribing them salutary regulations for conducting their trades: the members belonging to this corporation are twenty-nine. These seven trades are incorporated into one body; one Convener presides over the whole, but each has a Deacon and other officers, for its government, and management of the affairs of the trade. The Society of Advocates also form a body corporate, confirmed by a charter of his late Majesty, in the year 1774, erecting the members into a body corporate and politic, and confirming all their former rights and privileges. In the year 1799 they obtained another charter, in more ample and extensive terms, conferring upon them the honour of the title of President and Society of Advocates in Aberdeen. By these charters, they are capable in law, of acquiring and enjoying lands, tenements, and hereditaments of every denomination, and to sue or be sued, under that name and title, in any Court or Courts whatever. There is also a Marine Society, being an association of masters of ships, under the title of the "Shipmasters' and Mariners' Box," for the purpose of establishing a fund for the pecuniary relief of decayed, indigent mariners, and their widows and orphans. The members of this society obtained a charter from his late Majesty in the year 1801, confirming all their ancient priviliges, and also erecting them into a body corporate, under the title of the President and Society of Shipmasters of Aberdeen, it is a most laudable Institution, and they distribute yearly upwards of 600*l.* sterling from their funds.

There are several other societies which are very ancient, and still supported with great respectability. There are also two clubs, one is called the honourable, which is composed of noblemen and gentlemen of the town, for the purpose of promoting social intercourse, and also contributing pecuniary aid to the distressed, each member pays £2 sterling yearly to the club for that charitable purpose. The other club is termed the Golf-club; Golf is a game peculiar to Scotland, and from which this club derives its name. It is a favourite amusement and is generally played on a green near a town which is called the Links, it is played with a small ball composed of compressed feathers and covered with leather, which weighs about one ounce and a half. The parties who play may be one or two on a side and they strike the ball with a neat slender elastic club about four feet long, which is made heavy at the butt end by the addition of lead, when the ball is dextrously struck it will fly a great distance, and the game is gained by the party who puts the ball into a certain number of holes, with the fewest number of strokes.

The Universities are very ancient Seminaries of learning, particularly the King's College, which is situated at Old Aberdeen. This was first instituted in the year 1494, by a Bull of Pope Alexander the VI. dated at Rome, February 10th. The original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the College. The Library, to which all the students have free access, is a very valuable collection of books;—the Museum, also for their use, is furnished with a valuable collection of Greek and Roman coins, specimens in mineralogy and zoology, fine engravings, and a good assortment of most things interesting in natural history. The students are all obligated to wear a scarlet cloth gown, with hanging sleeves, but are not obliged to reside within the college. The Marischall College and University is situated in Broad-street, and was founded and endowed by George, Earl Marischall of Scotland, by charter dated the 2d day of April, 1583. This College has no public connexion with the King's College at Old Aberdeen, but the students wear the same sort of gown, with the difference of a red velvet collar. The Marischall College possesses an extensive library, and a Museum which contains an interesting collection of specimens in the various departments of Natural History. There is also an Observatory attached to the College, which is furnished with a variety of very valuable instruments. Numerous persons who have received their education at this University have been distinguished by their literary reputation. It would occupy a space far beyond the limits designed to a work of this description, were we to enter into minuteness relating to this ancient city, but it is most certain there have been natives whose learning, intelligence and genius would do honour to any age or country.

In the arts and science of mathematics, many men of distinguished talent, may be mentioned. The name of Gregory will be long revered by the admirers of natural genius, and while he was living his fame was spread over Europe, in a publication announcing his invention of the reflecting telescope, which seems destined to be brought to the greatest degree of perfection, by a Mr. John Ramage also a native of this city; he is we find by trade a currier and leather merchant, but whose natural talent and genius in the different branches of natural philosophy, particularly optics, has led him to the construction of philosophical instruments. He has made considerable improvements on the reflecting telescope, the specula of which he finishes in a superior manner by an art peculiar to himself, he has constructed several telescopes and has lately finished one of very high power twenty-one feet focus, the apparatus which is simple and ingeniously contrived, that this ponderous instrument can be used as easily as a telescope of the smallest size, he is at present constructing one of much larger dimensions.

In Aberdeen there are about thirty places for public worship; the most conspicuous are the established churches of Scotland. The east and west churches are called the Towns, and are fine Gothic buildings. St. Paul's Chapel is situated on the west side of the Gallow-gate, and is a handsome building. St. Andrew's Chapel is also a neat structure, and the Roman Catholic Chapel is attended by a very genteel congregation. A fine church called the English Church, has been lately built in King-street, it is in the Gothic style of architecture, and is a great embellishment to the part of the town in which it is erected.

The municipal government is invested in a body corporate, consisting of a Provost and four Baillies, &c. and a most excellent Police establishment, consisting of a board of thirteen Commissioners, who appear to pay every attention to their public duties. The town is extremely well lighted and paved, and supplied with abundance of excellent water; and no town can be better protected from nocturnal depredations, or the streets kept more free from filth. The Police Commissioners cannot interfere with the rights or jurisdiction of the Magistrates as a Corporation, nor can they touch on the rights and properties of individuals, but in every respect their business has the appearance of being conducted with propriety.

The city is pleasantly situated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea; the beach presenting a beautiful even surface of fine hard sand. When the tide is receding a person may walk for many miles along the shore viewing the sublimity of a great expance of the German Ocean, which from the town has the grandest effect, and adds the greatest beauty to its picturesque situation. The new streets are spacious, uniform, and very elegant; the houses are all built of a most beautiful stone called granite, which sparkles with a richness peculiar to that description of stone which Aberdeen only produces. A noble street called Union-street running to the south is particularly handsome. At the extremity of this fine street is an elegant bridge called Union bridge, it consists of one grand arch which expands across, what is termed the Denburn, and connects an opposite eminence, where are also inclining to the south many elegant houses. Marischall-street, which descends eastward to the Quays, is another handsome modern street, in which is the Theatre, a neat building. King-street, leading to the west, is an elegant spacious street, in which is erected, nearly fronting the English Church, the Surgeons' Hall, an elegant structure with a projecting Portico, supported by four massy pillars: this edifice with the church displays an air of grandeur to this part of the town.

The Exchange News Room, is situated in Union-street, it is an elegant Room and furnished with London and Provincial Papers, Magazines, &c. all respectable strangers have access to this room gratis, and its interior arrangements are highly creditable to the managers. There are lately established some excellent Baths by Mr. Walker of Aberdeen, and no place in the kingdom affords better accommodations for sea bathing, the water which flows from the German Ocean is extremely pure, and the beach most delightfully calculated for the purpose.

Old Aberdeen is situated about a mile distant, running nearly northward in one continued street. In former times it was the Episcopal See, but is now only celebrated for its College and University. The Cathedral is also in Old Aberdeen, which is a plain Gothic building, it was originally a very extensive structure, a small part, comparatively, is now standing. This ancient town is now deprived of all commerce, but it has its seperate government and magistrates. The population of Old Aberdeen is about one thousand. Fairs on the last Thursday in April, N. S. and 3rd Tuesday and Wednesday in October, O. S.

The population of Aberdeen including the old town is estimated at 40,000 and upwards. There is only one Market day, which is every Friday, and is a very large Market called Timber Market, and one yearly fair the last Thursday in August, N.S. Two Newspapers are published weekly, viz. the Chronicle on Saturdays, and the Aberdeen Journal on Wednesdays.

Post Office.—Nether Kirk-gate.—Alex. Dingwall, Esq. AIR, OR AYR.

THE borough of Ayr, according to the modern, or Air, according to the ancient, and perhaps more correct orthography, is of considerable antiquity, its charter having been granted by William, sirnamed the Lion, about the close of the 12th century. Its boundaries, as described by this charter, are the rivers Ayr and Doon, on the north and south, Lochfergus on the east, and the sea, or the Frith of Clyde, on the west. Here the heroic exploits of Sir William Wallace began, and here Edward the first fixed one of his most powerful garrisons. Its population by the last census, in 1811, was found to be 5560 inhabitants. At present it may well be reckoned to exceed 7000. And if the amount of the inhabitants of the parishes, which are situated contignous to the old town, be admitted into the calculation, may then be considered to contain a population of about 14,000. The trade of the port, consists chiefly in the exportation of coals to Ireland; and of the importation of timber and iron from the Baltic and America. The coasting trade is principally carried on by regular packets to Liverpool, Greenock, and Leith. Manufactures have not been carried on here to any great extent. The principal are those of leather and soap. Ship building has been tolerably successful, on the north side of the river, where vessels, often exceeding 300 tons burden, are constructed of approved workmanship.

Here are some public buildings and institutions deserving of notice. An Academy was founded by subscription, in 1798, in which the following branches of education are taught. The English, French, Italian, Latin and Greek languages; Writing, Drawing, Arithmetic, Geography, Navigation, Mathematics, Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. This Institution is conducted by a rector and five masters, with assistants, the whole being under the control of certain directors, appointed by a charter from the crown, by which the Seminary is constituted a body corporate. Its success has surpassed expectation; the youths taught in it yearly, being about 500 in number. A subscription Library, consisting now of above 3000 volumes, was established a good many years ago, and has proved a source of much valuable information to its numerous subscribers. A small, but handsome Theatre, has been lately erected for the occasional amusement of the inhabitants. On its boards, Mr. Kean, Miss O'Neill, and other performers of distinguished merit, have displayed their powers. In the immediate vicinity of the town, is a well formed Race-course, where a week's amusement annually is afforded to the surrounding inhabitants, of whom there is often a very considerable assemblage. An extensive Barracks was erected during the late war, at an expence of about £30,000. Government of late advertised the buildings for sale, but no purchaser has yet offered. They might be used for some useful branch of manufacture. Building has of late, made rapid progress here. A large square of very handsome houses, is now nearly finished, one side of which is formed by an elegant structure, now erecting, at the expence of the borough and county, being a Court-house, County-hall, and apartments for records and public offices. In the rear of which, are two well constructed Prisons for debtors and felons, the whole arranged in such a manner, as to afford every necessary accommodation. The expence is estimated at £27,000.

There are now few remains of antiquity. The Tower of the ancient Church of St. John, of some celebrity, still exists. Around this old building, was erected, during the protectorate of Cromwell, a regular Fort, some of the bastions of which are still entire. The old bridge, ("auld brig") is understood to have been built in the reign of Alexander II. It is now only used as a foot passage, a new bridge, possessing some degree of elegance, having been lately erected a little further down the river.

There are two Churches of the establishment, the cure of which is served by two Collegiate Clergymen, officiating alternately in each. A Church of relief, as it is termed, has been lately built by subscription, and two congregations of Methodists and Moravians, each of which have a Chapel, are the only other sectaries. The poor are well provided for, from funds arising from lands and donations; and many charitable Societies are formed for the relief of the indigent. Ayr has produced some persons of eminence in literature and genius. It was the birth-place of the celebrated Chevalier Ramsay, author of Cyrus' travels, and some philosophical writings, and who was also the friend of the excellent Fenelon. Som of the Chevaliers relations are still resident here. But the borough may be more proud in having given birth to Robert Burns, a poet of extraordinary genius. His poems have gone through numerous editions, and a neat duodecimo volume of his works, recently published by Wilson and Co. gives some pieces and biographical sketches, not hitherto in the possession of the public. To his memory, a very elegant monument is now erecting on the banks of the Doon, amidst objects and scenery, which had often inspired his muse. In the new Market-street in a niche, is placed a statue of the patriotic "Wallace." We cannot give much praise to the execution of this figure, as the second Commandment has not by any means been outraged, in the display of this Pigmy Giant. The markets, on Tuesday and Friday, in general are well supplied. The finest salmon abound in the two rivers, and other fish, in great variety, are caught on the sea coast, affording not only an ample supply to the inhabitants, but occasionally to the market of Glasgow.

Two Newspapers are published weekly, having both an extensive circulation. Here is a public Coffee-room, or News-room, supplied with a variety of English and Scotch papers, and other periodical publications deemed interesting.

The situation of the town is dry, pleasant and healthful. The lands of the borough, betwixt the two rivers, (which are above two miles distant from each other) are entirely flat, forming a very extensive plain which appears richly diversified with gentlemen's seats and villas, commanding the prospect of the fine expanse of sea, comprehended within the Frith, with its numerous islands and promontories, and the high Volcanic mountains of Arran; the whole of which present to the eye, a scene, which may be termed equally, sublime and picturesque.

Four fairs, are held here annually, viz. the 1st, Tuesday in Jannary, O. S. last Tuesday in Jnne, O. S. September 29th. and 1st. Tuesday in Oct. O. S.

ANNAN,

THE capital of Annandale, situated on the left bank of the river of the same name, is one of the most ancient burghs in Scotland, and in conjunction with Dumfries, Kircudbright, Lochmaben and Sanquhar sends one member to parliamant. Annan was probably a Roman station, and the Veromum of the geography of Ravenna. It seems to have been held by the Britons after the departure of the Romans, till they were subdued by the Saxons of the Northumbrian kingdom, when it came to the Scotch. It afterwards became a principal port, and was granted with the territory of Annandale, and the port of Lochmaben to the ancestors of Robert Bruce, by some of whom a castle was erected, of which there are still some remains. By the accession of the Bruce family to the throne it became a Royal Burgh. Upon the death of David 2nd, in 1371, this castle, Lochmaben, and the Lordship of Annandale came to Thomas Randolph, earl of Murray, and went with his sister Agnes to the Dunbars, earls of March; after their forfeiture it went to the Douglasses who also lost it by similar conduct, and then having come to Alexander Duke of Albany, he, for rebelling against his brother, king James 3rd, and plundering the fair of Lochmaben, in 1484, also forfeited it. Since that period it continued in the hands of the king, and became the great key of the western border. Many of the inhabitants of Annan are fishermen; and vessels of 250 tons can come within half a mile of the town, and of 60 tons as high as the bridge, which consists of five arches defended by a gateway. Annan has been of late much improved by new streets and buildings; at its east end is a fine new church, and on the west are the town house and market places. A manufactory for carding and spinning has been established at this place, which has greatly added to the prosperity and population of the town, which has some trade in wine, and exports annually between 20 and 30,000 bushels of corn. The revenue of the burgh arising from fisheries, tolls & feu duties, is about £300 per annum. The parish of Annan is about eight miles long and from one to three broad; the surface is generally level and the soil fertile. Potatoes are much cultivated here, and they are found to be of so excellent a quality as to be much sought after for seed. The river Annan intersects this parish and forms an excellent harbour at its influx into the Frith. The sides of the river and the elevated parts of the parish are adorned with tracts of planting. Limestone, granite and freestone are abundant; the population of the burgh and parish are about 4000. The town is governed by a Provost, Bailies, Councillors, a Treasurer and Dean of Guild.

Market day Thursday. Fairs 1st Thursday in Feb. 1st Thurs. in May; 3rd Thursday in August; 1st Tues. after 29th Sept. 3rd Thurs. in Oct. and 1st Tues. after 11th of Nov.

John Pool.—Post Master.—Arrival of the Mails. From the south, every evening, about six o'clock, and from the north, and Ireland about half past one in the morning, and dispatched immediately on arrival.

DALKEITH.

A CONSIDERABLE town and parish in the county of Mid Lothian, beautifully situated on the banks of the rivers North and South Esk, which entirely encircle the town. The surrounding country is enchantingly diversified with hill and dale, wood and water; at a short distance from the town stands Dalkeith House, the noble mansion of the late Duke of Buccleuch and Queensbury, surrounded by stately forest trees, which comes close up to the east end of the town, adjoining to which, is the Porter's Lodge, and an entry into the park, through gates of wrought iron. The High-street is very spacious, and affords an excellent market for corn and meal, two days in the week. Monday is the market day for meal, and Thursday for corn, at the latter, the average quantity of grain sold, is nearly 3000 bolls per day, which is all purchased in the short space of a quarter of an hour, and what renders it a more pleasant thing to trade in this market is, that, however vast the purchase of grain, all is paid for in ready money; the varous samples brought to the market, are taken in sacks from carts, &c, ranged in rows, in a central and wide part of the town, but not a sack mouth is opened, until a signal is given for that purpose, which is, the ring of a bell, all, in an instant is activity, and the whole business of the market is over in the time above mentioned. Besides the Parish Church, which is plain and antiquated, there are places of worship for Burghers, Anti-burghers, Methodists, &c. a Grammar School, a Charity Workhouse, a School for the education of children of both sexes, on the Madras system. A Tolbooth, in the front of which is a tablet, bearing two Ducal Coronets, with the letters E. C. F. R. M.L. B. 1648 : nor is Dalkeith deficient in a flesh shambles, which market, is plentifully supplied with meat of excellent quality. In this town are the stables belonging to the Caledonian Hunt, and the hounds are kept at a short distance therefrom.

Dalkeith is governed by a Baillie ; and a court is held here by the Justices of the Peace for the county, on the last Thursday in each month. Its annual fairs are in May, first Thursday after Rutherlin and third Tuesday in October. Population about 5000.

Post Office, White Hart-st.—James Morison, Post Master.—Horse Mail from Edinburgh, arrives at ten in the morning, and departs three in the afternoon. Carlisle Mail arrives at three in the afternoon ; the bags containing letters to all parts of the West, are made up at eight at night, and dispatched at six in the morning.

DUMFRIES

Is a Royal Burgh, and the county town of the shire, distant 72 miles from Edinburgh, 28 from Kirkcudbright, and 39 from Carlisle; it is situated on the left bank of the river Nith, over which are two bridges, forming a communication with Maxwell Town, which is a burgh of barony, and a populous suburb of Dumfries: about nine miles below the town, the Nith discharges itself into the Solway Frith. In the 12th century, Dumfries was a place of some consideration; it was in the church of this town, that Robert Bruce killed the traitor Cumine, who had betrayed his country to the English; a bridge over the Nith, some religious houses, and a castle, with the fishery of the river, contributed at that period to form it into a town. During the time that England and Scotland were separate kingdoms, Dumfries was a place of strength, where the Scots borderers retired from the effects of reciprocal aggressions. Since the commencement of the last century it has made gradual advances in wealth and population. The principal street extends three fourths of a mile, the whole length of the town, in a direction parrellel with the Nith, towards the centre of the town, this street is nearly 100 feet in width; besides this there are a number of other streets of inferior note. Dumfries has two handsome churches of the establishment. In the cemetry attached to one of which is placed a monument, or rather cenotaph, to the memory of Burns. The traveller will feel both surprize and melancholy satisfaction, in visiting this receptacle for the manes of the departed, for there is not perhaps in the three Kingdoms a church-yard possessing so numerous and magnificent a collection of tombs, columns and pedestals of excellent workmanship, as this of Dumfries, which is in fact, "the Abbey" of this part of Scotland. In a retired street, but in competent circumstances, lives the widow of the author of "the Cotter's Saturday Night" and she who has been celebrated as "My bonny Jean" still lives to witness the increasing admiration bestowed on the works of her dear "Rab," and the press still teeming with new editions of them. Additional to the two churches previously named, there are also a large Catholic, an Episcopal, a Burgher, an Antiburgher, an Independent, a Relief, a Methodist and Missionary Churches and Meeting Houses. Here is a good Town House containing the Courts of Justice and Public Offices, a new Prison on an improved plan, a good public School built by subscription, an Infirmary, an Hospital and a House of Correction. Of the two bridges over the Nith previously named, the more ancient one of eight arches is supposed to have been built upwards of 500 years, the other is a spacious and elegant one recently built. The industry of the place is exerted chiefly for the accommodation of the inhabitants and the circumjacent country. The principal manufactures are those of hats, with some cotton and woollen goods, baskets and wicker toys. The Nith at full tide gives the advantages of a port, and much shipping business is done in the export of grain and potatoes coastwise, and also some dozen vessels in the American trade. Here is a good modern building erected for the use of the incorporation of trades; not far distant from the town, may be seen the remains of an Abbey, termed "the College"; also Lencluden and Sweethearts' Abbeys, the latter now termed the new Abbey; a more particular description of which, than our limits will allow, may be found in "Grose's Antiquities". Dumfries is governed by a Provost, three Baillies, a Dean of Guild, a Treasurer, twelve Merchant and seven Trade Councillors, and joins with Lochmaben, Annan, Sanquhar and Kirkcudbright, in sending a Member to Parliament. The Circuit Court of Justiciary, for the county of Dumfries, and the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright is held in the town twice a year. Dumfries is perhaps a place of more gaiety and elegance than any other town of its size in Scotland; the inhabitants are fond of polite amusements, they have a well attended Theatre, a News and Reading Room, Public Subscription Library, and regular Assemblies. The advantages of a healthy situation, a regular communication with the northern and western parts of Scotland, of excellent schools and public amusements, invite many of the neighbouring gentry to spend a considerable portion of the year in it. The Dumfries and Galloway Hunt, meet here annually, and occasionally the Caledonian Hunt. King James VI. presented to the trades of Dumfries, a "silver gun" (as it is termed) with his royal licence, to shoot for it every year; at this festival the different corporations are collected in bands, under their respective standards, and proceeding by seniority are marched to the appointed exhibition ground, where the gun is after some hours firing, awarded to the best marksman; the day is then concluded with social entertainments. Dumfries gives the title of Earl to the chief of the family of Crichton. The population of the town and suburbs is estimated at 15,000. Fairs are held in Dumfries on the first Wednesday in February, O. S. May 26th, or Wednesday following; September 25th, or Wednesday following, and November 22nd, or Wednesday following; market days are Wednesday and Friday.

TIME OF THE ARRIVAL OF THE MAILS AT DUMFRIES.

Post Office. Robert Threshie, Post Master.—The Mails from Edinburgh, Glasgow, London and Carlisle, arrive at Dumfries at half past eight, P. M. and the Mail from Port Patrick, arrives at Dumfries at twelve at night.

TIME OF THE DISPATCH OF THE MAILS FROM DUMFRIES.

The Mails for Edinburgh and Glasgow are dispatched from Dumfries at half past five, A. M.; the Mail for Port Patrick is dispatched from Dumfries at about nine P. M. and the Mails for London and Carlisle are dispatched from Dumfries at half past twelve at night.

DUNBAR

Is centrically situated between Edinburgh and Berwick-upon-Tweed, 27 miles distant from each, in the county of Haddington; was erected into a royal burgh about the middle of the fourteenth century, by a charter from David II. all the privileges of which it still enjoys. It stands on a gentle eminence, at the bottom of the small bay, or harbour of Dunbar. The venerable ruins of the castle are justly esteemed a remarkable piece of antiquity, the date of its erection is entirely unknown, though it is mentioned as early as 858 when it was burnt by Kenneth King of Scotland; it has been very extensive, built upon several rocks, within sea-mark, and before the use of artillery, was deemed impregnable. It was always considered a place of great national importance, as the key of Scotland on the east border; it has often been besieged, and often bravely defended; here Edward of England took refuge after his total defeat at Bannockburn, and to this castle Bothwell fled, and left Mary, after the unfortunate battle of Carberry Hill. The castle was afterwards demolished by order of the Scottish Parliament. Dunbar is a parish, in which is part of Down-hill, famous for the encampment of General Leslie, and the Scottish army, the night before their defeat; this town has a suburb, within the royalty, called Belhaven, near which the harbour was originally built: the east pier of the present harbour was begun during the protectorship of Cromwell, who granted £300 towards defraying the expence, yet it is of difficult access; there is, however, a good dry dock, also a graving dock; great numbers of its inhabitants depend for subsistence on its fishery, which is most abundant. The principal street is broad and spacious, and the houses which are mostly of recent erection, have an elegant appearance; at the west end of High-street stands Dunbar House, the seat of the Right Honourable James Maitland, Earl of Lauderdale. The town is well supplied with soft water, which is brought two miles by means of leaden pipes; and the face of the country round about is very pleasant, rising gradually from the coast, which is generally low and sandy; from the back grounds the prospect is extensive and delightful, exhibiting a variety of striking objects: viz. North Berwick Law, and Tantallan castle; the Bass; the Isle of May; the Frith of Forth, with the opposite coast of Fife; and the mountains of Angus. Dunbar is governed by a Provost, three Bailies, a Treasurer, fifteen Counsellors, and a Town Clerk. It has a Tolbooth in the middle of the High-sreet. At the eastern extremity of the town, a Kirk of the establishment is now rebuilding, on the scite of the former one; the Burghers, and the Methodists, have each places of worship here, and the inhabitants contribute cheerfully to the support of an Auxiliary Bible and Missionary Society, as also to the Ladies' destitute sick Society; in which laudable undertaking, Mrs. Bailie Purves, takes an active part. Dunbar is the seat of a Presbytery, and enjoys the advantages of a good grammar school. In the neighbourhood is the extensive distillery of Mr. Andrew Taylor; and Mr. James Cuming's brewery; and at Belhaven, great numbers of industrious poor are employed by Messrs. Borthwick and Goudie, in the manufacture of cotton goods. Within a few minutes walk of the town, is the Dunbar foundry, where steam engines are made, and heavy machinery manufactured; and in the town, is the extensive soap works of Charles Hay, of Edinburgh, under the superintendance of Mr. George Innes. The Lauderdale Arms Inn, is a large well built house, well conducted, and every accommodation is afforded to the traveller. In defence of the town, a battery, mounting fourteen guns, was erected during the American war, it is in a state of good repair, but the guns are at present removed. There are thirty-two vessels belonging to the port, of 29 to 134 tons burthen, engaged in the foreign and coast trade. Dunbar has a market on Thursday, and two annual fairs; one the first Tuesday after the 26th of May; the other the first Tuesday after the 22nd of November. And, together with the burghs of Jedburgh, Haddington, Lauder, and North Berwick, returns one member to Parliament. Its population is stated at 4000.

Post Office, High-st.—R. F. Drysdale, Post Master;—Mail from Edinburgh arrives at Dunbar at 10 o'clock night; from London 11 at night; changes horses at the St. George and St. Andrew, and proceeds forward immediately.—Post Office for both shuts at nine o'clock at night.

DUNDEE.

THIS town is in the county of Angus, or Forfar, and was erected into a Royal Borough, by King William, it is situated 40 miles, north of Edinburgh; (the nearest road through Fife, by crossing two ferries, one here two miles over, and one at Leith, five miles over, is 63 miles from Edinburgh, by the Mail road.) Dundee is a large, populous and well built town, seated on the north bank of the river Tay, about 12 miles from its entrance. The principal streets lead in many directions from the High-street, or Market-place, which is a spacious square. In ancient times, Dundee was strongly fortified, and some remains of the fortifications are still to be recognized in a dilapidated part of a gate, called Cowgate Port, which is in a most ruinous state. There was also once a Castle in Dundee, which was destroyed by the noted Sir William Wallace, (who received his education here) to prevent it falling again into the possession of the English, it having once before proved useful to Edward I. who put a garrison into it, to overawe the inhabitants. When Edward discovered that the Castle was demolished, he took the town by storm, and set fire to the houses and churches, in which numbers of the inhabitants had taken refuge, and fell unhappy victims to the devouring element.

Dundee in past ages, appears to have had its share of national troubles and invasions, particularly during the reign of Charles II. and the usurpation of Cromwell, but the last seige was the most destructive and ruinous to public, as well as individual property, belonging to the residents of the town, which General Monk's soldiery completely pillaged. Dundee must at that period have been comparatively rich, as each soldier in Monk's army received £60 sterling, for his share of the plunder.

The parish of Dundee is very extensive, extending six miles east to west, along the banks of the Tay, which is a beautiful river about two miles and a half in breadth: on its shores are found Scots pebbles in great variety. The opposite shores rise with a pleasing wildness, adding grandeur to the picturesque view of the water, that opens from various parts of the town, contiguous to which on the north side, is the Law, or Hill of Dundee, which rises majestically in a conical shape, a height of near six hundred feet above the level of the river. On the summit of this hill, are the visible vestiges of a fortification, supposed to have been made in the time of Edward I.

The town of Dundee, is governed by a Provost, four Baillies, a Dean of Guild, a Treasurer and fifteen Counsellors, it is well paved and lighted at night, and supplied with abundance of most excellent water. There are also nine incorporations of trades, viz. the bakers, shoemakers, glovers, tailors, bonnet-makers, fleshers, hammermen, weavers, waulkers, and three united trades, viz. masons, wrights and slaters. The principal trade of this town and neighbourhood, consists in the manufacture of sail-cloth, Osnaburghs, sackings and coarse linens, for Foreign markets. In time of war, the demand is very great for these articles, particularly sail-cloth, but at this period, the trade of Dundee is much depressed in the staple manufacture, which occasions a depression generally in the more domestic branches of traffic. The harbour is most advantageously situated for mercantile pursuits, being navigable for the largest trading vessels. Very important and extensive works for its improvement are now going on, and there is no doubt, but according to the design laid down, that Dundee harbour will eventually be equal to any in Scotland, for safety and shipping conveniences.

On the south side of the High-street, is situated an old but handsome structure, called the Town-house, which is embellished below by Piazzas for an Exchange, a lofty spire adorns the top of this building; it was finished in the year 1734, and contains the Guild-Hall, the Court-room, Town-Clerk's Office, with vaults for the Town Records. At the east end of the street, is the Trades-hall, erected by the incorporated trades, in the year 1776. It has a neat front, ornamented with pillars of the Ionic order, with a small plain cupola on the top; the large Hall, which was originally intended for the general meetings of the trades, is now occupied as a subscription News-room. Around the entire of this building, on the ground flat are small shops. A handsome street, called Castle-street, of modern appearance, leads direct to the harbour. On the east side of this street, is the Scots' Episcopal Chapel, it is a neat building in the Gothic style. Immediately opposite, is the Theatre, which was erected by subscription. To the west of the market place, is the old Church, in which were formerly four places of worship, and when the building was in its original state, it was very extensive. A large square gothic Tower at the west end of the Church, is very ancient, and supposed to have been erected about the year 1189. Near the street, called the Cowgate, stands on an eminence, St. Andrews Church, built by the incorporated trades, in conjunction with the Kirk Session; it has a fine lofty spire, and the whole exhibits a neat style of modern architecture.

About a mile from the town, on a rising ground towards the hill of Dundee, is Dudhope Castle, a very ancient building. Some years since, it was converted into barracks, and will accommodate a complete regiment of foot soldiers. The country round Dundee is pleasant, and the soil appears fertile. Its population is considered to be about 32,000. There is one market weekly on Fridays, and six fairs, viz. 2nd. Tuesday in Feb. O. S.—1st. Tuesday after Perth fair in March—2nd. Tuesday in July, at Stobbs.

15th. August, O. S. } if it happen on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, then held on the 19th. September. } Tuesday following

A fair is held near Dundee, on the 22nd. of Oct. within a mile, and may be termed Dundee fair.

DUNFERMLINE,

A ROYAL borough in the county of Fife; seat of a presbytery, and one of the most considerable manufacturing towns in the county, and the first in Scotland for the manufactory of table-linen, which is its staple trade. It is said, the chest of the incorporation of Weavers contains a curious specimen of their art, this is a man's shirt wrought in the loom by a weaver of the name of Inglis, which is without seam, effected without the assistance of the needle, the only part he could not execute was a button for the neck. Dunfermline is situated in the western district of the shire about three miles from the Frith of Forth, above the level of which it is elevated 190 feet, the prospect it commands is remarkably various, beautiful and extensive, having a view of fourteen different counties at once. The borough, it appears held of the monastery of Dunfermline for nearly two centuries, and became royal by a charter from King James VI. dated 24th May 1588. In this charter the king ratifies sundry charters, donations, and indentures, by John and Robert, abbots of Dunfermline, particularly one dated 10th October, 1395, by which the abbot and convent renounce in favour of the eldermen and community the whole income of the borough belonging to their revenue, with the small customs, profits of court, &c. "reserving however, the power of punishment should any of the magistrates be guilty of injustice in the exercise of their office." At an early period Dunfermline became a royal residence; Malcolm Canmore usually resided at a tower, or castle, built on a peninsulated hill in a valley near the town. A palace was afterwards built not far from the tower, in a most romantic situation; the south-west wall still remains a monument of the magnificent fabric of which it is a part. The monastery was one of the most ancient in Scotland, being founded by Malcolm Canmore, for monks of the Benedictine order, and was completed by his son Alexander I. It continued to be governed by a prior till the reign of David I. who raised it to the dignity of an Abbey, and in 1124, translated thither thirteen monks from Canterbury. The abbey was richly endowed, and derived its revenue from very distant parts of the kingdom, It was a magnificent and extensive building, but fell an early sacrifice to the plundering army of Edward I. About the beginning of the 16th century all that was saved of that magnificent fabric was the church, with a few cells for the monks; these were demolished at the reformation, and the ruins of the abbey are now inconsiderable. The parish church and steeple were large and ancient, being part of the abbey built by Malcolm Cranmore, but it is now nearly rebuilt. Here the founder, his Queen, and several other Scottish monarchs lie interred; and here was lately found the remains of the celebrated Scottish hero, Robert the Bruce. The small rivulet Syne passes near this town, and there are several extensive Lochs; the parish abounds with valuable mines and minerals; in many places there are rocks of white freestone, and whinstone is also found for paving the streets; limestone has been wrought to a great extent; iron stone is also abundant, and exported in great quantities to the Carron Works. The town is governed by a provost, 2 baillies, a dean of guild, and 22 counsellors, viz. 12 guildry of merchant counsellors, and 10 trades council, eight of whom are deacons of incorporations.

The population is about 9000. Market days Tuesday and Friday, (Tuesday for corn.) Fairs; 3d Wednesday in January, 2nd Wednesday in March, 4th Wednesday in April, 1st Wednesday in July, 2nd Tuesday in August, 4th Friday in September, last Thursday in October, and 4th Wednesday in November.

A steam-boat passes (Limekilns 3 miles from Dunfermline,) by which there is an easy conveyance to Leith, Grangemouth, &c. every tide.

FALKIRK AND GRANGEMOUTH

FALKIRK in Stirlingshire, 11 miles from the county town, and 24 from Edinburgh, was formerly a royal burgh, is a considerable market town, on the great canal which joins the Forth and Clyde, and south of the Carron. It stands on an eminence, and is noted for its fairs, at which an almost incredible number of black cattle, besides sheep and horses are annually sold, is a very irregular built town, and has nothing particularly attractive to recommend it to the notice of travellers, except when viewed at a distance, which has a picturesque appearance. It consists of one very indifferent long street, with a few narrow collateral lanes, &c. &c. its new steeple serves as a place of confinement for petty delinquents. Though small it is a place of great antiquity, and celebrated in Scottish history for the battle of Falkirk, fought between King Edward I. and Sir Wm. Wallace, in which so many heroes fell; amongst whom, on the 22d of July, 1298, was numbered, Sir John the Grame, whose effigy is in Falkirk church yard, surmounted by three separate tomb stones, elevated above each other, at different periods, to perpetuate the memory of so great a warrior. But the sight which of all others is the most gratifying to commercial men, is the justly celebrated Carron Company Iron Works, situated on the river Carron, about three miles from the entry into the Forth, and a mile and three-quarters north of the town of Falkirk. These works employ more than 2000 hands on the premises, and afford subsistence to upwards of 4000 more, as they not only work their own mines of iron ore, coal and lime, but have also numerous vessels, which they employ in exporting the manufactured goods, &c. to Glasgow, Liverpool & London, at which places they have agents. All kinds of goods are manufactured here, not only instruments of war, but implements of agriculture, the arts, and for domestic use. To a stranger the approach to the works is striking and terrible. The illumination of the atmosphere produced by the burning matter, the roaring blasts of the immense bellows, and the noise of the weighty hammers striking upon resounding anvils, impress the mind with an idea of the place, where "Vulcan forged the bolts of Jove." These works were established in 1759, are carried on by a chartered company, and conducted with the greatest spirit imaginable. Those peculiar pieces of ordnance, denominated Carronades, were first cast at the Carron Iron Works, from which place their names are deduced. These works consist of five blast furnaces, thirteen cupola furnaces, a mill for grinding clay, and a steam engine, which raises 90 cwt. of water at every stroke. In the parish of Falkirk, three miles distant therefrom, is the highly commercial village of Grangemouth, erected at the junction of the great canal with the river Carron, a few miles above its confluence with the Forth. It was begun in the year 1777, by Sir Lawrence Dundas, to accommodate the numerous vessels passing through the canal, and is most advantageously situated for trade, as the numerous warehouses, granaries, &c. &c. testify which have been erected here. The Carron Company have, with that spiritednesses which so eminently characterise them, lately built an extensive range of lofty warehouses at Grangemouth on the banks of the Carron, and are forming an eligible basin contiguous thereto, for the reception of their own vessels, of which they have nearly twenty. At this place, ship and boat building are carried on, and it enjoys the benefit of a considerable traffic with Sweden, Norway and the Baltic in general. Its merchants, though not numerous, are of the most respectable class; and the whole village assumes an air of active industry. There is a Post Office, and Custom-house, which prove of the greatest utility in their respective establishments. Two steam packets ply regularly between Grangemouth, Newhaven and Leith, giving wonderful facility to travelling, which is further assisted by two coaches regularly attending on the packets, at the time of arrival and departure, and which proves a great public accommodation. Falkirk has a weekly market on a Thursday, with numerous annual fairs, the chief of which is held in October. Not one solitary lamp lends a feeble light to the inhabitants of Falkirk, who, in the town, are estimated at 3000.

GIRVAN,

A SMALL Post Town on the western coast of Scotland, is placed at the mouth of a stream from which its name is derived. The celebrated rock, named Ailsa Craig, is directly in view from the town, at the distance of about 12 miles. From the peculiar mode of building which prevails here, a traveller would be induced to form opinions by no means in favour of this little town: a more intimate acquaintance and research would soon inform him, that, although the houses are diminutive, yet the inhabitants are opulent, friendly and enlightened; that nature has done much for the district in bestowing upon it two great sources of commerce and consequently wealth, limestone and pit-coal, both of which are found in abundance in the immediate vicinity. But so long as Girvan remains without a harbour these advantages are entirely lost, except for the agricultural purposes of the immediate neighbourhood. That a port has not yet been formed at the mouth of Girvan Water, justly excites the surprise of all who journey in this quarter. We believe there is not on the whole of this coast a situation more favourable for creating a haven of shelter for shipping, nor can it be easily imagined where one is more needed. An enquiry into this subject would well become those into whose hands the public welfare is entrusted, as from motives of private jealousy there exist but faint hopes of the great proprietors in the neighbourhood exerting themselves, although they are the persons who would be most benefited by such an event. Girvan is a borough of barony of which Sir H. D. Hamilton is the superior. It is governed by a Baillie and Council. Here is a church of the establishment, and one of associate burghers. Great quantities of cotton goods are fabricated here for the Glasgow market. The population is about 4000.

GLASGOW,

IS a great commercial and manufacturing city, in the nether ward of Lanarkshire, in Scotland, situated on the north bank of the Clyde, in Longitude, 40, 15, 51 west; in Latitude, 55, 52, 10, north, 43 miles from Edinburgh, and 408, from London, by Manchester. Being undistinguished as a British fort, or Roman station, the origin of Glasgow, is unknown. Its present scite was included in the territory, which constituted a part of the kingdom of the Strath-Clyde Britons. At which time it appears, that Kentigern, an Ecclesiastic of great eminence, fixed his residence at Penrhyn. Rheonydd, (either Glasgow or Dunbarton) and obtained much celebrity by his lessons of piety and peace; and although in these distracted times, he was obliged to remove into Wales, yet he returned, and the number of Churches and Chapels, dedicated to his memory, and the veneration with which he was regarded by his successors, sufficiently attest the merit of his labours. He was buried at the east end of the Cathedral of. Glasgow, where his monument is still pointed out to the curiosity of strangers.

In 1180, a charter was procured from William the Lion, whereby the village of Glasgow was erected into a Royal Burgh, with the privilege of holding a weekly market on the Thursday. And in 1190, a fair was authorized to be held every year, in the city, for the space of eight days, with free access to the markets. It was not however, till 1242, "that the Burgesses and men of the Bishop, were enabled to trade in Lennox, Argyle and Scotland, as freely as the men of Dunbarton." The city appears to have been governed by its own Magistrates, in 1268. In 1270, William, Bishop of Glasgow, established the order of Dominican Friars within the city. On the 16th. of October, 1633, Glasgow was declared by Act of Parliament, to be a royal free Borough. In 1636, a Water Baillie, was appointed by royal charter, with power to exercise a maritime, civil and criminal jurisdiction, from the bridge of Glasgow, to the Clough, near the mouth of the Clyde, and 26 miles below the town.

This great city, important from the extent of its commerce, the excellence of its manufactures, and a population of 150,000 inhabitants, has long ranked in many respects, as the first in Scotland. It is for the most part, built on a gentle acclivity, rising gradually to the north. The river Clyde, which washes the whole of the southern side of the town, is here navigable for vessels of 150 tons burthen. The tide flowing about two miles above the city eastward. Glasgow, including the suburbs, occupies a space of upwards of 650 acres. The principal street, running east and west, assumes the name of Argyle-st. Trongate and Gallowgate, and is nearly 1 mile and three quarters in length, the street which runs north and south, termed the Salt-market, High-street, Kirk-st. and Castle-st. extends nearly a mile. There are a considerable number of streets, which branch out to the right and left of the Trongate and Argyle street, remarkably spacious, well built, and kept in excellent order. Here are also three good Squares, George's, the most extensive, contains, a fine statue of the lamented veteran, Sir John Moore. The public Park or Green, is a great benefit to the inhabitants, it is much frequented in fine weather, as a fashionable promenade. It contains the column erected to perpetuate the memory of the Hero of Trafalgar The Humane Society's-house, and the Green Public Washing-house. The old town of Glasgow, narrow dark and crowded, operates as a foil to the beauty of the new town, which is laid out with much taste, and the lofty and elegant edifices of stone, with which it abounds, remind the traveller of the city of Bath, which in this part it much resembles. We commence our brief recital of the public buildings of Glasgow, with the places of worship. St. Mungo, the Cathedral or High Church. This splendid edifice, (one of the most entire specimens of ancient Scottish architecture) was founded in 1123, in the reign of David I. in whose presence it was consecrated. The architect was John Murdo, a man of considerable eminence at that period. The situation of the Cathedral is elevated, and its battlements command extensive prospects. It is built in the form of a cross, the greatest length being from east to west. From the middle of the building, ascends the great Tower, of a square form, within which rises a lofty octangular spire, ornamented with small battlements. The whole building is arranged into four divisions, viz. The Choir, outer Church, inner High Church, and vaulted Cemetery. It is lighted by 157 windows. is supported by 147 pillars, and measures 1090 feet round the walls.

The College, or Black Friars Church, in High-street, is a plain building, erected in 1699, upon the scite of a more ancient pile, called Blackfriars, which in 1666, was destroyed by a thunder storm. The Tron; or Laigh Church, near the cross, erected in 1794, is a plain building, surmounted by a cupola. A spire built in 1637, stands between it and the street, it has a clock and two bells. The name Tron, was applied to this Church, from a part of its steeple having been used as a Weigh-house. The North West, or Ram's Horn Church, stands at the northern extremity of Candlerigg-street, built in 1720. It has a square steeple, 140 feet high, with a clock in front.

St. Andrew's Church, which stands in the square of the same name, was completed in 1756, at an expense of £15,000, resembling that of St. Martin's in the Fields London. The architect was Mungo Nasmith; the steeple which contains a clock, has little to recommend it.

St. Enoch's was erected in 1780, from designs by Mr. Jaffray, the front in which is the spire, is decorated with a Doric portico, and has a light and handsome appearance.

The Barony Church, is situated in front of the Cathedral, and was built in 1798, in a mixed style of architecture, from a design by Mr. Adam. St. George's, on the west side of Buchanan-street, fronting George's-st. is a handsome edifice, with three quarter Doric columns in front, the whole height of the church. The steeple is crowned with a dome and obelisk 162 feet high. This Church was finished at an expense of £9000.

The Gorbal's Church, is situated at the east end of Carlton-place, fronting the river. It was completed in 1810, from designs by Mr. D. Hamilton.

St, John's Church, in M'Farlane-st. fronting the Gallow-gate, will accommodate nearly 1600 persons. The exterior is of chaste Gothic, with a magnificent tower, of 138 feet altitude. Its erection cost about £9000. The oratorical celebrity of the present Minister of this Church, (the Rev. Dr. Chalmers) reminds us of what we have read of the unfortunate Dr. Dodd, of London, or heard from the late amiable and energetic Dr. Barnes, of Manchester.

The Episcopal Chapel, is situated on the east side of the lane, leading from St. Andrew's square. It was erected by subscription, in 1750, and is a neat oblong building.

The Catholic Chapel, erected in 1815, is an elegant structure, and highly ornamental to the city. Its scite is happily chosen; placed near the banks of the Clyde, its magnificence cannot fail to attract attention.

In addition to the before named places of worship, are the College Chapel, the Canon-st. Chapel, and three Gælic Chapels, one of which is in Ingram-street, one in Duke-st. and one in the Gorbals. There is also a place of meeting, of the members of the Scottish Episcopal Church, 3 of the Burgher Seceders; 2 of Antiburghers; 7 congregations of the Synod of Relief; 3 of Independents; one Unitarian; one of the Covenanted Presbytery; 4 of Methodists; one Anabaptists; together with those of the Society of Friends, Baptists, Glassites, &c. The University and public Seminaries, next claim our attention. And perhaps there is not on the face of the globe, a city where more attention is paid to the inculcation of useful knowledge, and the pursuit of superior attainments. Indeed it may with truth be observed, that in piety and charity, in learning and industry, this city has few equals.

The University, which was opened in 1451, was originally instituted by a Bull from Pope Nicholas V. at the request of James II. It occupies a space of nearly 10,000 square yards, and is situated on the east side of High-street. Its exterior exhibits much of solemn grandeur; and the perspective of the interior, gives some idea of the magnificence of Oxford; but which is not fully realized on a closer inspection.

The building containing the Hunterian Museum, possesses much regular beauty. The establishment, consists of a Lord Chancellor, Lord Rector, Dean of Faculty and Principal, with Professors of Divinity, Church History, Oriental Languages, Natural Philosophy, Logic, Greek, Humanity, Civil Law, Medicine, Anatomy, Practical Astronomy, Regius Professors of Natural History, Surgery, Chemistry and Botany, and a Lecturer on Materia Medica. The Hunterian Museum, is one of the finest collections in Europe, of the most rare and valuable specimens of Natural History, Paintings, Medals, Anatomical Preparations, Books, &c.

Andersonian Institution. The late Mr. John Anderson, in the year 1795, bequeathed his valuable Philosophical Apparatus, Museum and Library, for the purpose of introducing an extensive system of education. To these have been added, a familiar system of Philosophy and Mechanics. The public Grammar School was organised previous to the University, and is considered as coeval with the Cathedral.

There are besides the above a great number of public and private seminaries of education, a recapitulation of which would far exceed the limits of this work, and we are obliged to pass on to the judiciary civil and commercial buildings. The Courts of Justice are, the Circuit Court, the Sheriff Court, the Commissary Courts of Glasgow, Hamilton and Campsie, the Bailie or Town Court, the Dean of Guild Court, Justice of Peace Court, Court of Conscience, and the Maratime Court. The building erected for the purpose of a Gaol and Public Offices, is considered by many to be the most elegant in the city; it is situated near the foot of the Salt-market, and when viewed from the opposite bank of the Clyde, has a magnificent appearance. The Bridewell is situated in Duke-st. and the Police Office at the foot of south Albion-street. The Town-hall was built in 1636, on the north side of the Tron-gate, where this street commences at the cross; in front is a good Equestrian statue of King William III. There is certainly much propriety in placing the statue of that monarch in front of such a building, but much of the effect is lost from the comparative narrowness of the street, and "Orange William" is very unceremoniously thrust upon the Kirk-stone, to make room for carriages and drays. Immediately connected with the Town-hall is the Tontine Coffee Room, erected in 1781, from designs by Mr. William Hamilton. The Coffee Room is universally allowed to be one of the most elegant in Britain ; its length being 74 feet, breadth 32½, height 16½, the entrance is from the Tron-gate under the Piazza. The Merchants' Hall, which formerly stood on the south side of Bridge-gate, has been lately taken down; the scite of a new one is now under consideration ; the spire still remains. The Trades' Hall is situated on the west side of Glassford-street; this building has a very handsome appearance. The expence of its erection amounted to £5500.

The public institutions for charitable purposes are the Royal Infirmary, which beautiful building stands in a good situation, at the upper end of High-street, it has a light elegant appearance, and was opened in 1794. The Lunatic Asylum in the neighbourhood of Port Dundas, is a very good building, and well adapted to its purpose ; near the foregoing, is the Magdalen Asylum, erected in 1812, and supported by voluntary contributions. The Town Hospital, situated in Clyde-street, was erected in 1733, by voluntary contributions. Hutcheson's Hospital, situated in Ingram-street, was erected in 1803, at an expence of nearly £5000. The Lock Hospital in the Rotten row, was erected in 1808, and is supported by private subscription. In the Surgeons' Hall, St. Enoch's square, is the dispensary for Vaccine Inoculation. In addition to the before mentioned, are the following Hospitals and Mortifications, among the former are those of St. Nicholas, the Merchants' and the Trades', and of the latter are those of Scotstarbets' Snell's, Mitchell's, Tennent's, Wilson's, Baxter's, Coulter's, Millar's and Macalpine's. Glasgow possesses a Literary and Philosophical Society, and three Public Libraries denominated Stirling's, the Glasgow Public, and the Robertsonian. The Associations and Societies of Philanthropic intention, are very numerous. The places of public amusements are the Theatre in Queen-street, erected in 1804, at an expence of nearly £20,000, it is the largest provincial Theatre in Europe, and has been completed with much skill, judgment and taste, the building is 158 feet by 70. The performances are not generally well attended here, yet there are some exceptions. The celebrated Mr. Kean made his appearance here upon the 20th of April, 1815, and so great was the desire to see this distinguished performer, notwithstanding the prices of admission were raised, the boxes to seven shillings, the pit to five shillings, first gallery three shillings, and second gallery two shillings, that a number of families came for that purpose from distant parts of the country, and the receipts during his six nights of performance, amounted to near £2300, and upon the last of these nights, Mr. Kean's benefit, the receipts was £450, the greatest sum that had ever been taken in Glasgow for one performance. The old Theatre in Dunlop-street, has lately been fitted up for equestrian performances, pantomimes, &c. The Assembly and Concert Rooms are situated near the western extremity of Ingram-street. They were built in the year 1796 ; the Assembly Room is 80 feet in length, 35 in breadth, and 27 in height, the building has a very fine appearance. The Baths and whole establishment of the Willow Bank, are deserving of the strangers notice. Other public establishments and buildings, not already enumerated, are the Custom House in St. Enoch's-square, the Bonding Warehouses in Howard-street, the Post-Office in Nelson-street, the Barracks near the extremity of Gallow-gate, the Weigh House, the Public Markets and the Bazaar. There are three bridges over the Clyde, two of stone, and one of timber. The establishments of the Gas Light Company, and the two Water Works Companies, are testimonies of public spirit, and are productive of the most beneficial results. The manufactures of Glasgow are particularly deserving of attention ; they embrace at once considerable variety of articles, and great importance as to quantity. Besides cotton goods to the amount of several millions annually, there may also be named those of tobacco, spirits, soap, glass, delfware, iron and type founding, of sugar refining, chrystal, of cudbear, of smallwares and inkles, of damasks and leather. The print-fields, dye-works, breweries and tanneries, are also very numerous, and immense quantities of stone and timber are consumed in house building, which is carried on with the greatest perseverance ; the former of these valuable materials, as well as the equally useful article of pit coal, are procured in great abundance in the neighbourhood. The steam vessels on the river Clyde, present to the eye of a traveller, an exhibition at once highly novel, and involving the most important considerations ; nearly thirty of these vessels are at present navigated from this port and many others, which were here constructed, are now employed in various parts of Europe. The greatest benefits have accrued to the city of Glasgow, by opening a navigable communication between the rivers Forth and Clyde, thus uniting the eastern and western seas : the Monkland, Ardrossan and Union Canals have also contributed to the acceleration of commerce. The Government of the Royal burgh of Glasgow is vested in a number of Magistrates, Lord Provost, three Merchant Baillies, two Trades' Baillies, the Dean of Guild, as head of the Merchants' House ; the Convener, as head of the Trades' House, twelve Merchants' and eleven Trades' Counsellors, a Treasurer and a Master of Work, which latter are extra Counsellors, and about eleven more public officers. The excellent regulations of the Police of the city, are the theme of general eulogium.

The Fairs of Glasgow are held annually on the second Wednesday in January, Thursday before Easter, Whitsun-week and the Monday following, second Monday in July, and the first Wednesday after Martinmas. The principal Market is held on the Wednesday.

GREENOCK,

IN Renfrewshire, three miles from Port Glasgow, fifteen from Paisley, twenty-two from Glasgow, and sixty-six from Edinburgh, is a considerable sea port town on the south side of the Frith of Clyde, from whence it has a commanding prospect of picturesque scenery of water, wood and hills; some of whose summits pierce the clouds, amongst which is seen the majestic Ben Lomond. Greenock, at the beginning of the eighteenth century, was merely a collection of fishermen's huts, without either harbour or trade; but now ship building is largely carried on here, which, with the manufacture of sail cloth and cordage for ships, and of nets and tackle for the fisheries, constitute a large portion of the occupation of the inhabitants. From such an obscure beginning has risen the present town, which, though not soelegant as many towns of equal magnitude, possesses many good houses and thirteen places of worship, for sects of various denominations; the new Church is a large and handsome building, as is also the Custom House, overlooking the Clyde and the various ships which frequent this port. The Coffee Rooms and Assembly Hall too, deserve the attention of strangers, while an Infirmary is of the greatest service to a numerous population. The Theatre is not very large, but sufficient for the number of inhabitants. The harbour, which is commodious, has lately been improved at a very great expence, it forms a basin between two semicircular Quays, and is sufficientiy deep to float vessels of very considerable tonnage. The road for vessels is narrow; a sand bank stretching from Dunbarton to a little below the town, but at the extremity of this bank, there is constantly an ample depth of water, and good anchorage ground for ships of any burthen; the quays are spacious, and possess most excellent sheds, supported by iron pillars; under these sheds dry goods are securely lodged from the weather; and in many cases, Merchants' Offices for the transaction of business. There are also good Graving and other Docks, for ships of any size. Greenock derives great advantage from the application of machinery, to naval architecture, there being more than twenty steam boats regularly traversing the Clyde, between this port and Glasgow, touching at the intermediate ports, and lying to, in any part of the river, for the accommodation of passengers; the Rob Roy, and the Sir William Wallace steam packets, constantly touch at Greenock, on their way between Glasgow and Belfast, also the Robert Bruce to Liverpool every week, afford a comfortable conveyance to and from each country. Greenock has a convenient market for shambles meat, a Market for vegetables, and a neat, though small one for fish. Numerous timber, and shipbuilders yards, sugar refineries, tanneries, and at a little distance from the eastern extremity of the town, is a respectable manufactory of earthenware, designated the "Clyde Pottery," at which place, excellent blue painted ware is manufactured. The exports from Greenock, are the manufactured goods of Glasgow, Paisley, and the neighbouring country; and its imports cotton, rum, sugar, mahogany, &c. from the West Indies; rice, pot ashes, timber, and naval stores from America; and wine, fruit, &c. from Portugal. Many ships are likewise employed hence, in the Baltic trade, as also in the fishery of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, and an uncommonly fine ship, the Clydesdale, is now proceeding on its first voyage to the East Indies, from this port; About a mile from the town, close to the banks of the Clyde, is a Battery mounting fourteen guns; but there are no Barracks, and seldom any soldiers quartered in the town. Greenock is governed by a Sheriff-Depute; has a weekly market on Friday, and a fair on the first Thursday in July, also one on the fourh Tuesday in Nov. Population, nearly 24,000.

Post-Office, Cathcart-st.—Post Master, Alex. May.—There are three mails to Glasgow, every day, the 1st. at 10 in the morning, 2nd, at 4 afternoon, 3rd. at 10 at night; the two last carry the Edinburgh Mails, with them to Glasgow; the 1st. and 3d. are horse-post, the 3rd. is the Royal Mail; the Edinburgh, Glasgow and Paisley Mails, arrives every morning at 10, and at half past 7 at night, London and Irish mails, every morning, at half past 11. A horse post to Largs, Saltcoats and Rathsay, every day, immediately on the arrival of the English Mail. A mail to Dunoon and Argyleshire, Monday, Wednesday and Saturdays.

HADDINGTON

A Royal Borough and County Town of East Lothian, which together with Jedburgh, Dunbar, Lauder and North Berwick, sends one member to Parliament, is the first stage between Edinburgh and London, situated on the river Tyne; which here is tolerably broad and beautifully serpentine, and, which, in the year 1775, rose 17 feet perpendicularly above its usual level, laying one half of the town under water. Its antiquity is indisputable, for, in a charter from Ada, widow of Prince Henry, mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion, kings of Scotland, dated 1178, she styled it "Meum Burgum de Haddington." On the opposite side the Tyne, within a mile of the town, are the ruins of a Nunnery, founded by Ada, in 1178, which gave name to a suburb called Nun-gate, which is connected with the town by a bridge of three arches across the river, and another arch under which passengers can walk. The outer walls which are entire are all that now remains of the Nunnery, the whole being unroofed. The parish Church is a large and venerable structure, having formerly been the church of the Franciscan Monastery, and which from the style of architecture appears to have been built in the 12th or 13th century. Only the west end is occupied as a church, the remainder is completely in ruins though undergoing some repairs. In the aisle is the burying place of the Maitland family, who for many ages possessed the estate of Leithington, now the property of Lord Blantyre. The vestiges of fortifications prove Haddington once to have been well defended. The Town-house was built after the design of the late Mr. Adams, in 1748, also a commodious School: adjoining the Gaol is the Council Chamber, and an eligible Assembly Room.

Haddington, commercially considered, is unimportant, though it has a very great market for grain every Friday. Its public buildings are neither numerous nor striking, though several mansions in the environs of the town, vie with the residences of the most opulent. The situation of the demesne of Robert Veitch, Esq. is truly paradisiacal, and the residence of Henry Davidson, Esq. nobly simple and attractively majestic—while the cottage, the seat of domestic bliss, and the residence of Henry Haldane, Esq. late of Jamaica, unobtrusively enlivens the scene, with its chaste architectural beauties. The streets of Haddington are much more spacious than most towns boasting the same antiquity, tolerably well paved and lighted with lamps. Its shops are numerous and good; and its Flesh Market is very eligible for the purpose; the fleshers are all under cover, and projecting sheds shield the meat from either sun or rain. The area of the Corn Market is uncommonly large, and possesses the advantage of a public crane, for weighing the immense quantities of grain brought for public sale.

Besides the parish Church, the Burghers, Anti-burghers, Independents and Methodists have places of worship in Haddington. There are several Sunday Schools in the town, and numerous institutions of a benevolent nature; amongst which stand foremost the Dispensary, and the Bible, and the Juvenile Auxiliary Missionary Society. The Town Public Library, Subscription Library, Savings' Bank, and Widows' Society, with several other societies and clubs: the Bowling Green Club meets in May. The government of the town is vested in a Provost, two Merchant Baillies, a Trades' Baillie, Dean of Guild, Treasurer, twelve Merchant Counsellors' and seven Deacons of incorporated trades. A quorum of Justices hold a Court the first Thursday of each month, for deciding causes under the small debt act—matters betwixt masters and servants—petty riots, &c. &c. and the Sheriff Court meet every Thursday at eleven o'clock in the forenoon. In this town, John Knox, the father of the Reformation in Scotland was born; and in the Church-yard is a small pyramidical obelisk, sacred to the memory of James Brown, the Commentator on the Scriptures; and in the neighbourhood, Robertson composed his History of Scotland.

This town gives the title of Earl to a branch of the Hamilton family, who is the present Lord Lieutenant of the county: it is the seat of a Presbytery, its Church in the patronage of the Earl of Hopetown, and its ministers, the very Rev. R. Lorimer, L. L. D. and the Rev. W. Sibbald, D. D. Its market day is Friday, and it has annual fairs, last Friday in February, last Friday in March, first Friday in May after Rutherglen horse market, second Tuesday in July, second Thursday in October, and the Friday before Hallow Fair. Its population is estimated at 5000.

Post Office—Peter Martine, Post Master.—Mail from Edinburgh, arrives at a quarter past eight in the evening, and from London at midnight. Letters for London or the east must be put into the office by half past seven, for Edinburgh, by ten at night.

HAMILTON.

A Town of Scotland, in the county of Lanark, situated on the Clyde 11 miles S. E. of Glasgow and 38 miles from Edinburgh, was anciently called Cadzow, till Robert Bruce gave it to Sir Gilbert de Hamilton, who fled to him from England. The church was made Collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a Provost and Prebendary; and has always been the burial place of the family, who have their principal seat here called Hamilton Palace. The building forms three sides of a quadrangle, the rooms are spacious particularly the Picture Gallery, which contains a most capital collection. In the middle of the great Park, one mile from the town on a rock overhanging the Avon, stands the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient Manor House, the Park is well stocked with deer, and contains a number of stately oaks. The residence of the Hamilton family, contributes greatly to the support of the town, and the annual races are among the best in the west of Scotland. There is a petrifying water in the Park and beds of Fullers' and Potters' earth, are found in different places, Ironstone is also to be met with, and many chalybeate springs. Hamilton was made a Royal Borough by Queen Mary in 1548. The town is irregularly built, yet handsome. The Parish Church stands on a rising ground above the town and is a handsome building, here is a neat Town House and Prison and a very commodious Market-place. A considerable trade is carried on in the manufacture of Shoes and the women are chiefly employed in spinning Linen Yarn and making Thread Lace.

The market day is Friday; its Fairs are held last Tuesday in January, O. S. 2nd Thursday in Febuary, Friday after 15th of May, last Thursday in June, 2nd Thursday in July, 3rd Thursday in August and 3rd Thursday in November. Population about 7000.

IRVINE AND SALTCOATS.

IRVINE is a sea port town of Scotland, and royal burgh in the county of Ayr, it stands on a rising ground, on the north of a river of the same name, the estuary of which forms the harbour, the scite of the town is dry and wholesome, having a broad street running the whole length of the town. The Church is an ornament to the place, being situated on a rising ground between the town and the river, and surmounted by an elegant spire. Here is an excellent Academy, lately erected by subscription, where the mathematics, different languages and other branches of education are taught. The Town House stands in the middle of the street. Here is a good News Room in the Main-street, and a Library. A Court of Magistrates meet weekly, and the Small Debts' Court once per month. It is uncertain as to the period when Irvine became a royal burgh, but a charter is extant granted by Alexander II. confirming the previous ones. It is governed by a Provost, two Baillies, Dean of Guild, a Treasurer and twelve Counsellors, and in conjunction with Ayr, Inverary, Rothsay and Campbeltown, sends a Member to Parliament. The harbour is commodious, with ten or twelve feet water on the bar at spring tides; a number of vessels are employed in the export of coals, chiefly to Ireland; the harbour is near half a mile from the town, and the import of iron, hemp, flax, timber and grain, of the latter, the quantity is considerable, both from Ireland and the coast of Galloway. The population is about 4500. The Fairs are the second Tuesday in May, for cattle; the third Monday in August, for wool; third Wednesday in the same month for horses; and on the third Friday in the same month races are held. Bogside races for three days are held in July.

SALTCOATS is a considerable sea port town in Ayrshire, seven miles from Irvine. The harbour although difficult of access, will admit vessels of upwards of 200 tons burthen. Saltcoats is situated in the parishes of Ardrossan and Stevenston, and contains about 3000 inhabitants. It has a good public School, and one Church of Establishment and one of Relief. Ardrossan is an infant port, where a fine harbour is now forming, under the direction of David Henry, Esq. Civil Engineer. Here are excellent baths, and from present appearance, it is probable that Ardrossan will become (under the peculiar care of the Noble Family of Eglington) a celebrated watering place. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday in June, and the fourth Thursday in November.

KILMARNOCK,

A POPULOUS and thriving town of Ayrshire, is seated on a small river of the same name, 22 miles from Glasgow, 12 from Ayr, and 7, from Irvine. It is the principal manufacturing town of the county. The fabrication of carpets, and the well known "Scotch Bonnet," employing considerable capital, and a great number of hands. In the former of these, Kilmarnock is now a successful rival of "Kidderminster," producing by the assistance of novel and excellent machinery, a variety of the richest patterns; in which brilliancy of colours and taste in combination, are equally remarkable. In this town, by means of agents, are also produced a great quantity of cotton goods, for the Glasgow market, some of which, particularly the arcicle of worked muslins, possess uncommon beauty. Considerable quantities of leather are also manufactured here. Kilmarnock has a spacious market place, surrounded with elegant shops, the number of streets, which here converge to a point, in some degree remind the travelller of the well known seven dials of St. Giles's London, In the new part of the town, the streets are spacious and handsome, and have evidently been named on the model of those of the metropolis of England. The streets in the old town, (as is usually the case) are narrow and intricate. A very neat ground plan has been recently executed, from which it appears, that the slope of the town somewhat resembles the form of the ancient battle axe. The market place, and surrounding streets forming the head; and King-street, and Titchfield-street, &c. the shaft or handle. Kilmarnock is a Burgh of Barony, and is governed by two Baillies, a Council of Merchants, and the Deacons of the incorporated trades. The police of the town, is under the superintendance of commissioners. Dean Castle, about half a mile from the town, a very ancient edifice, now in a dilapidated state, was once the residence of the noble and unfortunate family of Kilmarnock. An old building denominated Kilmarnock-House, was formerly occupied by a member of the noble family of Glencairn, at Morton-Place. About half a mile above the town, the residence of Mr. Thomas Morton, an ingenious and self instructed mechanist. A very fine Observatory has been erected, which through the urbanity of this gentleman, is rendered free of access to respectable individuals. It commands a fine range of prospects, which we regret that our limits do not permit us to describe Mr. M. has produced some very valuable machinery, in aid of the staple manufacture of the town; and is also celebrated for the construction of excellent telescopes. Mr. John Peddon of this town, has also produced some curious articles of machinery, particularly a new hydraulic machine, of curious design. The principal public buildings and institutions of Kilmarnock, are the Churches, viz. The High Church; the Low Church; the Burghers; the Burghers Original; the Anti-Burghers; the Relief; the Methodists; the reformed Presbytery, and two Baptist-Meeting-Houses; the Town-house and Court-room, with Gaol and Public Offices; the Academy, a large and handsome building. The Tradesmen Subscription School, established in 1809. A Coffee and News Room; and Library, Croft-Lodge, belonging to the Masonic order of St. John, and the Weavers' Society House. There are two Societies of Ladies, for the relief of the sick and indigent in this town, one of them named the Female Friendly Society; the other the Benevolent Female Society,. There is also a Charity School supported by subscription, and an Auxiliary Bible Society. The town is well supplied with the valuable article of coal, by a rail way from the Troon. The population of the parish is estimated at 14,000. The market day is on Friday; and Fairs are held on Shrove Tuesday, 1st. Tuesday in May, O. S. The 3rd. Wednesday in July, O. S. and 3rd. Wednesday in October, O. S.

KIRKCALDY,

A SEA-PORT of Fifeshire, in Scotland, on the frith of Forth, about 12 miles north of Edinburgh was erected into a Royal Burgh in the fifteenth century, the charter was ratified by Charles 1st in the year 1644; it is governed by a Provost, Baillies, and Council, and is united with Dysart, Kinghorn and Burnt Island in electing a member to serve in Parliament. Kirkcaldy is by some supposed to derive its name from the Culdees who had formerly a cell here; it is situated along the Sea coast and has a considerable share of trade and manufacture. The town consists chiefly of one long narrow winding irregular street, along the foot of a bank, with some narrow lanes on each side, it contains many well built houses in the modern tase, here are some considerable manufactories of linen, such as striped hollands, checks and ticks in which there are from 2 to 300 looms employed in the town and parish; here are likewise large tanneries, and some looms for making stockings. Near the centre of the town stands the town house, having a tower and spire, the church is a Gothic building and stands on an eminence at the back of the town. The harbour is much improved of late, and there are at present a respectable number of vessels belonging to the port. Among the natives of Kirkcaldy are reckoned Michael Scot, born in the 12th century and celebrated for his knowledge of languages, the mathematics, and chemistry, and Dr. Adam Smith the celebrated author of the inquiry into the nature and causes of the wealth of nations. The population of the town and parish are about 4000. The fairs are held first Saturday in February, March, April, May, June, and July, and the last Wednesday in September.

Post Office, High-street,—William Skinner, Post Master.—The north and south mails leave every morning about four; the east mail every day at half past twelve

KIRKCUDBRIGHT,

The principal town of Stewartry of the same name, is pleasantly situated on the east side of the river Dee, 6 miles from its mouth. A towering hill covered with a fine plantation overlooks the town. The Dee at this place forms a capacious, safe and well sheltered harbour. At its mouth is excellent anchorage, with 16 feet at low water. The tide which in the Solway Frith is extremely powerful, rises at this port about 18 feet at Neap, and from 30 to 40 feet at Spring Tides. Little Ross an Island at the distance of 6 miles possesses a good harbour. The Dee is navigable for two miles above Kirkcudbright to the fine new bridge at Tongueland, which is built with one arch of 110 feet span, and being tastefully ornamented, forms a beautiful object, in a most interesting landscape. The Dee has an excellent Salmon Fishery, of which the town of Kirkcudbright possesses one third share. The Proprietors of the other two shares are the Earl of Selkirk and Mr. Murray, of Broughton. It is worthy of remark that the right of fishing a certain district of the river to the extent of about 3 miles, is at present rented at £800. per annum. The salmon which is of excellent quality is chiefly sent to England. Kirkcudbright is distant from Edinburgh 100 miles, 28 from Dumfries, and about four miles distant from the Mail Coach road from the latter place to Port Patrick, from which it is distant about 60 miles. It was erected a Royal Burgh in 1445 and is governed by a Provost, 2 Baillies, a Treasurer, and 13 Common Council, here is an elegant Court House and good Public School supported principally from the funds of the Burgh; also a Custom House which has under its governance the Creeks of Fleet, Balcarry Bay, and Urr. The scite of the present Church belonging to the Establishment, was formerly occupied by a monastery of Grey Friars, founded in the 12th century. The Town appears to have been in former times a place of defence, having been surrounded by a wall and ditch. In the vicinity are the remains of a fortification called Castle Dykes. This Burgh in conjunction with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar, and Lochmaben, sends a Member to Parliament.

It is surmised that Kirkcudbright received its present appellation from the ancient Church of St. Cuthbert, which formerly stood at a short distance from the town, but the vestiges of which are totally obliterated. In the neighbourhood are the remains of several Roman and Pictish camps. St. Mary's Isle the seat of the Earl of Selkirk, is about one mile south of the town. The principal Buildings and institutions of note are the Church, the new and old County Gaols, the public School, the News and Billiard Rooms, the County Hall, the public Library, and the Freemasons' Lodge. The principal manufactures of this place are cotton goods, buttons, nails, candles, &c. The machine used at the ferry over the Dee is worthy of notice, being well adapted to its purpose; it however wants the convenience of steps at the landing places. The Market days are Tuesday and Friday. The Fairs are the 12th of August, or Friday after; the 29th of September, or Friday after. The population by a recent census was ascertained to be as follows: in the Burgh 2458. In the Country part 743. Total 3201.

Post Office near the Market-Place—Post Mistress Mrs. Ellison, Baird.

The Letters from Edinburgh, Dumfries, Port Patrick, &c. arrive at 7 in the Morning, and are despatched to all parts at 3 in the afternoon.

LANARK,

A Royal Borough, and the County Town of Lanarkshire, in Scotland, is situated about 30 miles W. of Edinburgh, near the left bank of the Clyde, it is a place of great antiquity, having received its original charter as early as the reign of Alexander the 1st. The government is vested in a Provost, two Baillies, a Dean of Guild, thirteen Merchant Counsellors, and seven Deacons of Trades. The Town consists of one principal street which descends towards the Clyde, and five inferior ones branching off from it besides lanes and closes. Many new buildings have been added within these few years; the streets are in general well paved with whinstone, and exhibit, especially near the centre of the town, a considerable degree of neatness. The first Assembly or Parliament mentioned in the history of Scotland, was convened in this town by Kenneth the 2nd. in the year 978. It is also rendered remarkable as the scene of the firstgreat military exploit of the celebrated Sir William Wallace; that patriot having here commenced his glorious but unfortunate career by the defeat and Death of William de Heselrig, or Hesliope, the English Sheriff of Lanarkshire. We are told that Wallace having married a lady of the name of Braidfoot the heiress of Lamington, lived with her privately at Lanark; that while there, he with a few friends had a quarrel and fray with a party of English. Wallace being overpowered, made his escape to Cartlane Craigs, on which the Sheriff seized on his wife and put her to death. To revenge this, Wallace and his friends attacked the Sheriff in the night, and killed him, with 240 Englishmen. Bruce finally recovered Lanark from the English in 1310. William Lithgow the celebrated traveller was born, died, and was buried in this parish. This town unites with Linlithgow, Selkirk and Peebles, in sending one Member to Parliament. Its principal manufactures are stockings and shoes; the population about 6000; Market day Tuesday; Fairs last Tuesday in February, last Wednesday in April, last Wednesday in May O. S.; 1st. and 2nd. Tuesday in June, last Wednesday in July, O. S. last Friday in August, O. S. first Wednesday in November, O. S. and last Tuesday in December.

Post-Office—Post-master, Daniel Murray.—London Mail arrives every morning at 8. Edinburgh, Glasgow and Hamilton, every evening at half past 9, and is dispatched for all the above places every day at three.

LINLITHGOW,

A ROYAL Burgh and chief Town in the county of West Lothian, to which shire it gives its name, consists of one street, with a few bye lanes, it possesses a variety of objects which cannot fail to interest the attentive traveller, and impress the mind with an idea of its ancient grandeur. Amongst these are the magnificent ruins of its Royal Palace, the venerable Church adjoining; the terrace on which both edifices are erected; the beautiful Lake; the lofty trees, and the plantations scattered over the pleasure grounds of the ancient palace. In the reign of David I. Linlithgow, by act of parliament, was constituted one of the principal burghs of the kingdom. James V. vested the government thereof, in a Provost, four Baillies, a Dean of Guild, a Treasurer, twelve Merchant and eight Trades' Counsellors. The palace, built on the scite of a Roman station, forms a square, overlooks a beautiful sheet of water to the north, has been one of the noblest residences of royalty in Scotland. In this palace, the unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scots was born on the 8th of December, 1542. One of the houses in this town is pointed out to strangers as the place from whence the regent, Murray, was shot, by Hamilton of Bothwell-haugh. Nearly adjoining to the palace, stands a church, dedicated to St. Michael; in this church is the seat formerly reserved for the kings of Scotland, it is a noble piece of gothic architecture, has a fine tower steeple ornamented with the figure of an imperial crown. The Town House is also an elegant building erected in the year 1668, with seven arches, of neat and fanciful workmanship of cast iron, forming piazzas for public accommodation, the lower apartments of this building are used as the County Gaol, over which the Sheriff's Court is held. Immediately opposite to the Town House, is a fountain of singular and beautiful appearance, founded on the 4th of June, 1807, in imitation of the Cross well, built in 1620, it is of a hexagonal form, ascended by steps, the water is seen descending from the top of the fountain, which is surmounted by a unicorn, holding a shield before it, this stream of water falls into a basin, from whence it is spouted out of the mouths of six grotesque figures, into a larger basin, whose sides are curiously ornamented, from whence it again issues through the mouths of six other imaginary beings, into a more capacious basin, which is surrounded by full length figures, male and female, dressed in ancient costumes; here all the streams concentrate themselves, pass unperceived through a pillar, and find egress through another mouth, in a copious stream, from which the inhabitants are well supplied with water. The whole of this architectural curiosity is surrounded by iron pallisade of light and elegant workmanship. Numbers of other fountains of simple architecture, are to be met with in the street. The staple trade of Linlithgow is the tanning of leather, and making of shoes, it contains two Breweries, and in its neighbourhood are two Distilleries. At little more than a mile from the town, is the extensive concern of Messrs. James Black and Co. who carry on the calico printing business, in the most spirited manner, and have also a bleachfield and dye works. The Union Canal, which is now cutting passes close by the south side of the town. An extensive basin of excellent masonary opposite the golden lion, offers commodious accommodation to vessels trading on this canal, and a most beautiful aqueduct, unequalled in the united kingdom, conducts its water over the river Avon, and a deep and extensive valley; it stands upon twelve arches, and adds much to the beauty of the surrounding scenery. Linlithgow enjoys a market on a Friday. Fairs annually; and, together with Lanark, Selkirk and Peebles, returns a member to the Imperial Parliament. Its population about 2000.

Post Office, High-street.—Walter Goodlet, Post Master—Mail to Edinburgh at two in the morning, and eleven in the forenoon; to Glasgow at half past eleven at night; to Stirling at eleven in the forenoon; bye post to Borrowstownness at five in the morning, and eleven in the forenoon.

MAYBOLE

IS a small, but neat Market and Post Town of Scotland, situated on the road from Ayr to Girvan, from the former of which it is distant 9 miles and from the latter 12. Some Cotton Goods and Plaidings are manufactured here and considerable quantities of Coal and Limestone are obtained in the neighbourhood. Here is one of those ancient square built and lofty Castles which frequently occur in this district. It is in the possesion of the Earl of Cassilis who is Superior of Maybole. Here are also the vestiges of a dilapidated Collegiate Church now used as a Cemetery. Cross Regalia a celebrated ruin, is about two miles from the town. It was formerly an Abbey, or building appropriated to religious uses. The period of its erection is very remote; a tradition prevailing in the neighboured that it was built by German artists at a time when meal was sold at one penny per boll. It was destroyed at the reformation. Ancient coins have freqnently been found in this town, a large quantity of which were recently discovered in very fine preservation; these of course demonstrate that Maybole is of very ancient origin. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Kilhenzie Castle formerly belonging to a branch of the Cassilis family who where hereditary Baillies of Carrick. Not far distant is the Heart Loch. Here are two remarkably fine springs of water, known by the name of St. Cuthbert's and Well-trees. Here is a Church of the Establishment, and one of the Burghers, also a Court House, and Toll Booth. The Town is governed by two Baillies and Council, a Town Clerk, Treasurer, and Fiscal. Maybole has an excellent Parochial School in which all the branches of useful and ornamental learning are inculcated. The market is held on a Thursday. The Fairs are the first Tuesday in February, O. S.; the last Thursday in April, O. S.; the last Tuesday in July O. S.; and the last Tuesday in October, O. S. The population of the town and parish is about 4000.

Post Office, near the Main-st.—Post Master, Mr. Quintin Jameson.—Mails to Ayr, Kilmarnock, Glasgow, Edinburgh, and England at 8 and 10 at night; to Girvan at 4 P. M. and half past 11 at night; to Ireland by Port-Patrick at half past 11 at night.

MONTROSE

IS a Royal Burgh, and gives the title of Duke to the chief of the noble family of Graham, and it joins with the city of Aberdeen, Aberbrothick, Bervie and Brechan in sending a member to Parliament. Montrose is a Seaport, situated near the mouth of the river South Esk, on the great northern road, 94 miles from Edinburgh. The harbour is formed by the river and an arm of the sea, and is very commodious and convenient, and a safe retreat for all vessels that happen to be near it in tempestuous weather. Two Light-houses have been lately erected at a very great expence, but they are a most invaluable improvement to the harbour, as it enables vessels to take it on the darkest nights. There is also a large house that was built by subscription for the praise worthy object of receiving and recovering, if possible, unfortunate sufferers by shipwreck, &c. which is a most laudable establishment. The quays of this harbour, which have been lately erected, are very judiciously planned, and built in a most substantial manner.

Montrose has enjoyed the privilege of a Royal Burgh for upwards of 600 years, and its corporation consists of nineteen members; viz. a Provost, Dean of Guild, three Baillies, Treasurer, Hospital Master, eight Merchant Counsellors, and four Counsellors from the Trades. The town consists chiefly of one spacious street, about the centre of which is the Town-hall, a plain neat building of two stories, with an arcade below. The houses in the principal part of this Main or High-street are handsome, particularly the British Linen Company's Bank, which is a great embellishment. The High-street is well lighted in winter months, and the flagged pathways are kept in complete repair. There are several streets of minor importance which run from the main street. Close to the town, in the Links, stands the Public Academy, a handsome erection, surmounted by a neat dome, and was built purposely for this establishment. The Lunatic Hospital is also situated in the Links, and is the first institution of the kind ever established in Scotland; it was erected in the year 1779, and has lately been considerably enlarged, and receives also the indigent sick, and is likewise a Dispensary for the relief of out-patients. In 1785, a Public Library was established in this town, on a very liberal plan by Subscription and it succeeded so spiritedly, that at present it is furnished with upwards of 5000 volumes of well selected books. The shipping trade of Montrose is chiefly in the Baltic and coasting, except five large vessels which are employed in the whale fishery. The principal manufacture of the town is linen, sheetings, and sail cloth, which has been carried on extensively, but is now in a very depressed state. The salmon and cod fishing and curing is a considerable branch of traffic in Montrose; last year above 40 tons of dried, and 1000 barrels of salted cod, were shipped for London and elsewhere from this port. But the most important branch of the export trade is corn, of which it is supposed to exceed any other port in Scotland in quantity shipped. The Corn Market is held every Friday.

The situation of Montrose is flat and is formed on a sandy peninsula of the German Ocean, the tide of which and the river flows and spreads itself into a large basin, after it passes the town, and although of no depth, it shows a great expanse of water when the tide flows. The Downs or Links are situated between the town and the sea, and are the most extensive of any in Scotland, comprehending a circuit of two miles, finely formed by nature, for the favorite and healthful well known Scots game of Golf, which is here greatly practised. A fine handsome bridge crosses the river at the entrance of the town from the south, the chief part of which is wood, having a stone arch at either extremity, the entire length of this stupendous erection is 700 feet, crossing a deep and rapid stream. This bridge cost £13,000, and is a great ornament to a new street that is opened at one end of it which leads nearly to the centre of the town.

The population of Montrose is about 8,000; it is twelve miles north of Arbroath, and thirty-seven south of Aberdeen. The market day is on Friday. There are two yearly fairs, the first Friday after Martinmas, and the first Friday after Whitsunday.

Post Office, High-st.—John Aberdeen, Post Master.—The Mail for Edinborough and the South despatched at eight o'clock every evening. To Aberdeen and the North at ten every evening. All Letters for the above Mails must be put into the Office previous to a quarter before eight in the evening, or pay 6d. till the Mail departs; Brechin letters, and for the Western Towns of the County, and for the South West parts of the County of Kincardine, are despatched by Foot Posts at five o'clock every morning and return at seven in the evening.

NEWTON STEWART,

SOME time since called, Newton Douglas, a Burgh of Barony is a small Market and Post Town of Wigtounshire, on the Post road from Dumfries to Port-Patrick, 8 miles from Wigtoun, 16 from Glenluce, 26 from Stranraer and 28 from Dumfries. A considerable quantity of Cotton Goods for the Glasgow market were formerly manufactured here; but which branch has been entirely withdrawn, nor has any other been subtituted, so that the town has very little trade except those branches common to all towns. Here is an extensive Brewery, Tan-Work, and two Corn Mills, and a branch of the British Linen Co's. Bank not long since removed from Wigtoun. A Lead Mine was worked for some time in this neighbourhood, but without ultimate success. Newton Stewart is pleasantly situated on the river Cree, which a few miles lower down empties itself into Wigtoun Bay. Minnigaff is connected with Newton Stewart by a very fine bridge of four arches. The government of the town is vested exclusively in the Magistrates. The Town Hall is a remarkable object in this place, being ornamented with a lofty spire. Here is a Church of the Establishment; one of Relief and one of M'Millan's. There is also a Town Hall and Justice Court in Minnigaff. The market is held on Wednesdays.

PAISLEY

IS a considerable Market and Manufacturing Town in Renfrewshire ; 8 miles from Glasgow, 16 from Greenock, and 52 from Edinburgh ; divided by the river White Cart into the Old and New Town, over which there are three bridges ; the Old Town, on the west bank of the river, occupies an extent of about a mile square ; the New Town and Abbey, on the opposite side, is very extensive. In 1160 a Monastery was founded here for Clunine Monks : the Chancel of the Abbey Church is all that now remains of it. The Town-House, called the Cross, is an elegant building of cut stone, with a lofty spire, in which is a public clock, and were delinqnents are at present confined ; but an extensive Gaol is now erecting on the bank of the river, and, when finished, will supersede the Town-House as a place of confinement.—Paisley is advantageously situated for trade ; which, previously to the year 1760, was confined to coarse linens and handkerchiefs ; at that period the manufacture of lawns and gauze were introduced, and with such complete success, as to entirely destroy this branch of business amongst the Spitalfields weavers : time has, however, witnessed a decline therein, but those of muslin, thread, and cotton, by their astonishing increase, have more than compensated the loss. Here are several Distilleries, Breweries, and Tanneries, also numerous Bleachfields, Cotton Mills, and a large Calico Print Works, all situate on the Leveran Water, in the immediate neighbourhood of Neilston and Barr Head, which give employment to many thousands of men, women and children. Here are likewise Manufacturers of Tapes, and some of Ribbons ; and at Nitshill, on the Leveran Water, is a most extensive Allum and Copperas Works, spiritedly carried on by John Wilson and Son.——

Paisley is most advantageously situated for inland navigation, an excellent Canal, running from hence to the flourishing city of Glasgow, free from locks; but at a short distance from Paisley, is carried over the River Cart by means of an Aqueduct, beautifully ornamented on each side with iron pallisades. The streets are in general wide, well paved, and lighted with lamps. In an elevated situation, presenting a beautiful and lofty spire, is the High Church, near to which is a Grammar School, of recent erection. Near to the High Church is a Chapel, in which divine service is performed in the Gaelic tongue, besides which, and the High Church, there are seven others of different denominations; also one Methodist Chapel, one Baptist, one Roman Catholic, one Independent, and one for the Anabaptists. Amongst the Public Institutions are a Town Hospital, Dispensary and House of Recovery, Hutcheson's Charity School, Paisley Sabbath and week-day Evening School Society, Catholic School Society, Female Bible Society, Female Benevolent Society, Auxiliary Bible Society, Missionary Society to the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, Society for Educating Deaf and Dumb Children, Humane Society, Trades Library, Philosophical Institution, Theological Library, Provident Bank, Subscription Library, and Coffee Rooms. In the centre of Gauze-street, is an elegant Inn, erected by the Marquiss of Abercorn. Attached to the Flesh Market is a small Market for the sale of Fish. The River Cart is of the greatest service to numerous dyers and others, turning several mills, &c.; near to one of which is a most picturesque Waterfall.—Paisley is a Burgh, governed by a Provost and other Magistrates. Its Market day is Thursday: its Fairs are held on the third Thursdays in February and May, and the second Thursdays in August and November; and its Inhabitants exceed 40,000.

Post-Office, 88, Moss-street.—Alexander Kerr, Post Master.——Mail to Glasgow and Edinburgh at five o'clock in the morning. The letters to be put in the Office before ten the preceding night; to Glasgow with the West of England, London, and Foreign Mails; half-past twelve at noon; to Glasgow, Edinburgh, North of Scotland and Ireland; at six o'clock in the afternoon; to Renfrew, Johnstone, Beith and Dalry every forenoon.

PERTH.

THIS city, which is 44 miles north of Edinburgh, not only gives name to the parish but also to the extensive county in which it is situated. It appears to have once assumed the name of St. John. At the early period when the Scots' king succeeded to the Pictish throne, the church and bridge of Perth were supposed then to have been consecrated to St. John the Baptist, as the tutelary saint of the town, and consequently it progressively gained the name of St. John's Town, but it does not appear to be fully known whether it was ever recognized by that name in any of the public writs of that period; however the origin of its present name may be very plausibly conjectured by Fordun's History, wherein he remarks that he had found in some ancient writs, that the town of St. John, now called Perth, was anciently called Bertha, and the contracted name of Bertha being Berth or Bert, and as the letters B and P are used in the Gaelic language indiscriminately, hence it may naturally be presumed that the Highlanders might have changed the pronunciation of it to Perth, and from this circumstance it is very probable that the present name of the town is derived. The word Perth is at this period pronounced by the Highlanders Peirt, or Peart.

Perth is most delightfully situated on the banks of the river Tay, about twenty miles from its mouth. The environs of this town boast of scenery marked by uncommon beauty, and also distinguished for many remarkable and interesting events in history. The entrance to Perth from the Edinburgh road is on a gradual descent to the South Inch, and is beautifully picturesque. At the commencement of the Inch, (a spacious green,) is a grand avenue of trees which extend to the town, on the north side of which is another Inch or Green equally delightful. These fine expanded lawns are embellished by the Tay, which flows along their green banks, the opposite shore being clothed in all the luxuriance that art and unwearied cultivation can produce. Adjoining the north Inch is a bridge that crosses the Tay. This fine erection, elegant yet unadorned, is built in a most substantial manner, and has hitherto resisted an accumulated pressure of ice and water. Immediately across the bridge is the village of Bridge End, leading to Kinnoul Hill, whose summit at the distance of 1½ mile, can be most agreeably ascended by Montague Walk, winding through a wood about one half of the distance. The precipice of Kinnoul is above 600 feet perpendicular, and presents one of the most enchanting views that ever nature formed. The noble river which flows along the base of this stupendous height—the hills and more immediate objects in the foreground, and the grandeur of the mountainous perspective, present a scene that can scarcely be equalled.

On the eastern bank of the river, about two miles from Perth, stands Scone Palace, this structure (of so much note in history) has been lately re-erected, and is a most magnificent pile of building; it is surrounded by extensive pleasure grounds, highly embellished. A short distance from the Palace is the Chapel, also newly built, and is surrounded by majestic trees, adding to it an air of great, although pleasing solemnity. Before the reign of King James, the Kings of Scotland were crowned in Scone Palace.

The vicinity of Perth abounds with interesting situations and views, and, indeed, they should be visited to form a just conception of their beauties. The town itself is large and well built, the streets are long and spacious, and kept remarkably clean, well paved and lighted. Opposite the North Inch and fronting the Tay, is an elegant row of houses called Rose-terrace; in the centre are erected the Public Seminaries, of fine stone, embellished with noble pillars, this Institution is established on the most liberal principles; the course of education is completed in two annual Sessions of ten months each, the Session commencing in October and ending in July. The Masters comprehend, a Rector for Mathematics and the higher branches of education, and his Assistant; a Master for the Modern Languages; one for Drawing and Painting; and a Master for Practical Arithmetic and Accounts. The Grammar School has also a Rector and his Assistant: the fees of attendance paid by the Students are very moderate. At the south end of Rose-terrace is a handsome row of houses forming a crescent, and in the highest degree ornamental to that part of the town. A little to the south of the bridge, on a line with the river, the New Prison and County Buildings are erected; the principle front is very handsome and embellished in the centre by an elegant portico, supported by twelve massive columns; the front is of free stone, and the edifice has a noble effect when viewed from the opposite side of the Tay. This building contains the Court of Justiciary, which is of circular form; the gallery is most judiciously constructed, and will hold 1000 people. The various apartments for the affairs of the Court on the ground floor are spacious and handsome, and the repositories for the records of the town are finished in the most complete style of security; above is an extensive ball-room, with an elegant card-room adjoining; over this suite of rooms is a spacious supper-room, the ceiling supported by handsome fluted pillars.

The places for Divine Worship in this town, do not exhibit much exterior beauty. St.

John's church is a very ancient edifice, something in the cathedral style; it has a square tower surmounted by a spire, and is supposed to be the first church in this kingdom that was built with stone. On the outside of the tower are affixed a set of bells, covered by a sort of portico There are also a number of Meeting Houses for Dissenting Congregations, and a Chapel of Ease, at the head of High-st.

Perth is a Royal Burgh, and joins with Dundee, Forfar, Cuparfife and St. Andrews, in sending a Member to the Imperial Parliament. It is governed by a Provost, who exercises the offices of Sheriff and Coroner within the town, three Baillies, a Dean of Guild, Treasurer, and Town Council.

The trade of Perth consists chiefly in the manufacture of cottons, and some Linens; in the neighbourhood are extensive print and bleach-works.

The following brief remarks will, it is hoped, be found sufficiently interesting to apologize for their introduction:—

In 1210 William the Lion constituted this city a Royal Burgh, confirming its former privileges.
1298 After the battle of Falkirk Edward I. rebuilt the walls of Perth.
1306 Robert Bruce attacked Perth without success.
1311 The town was taken by escalade; burnt, and the works levelled.
After the battle of Duplin, Baliol took possession and fortified it: shortly afterwards it was again taken and the wall destroyed.
1339 It was besieged and taken by the Regent Robert.
In the year 1437 James I. was murdered by Robert Graham.
Perth was the scene of a frustrated attempt to assassinate James VI.
The first demolition of Monasteries began at Perth.
1664 The Marquis of Montrose seized the town after the battle of Tibbermuir.
1651 Town taken by Cromwell.
1715 The Earl of Mar and his forces lay here a considerable time.
In this city John Knox harrangued when preaching the Reformed Religion. The Church is still standing and has been modernized,
New stone bridge was erected in 1771, across the Tay; whole length 906 feet, cost £26,000, and supposed the finest in North Britain.
The annual rent of the Salmon Fishery is upwards of £7000.

The population of Perth is considered to be about 25,000. There are two weekly markets held on Wednesday and Friday. The annual Fairs are six, viz. first Friday of March, first Friday of April, 5th July, 9th September, 20th October, and 11th December. When either of the dates of the last four fall on the Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, the fair is held on the Tuesday following.

PORT GLASGOW

IS a small, but flourishing Sea Port Town, in Renfrewshire, eighteen miles west of Glasgow, and three from Greenock, built on the left bank of the Clyde, which opposite to this town is two miles broad; though only navigable in parts of the stream, for vessels of burden, notwithstanding which circumstance, the harbour at spring tides, admits of vessels of considerable tonnage, and on its quays, which are excellent, there are several good and commodious sheds erected for the reception of goods and accomodation of merchants, close to the water's edge. At the eastern extremity of the town stands an old Castle, in a good state of preservation, though not used as a place of defence or safety. In the year 1775, the town of new Port Glasgow and Newark was by an Act of Parliament erected into a Burgh of Barony with a Council of thirteen persons, out of which number two Baillies are elected. This town is protected to the south by a range of high hills, and has a beautiful view of corresponding ones to the north, as also of the hill on which is situated Dumbarton Castle, on a point, formed by the junction of the Clyde and the Leven, its appearance is singularly picturesque and imposing; standing on the top of a nearly perpendicular rock, which divides it in the middle and forms two summits, which are said to have magnetic properties. Port Glasgow consists of a few respectable streets, with some very narrow lanes. It has, however, a modern built Town-house, with a handsome lofty spire and clock. It also possesses a good market for shambles meat; and in its immediate neighbourhood are numerous eligible mansions, the residences of opulent merchants and tradesmen: nor is it deficient in religious houses, having two Kirks, a Burghers Chapel, and one for Methodists. It has a charity school in which upwards of a hundred children of both sexes are educated, and instructed in the leading principles of Christianity. Here is an extensive ropery, two sugar refining houses, with ship builders' and numerous timber yards. Port Glasgow enjoys no inconsiderable share of the West India, and Baltic trade, together with that from Spain and Portugal.

Its market is held on a Friday; its annual Fair on the third Tuesday in July. The number of inhabitants are stated at 5000.

Post Office, Princess-street.—Post Master, James Lusk.—Mail to Greenock every morning at nine, eleven in the forenoon, and seven at night. To Glasgow every morning at half-past ten, at half-past four afternoon, and at half-past ten at night.

STIRLING.

AT the distance of 35 miles north west of Edinburgh, is situated on the sloping ridge of a rock, and on the southern side of the Forth; holding the fifth rank among the Royal Burghs of the kingdom. The Palace, within a strong Castle on the north west side of the town, is a stately building, in form of a square, the outside curiously ornamented with grotesque figures. The ground story is now converted into barracks. The foundation of the castle, is a basaltic rock, around which is a pleasant walk.

The prospect from the castle is delightful, comprising, northward, the Ochills, verdant to their summits; the Strath of Monteith westward, bounded by high mountains; and eastward, the Carse of Stirling, open to Edinburgh, and Arthur's seat. The Town-house is large, and has a lofty square tower, surmounted by a vane, with a clock, and a set of musical chimes; attached to the Town-house is the Gaol.

Stirling enjoys the benefit of three well endowed Hospitals, has a good Grammar School, two Churches, one of which is an elegant building, and kept in a good state of repair. Besides which, there are Chapels belonging to different sectarians. There are several Sunday Schools, also in this ancient town; and numerous Charitable Institutions. At the top of Quality-street, which is wide, but irregularly built, is an elegant modern building, called the New Steeple, of hewn stone. The spire is lofty, and possesses a good clock, with four faces; the ground stories are converted into shops, are circular in front, to give a greater facility of entrance into two streets, which here branch out; part of this building is used as a reading room, and is called the Athenæum. Close to the New Steeple, is an extensive Corn-market. There is also a large flesh-market; the streets in general are very irregular, and the houses mostly bear the stamp of antiquity; though numerous well built modern edifices, are to be seen in the environs of the town, particularly in the direct road leading to the ancient town of St. Ninians.

The windings of the Forth, as viewed from the Castle, appear more the work of art than nature, rendering the scenery truly picturesque, and, suggesting an idea of reluctancy to leave the romantic spot. The staple manufacture is that of carpets. Stirling is a place of considerable antiquity, having received its Charter from Alexander I. and is governed by a Lord, Provost, 4 Baillies, and 21 Councellors, who are chosen annually. Its fairs, are held on the first Friday in Feb. the last Friday in May, the first Friday in Aug. third Friday in Sept. first Friday in Nov. and second Friday in Dec. Its market day is Friday. And its population, is stated at 6000.

STRANRAER,

Is a Royal Burgh of considerable antiquity, in Wigtonshire, seated at the head of the Bay of Loch Ryan. It is the seat of a Presbytery, and the chief town of the district of Galloway called the Rhyns. It is a port of the Custom House, of which all the harbours of the Rhyns are members. The harbour of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, and a pier of some extent is now forming, which it is hoped will prove a convenience to the shipping.

The Town is governed by a Provost, 2 Baillies, a Dean of Guild, and 15 Counsellors, and joins with Wigtoun, new Galloway and Whithorn, in sending a Member to Parliament. In the town is an ancient Castle, which possesses little worthy of remark. Castle Kennedy about 3 miles distant, and Culhorn about 2 miles, are in the possession of the Earl of Stair: about 6 miles from the town is a very fine roadstead for shipping at the Cairn; so great is the breadth and depth of water that a fleet of men of war might anchor in it with safety. The town has one Church of Establishment, one of Burghers, one of Anti Burghers and one of Cameronians. It is in contemplation to establish an Academy. Here is a News Room and Subscription Library, with three circulating ones. A new building has lately been erected here for the purpose of a Masonic Lodge. The Town Hall ornamented with a spire is situated in the Main-street. The only Manufactures of the place, are leather, shoes for exportation and some hats. Two considerable Linen Markets are held here in the months of May and August; the Races are in August; Market on Friday; the Fairs are the first Friday in May; Landmill, Friday before Whit Sunday; Horse Fair, Thursday before G. Fair, Kelton Hill, Landmill, last Friday in June and July; third Friday in August; Landmill, last Friday in August & September; Horse Fair, Thursday before Michaelmas; Ayr Fair, the last Friday in October; Landmill, last Friday in November; Horse Fair, Thursday before New Year's Ayr Fair.

PORT PATRICK, is a small town and parish, nine miles (by the new mail coach road) from Stranraer, being only twenty-one miles from Donaghadee in Ireland, it is much frequented by travellers to that country. The town is delightfully situated, with a fine prospect to the south and surrounded on the other side by a ridge of small hills in the form of an Amphitheatre. The castle of Dunskey stands on the brink of a tremendous precipice on the coast of the Irish Sea, Here is a good inn and some smaller houses for the entertainment of strangers. The population is about 1000.

Post Office, Stranraer, High-st.—Post Mistress, Dorothy M'Nish—Mail to Dumfries and England, at half past ten in the morning, to Ayr, Glasgow and Edinburgh, at half past twelve at noon, to Port Patrick and Ireland at ten in the morning,

WIGTOUN

Is a Royal Burgh, and capital of that district of Galloway to which it gives name, is pleasantly situated on the side of a hill, overlooking the river Cree, near the mouth of the Bladenoch, which at this place jointly fall into Wigtoun Bay. The town which is supposed to have been built by the Saxons, when they were in possession of this part of the country, in the eighth century, has one very good street, and is the Presbytery seat, and Port of the Custom-house, comprehending the Creeks of Wigtonshire, from the Mull of Galloway to the Mouth of the river Dee; it is governed by a Provost, two Baillies and twelve Counsellors, and with Whithorn, Stranraer, and New Galloway, sends a Member to Parliament.

The centre of the town forms an oblong square, the interior of which has an enclosed shrubbery with promenades. The Tolbooth, or Town House, which commands a view of the Cree, contains the County Court, Assembly Room and Subscription Library. Here is a remarkably neat Market Cross built of granite. Wigtoun has one Church of the Establishment, and one of Antiburghers. Vessels of small burthen approach the town. The principal export is grain; the import being principally coals.

Wigtoun parish is six miles in length and four in breadth, and is of an irregular oblong shape. The surface is much diversified with hills, rising grounds and plains, the principal heights of which are Largs 1758, Knock of Luce 1014, Fell of Mochrum 1020, and Burhullion 814 feet above the level of the sea. On the plains and the banks of the Bladenoch the soil is very productive being light and dry. There is moor and moss interspersed over different parts, and at the west end of the parish are the standing Stones of Torr-house, consisting of about nineteen large stones of granite in the form of a circle, supposed to have been Druidical Temples.

Markets for cattle are held here on the first and third Fridays of each month from March to Nov. inclusive. The Fairs are the first Friday in February O. S.; the first Monday in April O. S.; the 17th of June O. S. and the last Fridays in August and Oct. Population about 2000.

Post Master, Mr. Stewart Gulline.—Mail from Edinburgh and England arrives at eight morning, dispatched at twelve at noon. Letters arrive from Whithorn at eight morning, and are dispatched at ten morning

COMMERCIAL DIRECTORY

OF THE

Four Northern Counties of England.

ALNWICK,

In the county of Northumberland, is most delightfully situated, on the great road leading from Newcastle upon Tyne, to Edinburgh, at the distance of 119 miles from the latter, and 35 from the former, 30 from Berwick upon Tweed, and 306 from London. In the year 1093, Malcolm III. with his son Edward were killed here, and their army defeated, by Robert Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland. About a mile from Alnwick, there is a cross erected on the spot where Malcolm fell. His great grandson William first, invading England with an army of 80,000 men, was encountered here in 1174, when his troops were routed, and himself made prisoner, to perpetuate which memorable event, at a short distance from the town, a small, neat Monument is erected, in an enclosure close to the road side, and bears the following inscription. "William the Lion, King of Scootland, besieging Alnwick Castle, was here taken prisoner, MCLXXIV."

Alnwick appears to have been fortified in former times, from the vestiges of a wall, still to be seen in several parts, and three gates which remain almost entire. Its Church is an ancient fabric; and, within a few minutes walk of the town, are the remains of an Abbey, in a good state of preservation. Here is the seat of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland, it is an old stately castle, of gothic architecture. At the foot of the eminence on which it stands, runs the river in beautiful windings, and the whole prospect in its immediate neighbourhood is truly picturesque. Not many yards from the road leadto Newcastle, and close to the town of Alnwick, on an eminence, is a superb colossal pillar, to the memory of Hugh, Duke of Northumberland, erected by his grateful tenantry, as a mark of the high estimation in which they held him. Alnwick has a large Town House, where the Quarter Sessions and the County Courts are held; it is also the place where its representatives are elected to serve in parliament. In a spacious square, in a central part of the town, stands the shambles, surrounded with piazzas, the whole has a fine effect. In this square a market is held every Saturday, and five fairs annually; pleasantly and healthfully situated, is Bondgate Hall, the elegant mansion of John Carr, Esq. On the 25th of October, 1810, his Grace the Duke of Northumberland founded a School, which was opened on the 12th of August, 1811, for the education of 200 boys; the school is conducted on the Madras and Lancasterian systems. There is likewise a School here, under the patronage of her grace the Duchess of Northumberland, in which 20 poor girls are clothed and educated. In the patroness of these poor children, the fair sex will find a model worthy of imitation. The streets of Alnwick are in general wide, and well paved; its Shops are numerous and respectable, with several good Inns; amongst which should be particularly noticed, the Star, Fenkle-street. The town is well supplied with water, which is obtained without labour, by means of fountains situated in different parts of the town. The maner of acquiring the elective franchise, is peculiar to this place, and is as whimsical, as it is singular; when a resident assumes his freedom, a holly tree is planted at the door of his house, the authorities of the town assemble, and, mounted on horseback, preceded by a band of music, and accompanied by the candidate for the freedom of the borough, who is also on horseback, and clad in white, march in cavalcade to a certain puddle, or as the people of Alnwick term it, the Freeman's Well, through which he must scramble, before he becomes free; after the ceremony is performed, which creates much merriment and laughter, the procession returns to the town, parade the principal streets, and the remainder of the day is spent in the most festive manner; this ceremony is owing to King John, who was mired in this well, and who, as a punishment for their not mending the road, made this a part of their charter.

The government of Alnwick is vested in twenty-four Common Councilmen, and four Chamberlains, who are chosen out of the former. Fairs are held on Palm Sunday Eve, May 12th, last Monday in July, and the first Tuesday in October, and on the 28th of the same month, and the Saturday before Christmas Day. Population about 6000.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED

Is a Royal Burgh, on the borders of England and Scotland, and a town of considerable importance. Dr. Fuller observes that, Berwick is of Saxon or Teutonic origin. It is called Berwick-upon-Tweed, to distinguish it from North Berwick in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England; and is very pleasantly situated on the north, or Scots' side of the Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that river empties itself into the German Ocean, in the bay of Berwick.

It was originally a Scots town, but has been for a considerable period, a distant liberty, having a small district attached to it, called Berwick bounds, which run about three miles north, and about the same distance ascending the Tweed. The antiquity of this celebrated frontier town, is beyond all doubt, very great; it is mentioned as a place of great strength in the reign of Osbert, one of the last Kings of Northumberland; and is said to be the place where the Danes landed in one of their incursions under Hubba, in the year 867. It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some time, and afterwards in that of the Danes, until the Scottish King, Gregory, who was cotemporary with Alfred the Great, took it by assault. About the year 1098, Berwick was given to the see of Durham, by Edgar, but the donation was soon after resumed, in consequence of the ingratitude of Ralph Flambert, who had been consecrated Bishop of that see.

William the first of Scotland, who, in 1174, had joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains, before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland, and as a security, he was forced to deliver up to Henry, the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal forts of Scotland.

After numerous contests between the English and Scots, and after numerous viscissitudes of fortune, John of England, to cover his retreat, burnt the towns of Coldingham and Berwick, treating the inhabitants of the latter place with the greatest cruelty. Berwick was afterwards rebuilt by the Scots, and a meeting took place here, in the year 1216, of the Archbishop of York, and the Bishop of Durham, to absolve from a sentence of excommunication, Alexander, King of Scotland, who attended in person. On the second day of August, 1291, the states of England and Scotland, with Edward the First, assembled at Berwick, to determine the claims of Robert Bruce and John Baliol, to the Scottish Crown; when after numerous conferences, on the 17th. of November, in the follow-year, the King appointed John Baliol, successor to the Crown. This town was formerly the principal one of the Kingdom of Merse, standing on a gentle declivity, close by the sea, which, till very lately, was regularly fortified, having high walls, and a ditch on the north east, the river serving for a moat on the south side: its gates, and a drawbridge are still standing, but the cannon have recently been removed to Leith. Its Castle, which was once very strong, is now in ruins, there is however, a large Barrack for Infantry in the town, situated near to the Church, which is a Rectory in the diocese of Durham. The Church is without steeple, the inhabitants being called to divine service by a peal of six bells, placed in the steeple of the Town-house, which is a large and beautiful building. Berwick is a regular, well built town, joined to England by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of fifteen spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge, is 1164 feet, and its width 17 feet. At each of the pillars, which are 14 in number, there is an outlet, to both sides, for the greater safety of foot passengers, when carriages, &c. are meeting on the bridge. The sixth pillar, from the Berwick side, separates that town from the county palatine of Durham, the battlements at the outlet of this pillar, are always covered with sods, as a guide to Constables, and others in the execution of warrants. In Berwick, there is a Charity School in which thirty two boys are clothed and educated. The school is in a retired situation in Union-street. Mr. John Easton, is the present Schoolmaster. besides the Charity School, there are six Free Schools belonging to the Corporation, namely, a Grammar School, in which the Latin and Greek classics are taught. A Mathematical School, one for writing, and three for reading; to each of which, the children of freemen of the town have access, free of expence.

The latter five schools are held in an elegant School-house, healthfully situated on the Bank-hill, commanding a fine view of the river, the bridge, and the populous village of Tweedmouth. The Burghers, Anti-Burghers and Methodists, have places of worship here; and numerous Charitable Institutions contribute to the support of the unfortunate. The population is stated to exceed 5000 within the walls, besides a considerable number in the suburbs, which are extensive. The principal branch of trade, is the exportation of salmon, caught in the Tweed, to the London market; the fishing commences on the 10th. of January, and finishes on the 10th. of October: the scene of fishing is from the mouth of the river to Norham, a distance of seven miles.

There is a most excellent Pier, of a very considerable length, which, during the summer months, forms a fashionable walk. Berwick Church yard is noted for the incredible number of tomb stones which it contains.

The English Judges hold Assizes here.

The town is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, four Bailliffs, a Town Clerk, a Coroner and Treasurer, besides which six Constables are chosen annually. It sends two Members to Parliament. Its market day Saturday, and its annual Fairs are held on 2d Wednesday in May, for cattle and horses; first Wednesday preceding the 26th August, and first Wednesday in November.

Post Office, Bottom of Western-lane.—James Forster, Post Master. South Mail, every morning, at 3 o'clock. North Mail, every evening at 7. A Mail is dispatched to Kelso, every morning, at half past 3. The receiver box is shut every night at half past 9.

CARLISLE.

THE remote accounts of this City are involved in great obscurity, and whatever relates to its history previous to the time of the Romans, must be received with great caution. It was called by them Lugvuallium, a tower or fort by the wall. The wall of Servius running within a short distance. The Saxons added the word Caer or City, and from these, Caerluel or Luguval, may be derived the modern appellation Carlisle. When the Danes possessed themselves of the Northern parts of the Island, this city was reduced to ashes, it continued a heap of ruins till the reign of William Rufus. That monarch having a perfect idea of the importance of this place, as a frontier town, and being charmed with with the beauty of its situation, undertook to restore the city, and caused many public buildings to be erected, which he defended by a strong wall and fortress. The situation of Carlisle near the borders of Scotland, exposed it to continued assaults from its hostile neighbours. The warlike reign of King Edward I. brought Carlisle into particular notice; In the thirty-fifth year of his reign he summoned his Parliament to meet in this City. In the civil wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, in the reigns of Edward IV. and Henry VI. this city was much harassed. During Aske's rebellion, Nicholas Musgrave, Thomas Tilby, and other favourers of that cause, besieged Carlisle with 8000 men, but were repulsed, and on their return encountered by the Duke of Norfolk, who caused all the captains, except Musgrave to be hanged on Carlisle walls. In the reign of Elizabeth, Mary Queen of Scots taking refuge in England, after the decisive battle of Langside, was imprisoned by her royal relative in the castle of this city.

Carlisle is delightfully situated in an extensive vale, formed by the rivers Eden, Caldew, and Petterel, over the former of which is one of the handsomest bridges in the North of England. The city stands on a kind of peninsula, formed by the junction of the two latter with the former. The grounds on all sides of the city are fertile and well cultivated. At a distance are visible those celebrated mountains, Skiddaw, Saddleback, and Cross-fell. The approach to Carlisle from from the south is beautiful and picturesque; when the traveller come to Heraby, a village a little more than a mile from the city, the road leads him across a fertile valley watered by the river Petterel. The eye commands an extensive prospect towards the north and east, and in the middle the city rises, overtopped by the massive towers of the castle on the west; the cathedral still higher in the centre, and in the east arise the embattled towers of the New Courts of Justice, on the scite of the ancient citadel. Passing Botchergate, the road winds round the western tower of the citadel, and passes the English Gate and County Gaol; on each avenue the city wall is visible. The street leading directly to the north is spacious and adorned with elegant buildings; it is called English-street, and terminates at the Market-place. The Town Hall commands a view up English-street, and likewise towards Scotch-street. It contains two spacious apartments, one of which is used by the Corporation to transact all public business, the other is for the purpose of holding the Mayor's Court, electing Members of Parliament for the City, &c.: the Court of Assize is held here annually. From the Market-place, the principal streets called Scotch-street, Castle street, and Fisher-street, diverge as from a centre. At the head of the latter and facing the Market-place, is the ancient Guildhall, appropriated to the meetings of the trades.

Carlisle has two parishes viz. St. Mary and St. Cuthbert. The Cathedral is a noble pile, having a stately steeple with a set of bells, which are remarkable for their fine tone.

St.Cuthbert's is a neat modern building,without any ornament. There are in Carlisle three Protestant Dissenting Meeting Houses; one for the Society of Friends; one for the Methodists, and a Roman Catholic Chapel. The markets are held on the Wednesday and Saturday. The corporation consists of a Mayor, twelve Alderman, twenty-four Common Council and Subordinate Officers; the Freemen amount to upwards of 700. Here are several extensive cotton mills, and a considerable quantity of calicoes, muslins, ginghams, checks, &c. are manufactured. A Dispensary was instituted in 1782, and an immense number of indigent sick have been relieved. Coal has lately been discovered in the neighbourhood, and much benefit is anticipated from the formation of a canal.

Carlisle being situated on the great western road between London and the North, is much frequented by travellers, and a great number of mails and other coaches are seen constantly moving through it. The population is computed at 15,000. This city is distant from London 307 miles, from Edinburgh 90, from Dumfries 39, and from Penrith 18. Races are held annually, and Fairs on Aug, 15th and 26th, September 8th, 19th, and 1st and 2d Saturday after October 10th.

COCKERMOUTH,

Is a borough and market town of Cumberland, situated on the west side of the Derwent and at the mouth of the river Cocker, whence its name is derived, this latter flows through the town previous to its junction with the Derwent. It is neatly but not very regularly built, of low situation between two hills, upon one of which stands the Church, and upon the other are the vestiges of a castle, built shortly after the conquest. This town possesses many local advantages of situation, the surrounding country being populous and fertile, having a plentiful supply of water from two fine streams and other sources, several valuable coal mines, and 3 sea ports within a short distance. Here are two bridges, one of which of two arches is 270 feet in length, and crosses the Derwent, the other of 160 feet crosses the Cocker, connecting the eastern and south western parts of the town. During the civil wars in the reign of Charles I. the castle was garrisoned for the King, but being beseiged and taken it was dismantled. The Church dedicated to all Saints was rebuilt in 1711, it is very commodious; the steeple contains a peal of six bells, with a clock and chimes. The town is governed by a Bailiff who is chosen annually at the Michaelmas Court of the Lord of the Manor, and sends two members to Parliament. The principal manufactures are woollens, cotton checks, tanned leather, and hats. The number of inhabitants are computed at 3500. Here is a free Grammar School, and a Library, with Charity and Sunday Schools, and an Alms House for poor widows; here are also meeting Houses for dissenters and the Society of Friends. The market is held on Monday, and every second Wednesday there are shews of cattle; these shews which resemble fairs, continue from the month of May until Michaelmas. The regular fairs are on Whit Monday and Martinmas Monday.

Post Master, Mr. William Wood—Office at the Globe Inn.—Mail arrives every afternoon at 15 minutes past four, departs at 12 every evening.

DARLINGTON

Is a neat Market Town, in the county of Durham, from the city of which name it is distant 18 miles, and 238 from London. It is situated on the side of a hill, which slopes to the River Skerne, over which there is a Bridge. Darlington has extensive Manufactories of Woollen and Linen Goods, also one of Heckles and Spectacles. The Town has a respectable appearance, and consists of several streets branching from an extensive square, where the Market is held on Mondays and Fridays, and it is well supplied with corn and provisions. On the south-west angle of the Market-place is the Church built by Bishop Hugh Pudsey, about the year 1160. On the margin of the river are the remains of a Palace formerly the residence of the Bishops of Durham. Adjacent is the Grammar School founded by Elizabeth, about the year 1567, besides which there is a Charity School for 20 boys, and several Sunday Schools, a Chapel for Methodists, a Friends Meeting House, an Independent Chapel, and one of Roman Catholics. Here is a neat Town House, erected in 1808, where the Petty Sessions are held; a Dispensary, a Savings Bank, and commodious Meat Market. Some time since a Mill was erected for the purpose of grinding Optical Glasses, supposed to be the first of the kind in Great Britain.—Darlington is one of the four Ward Towns of the County. At Oxenhall, a hamlet between Darlington and the Tees, are four large cavities in the earth, denominated Hell Kettles, and are thought to have no bottom. To the origin of these pits are attached many fabulous conjectures; the most probable of which is that they were formerly used as coal pits, and have been rendered useless by the rising of water in them.—Fairs are held on the first Monday in March, Easter Monday, Whit-Monday, and the second Monday after Nov. 9th, for horses; Nov. 10th. for horned cattle and sheep; Nov. 13, for hogs; Nov. 22, a general fair; a fortnight after, one for cattle, horses and sheep.——Its Population is computed at 6,000 inhabitants.

Post-Office, High Row.—Richard Wilson, Post-Master.—A Mail to the South every afternoon at fifteen minutes past five; one to the North every morning at five; and a Post Boy to Bernard Castle every evening at half-past five.

DURHAM

THE city of Durham lies nearly in the centre of the county of the same name, 263 miles north of London, 14 from Newcastle, 12 from Sunderland, and 18 from Darlington. Approaching this place from the south, we are gratified with its elegant situation and the grandeur of its public buildings. In the centre the Castle and Cathedral crown a very lofty eminence, which descends to the river Wear. The banks on the opposite side of the river are bold and rocky, partially covered with shrubs. From the north it has the most romantic and uncommon appearance; it seems to be dispersed over a multitude of irregular hills, and we discover various parts of the town, the Castle and Churches, through several vallies from one point of view. From the Church of St. Giles, which stands upon very elevated ground, there opens to the south, an unobstructed view. In front, the meadow grounds form a deep descent to the river, on one wing closed by the wood called Pelaw, on the other by the buildings of the street; at the foot of the hill the river Wear forms a beautiful canal, almost a mile in length, terminated by Elvet bridge on the right, and by the wooded inclosures of Old Durham on the left; on the opposite shore is the race ground, consisting of an extended tract of level meads, from whence by a gradual ascent rise the two Elvets, the street of Old Elvet projecting in a right line, the other obliquely bordered with gardens, and terminated by Elvet Church, a handsome structure. The channel of the river lying between New Elvet and the Bailies affords an agreeable change in the scene; crowned by the Cathedral, which presents its north and east fronts. To the right is seen Elvet bridge, which receives the stream and intercepts a further view of the progress of the river; over it rise the buildings of Sadler-street, the towers of the gaol, and the battlements of the Castle. Between the chief objects, (the Cathedral and Castle) on the nearer back ground is South-street, with its hanging gardens, making a fine curvature; behind which is Brandon Mount, with a spot of high land, extending towards Auckland; farther to the right rise the buildings of the market-place. The name of this city is said to be derived from its situation, the term being a corruption from the Saxon words, Dur-a-hill, and Holme a river Island. The city of Durham was founded about the 10th. century, when the monks of the Island of Lindisfarne being harrassed by the Danes left their place of sanctity, carrying with them the holy relics, together with the remains of St. Cuthbert and other religious treasures; they first retired to Cuneagaster, now Chester-le-street, afterwards to Rippon, and lastly to Dunholme. The situation of the Cathedral is extremely grand; the building stretching along the crown of an eminence about 80 feet perpendicular from the river. On the west it rises on the point of rocks, which shew themselves on the summit of the mount, and almost overhang the stream. The whole length of this venerable pile, exclusive of the Gallilee, is 411 feet, and the height of the middle tower is 214 feet, the ornaments of the towers are modern; the centre tower which rises from the intersection of the nave and transept is singularly rich and elegant. Besides the Cathedral, here are six Parish Churches, St. Oswald's, which is situated at the top of New Elvet, is a very ancient structure, remarkable for its vaulted roof of wood, it has a neat gallery and six musical bells. St. Nicholas Church is situated at the lower end of the Market-place, it is a very ancient plain structure. The Church of St. Mary-le-bow is situated on the east side of the Bailey, it is built of hewn stone in a very neat and uniform style. According to tradition this Church stands on the spot where St. Cuthbert's remains were lodged when they were first brought to Durham. St. Giles Church is of remote origin, being narrow, long, and lofty, and without aisles. The other Churches are St. Magaret's, in Cross-gate, and Little St. Mary's, in the South Bailey. Besides the Churches, there are two Roman Catholic Chapels, one Independent Meeting House, one Presbyterian, one Friends Meeting, and a Methodist Chapel. The Castle is the residence of the Bishop when he visits Durham, the building of which is attributed to William the Conqueror. On the west side of the Palace Green is the Exchequer, in which the courts of Chancery, Exchequer, Auditor, &c. are now held: on the south-side of Claypath are spacious Charity Schools for the education of the children of the poor, on Dr. Bell's plan; they were opened in January, 1812. An Infirmary was established in the year 1792. Here also are two Manufactories, one for Carpets and the other for Worsted. The city is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, 12 Aldermen, Town Clerk, 24 Common-council Men, and two Sergeants at mace.—Sessions for the county of Durham, Epiphany; first Monday after.—Easter; first Monday after Easter week. -Midsummer; first Monday after St. Thomas-á-Becket.—Michaelmas; first Monday after 11th. KENDAL

Is a neat and well built market town in Westmoreland, and is situated in a pleasant and healthful valley, with the river Kent washing its southern side. Many of the streets are narrow about the centre of the town, but those which run from thence to the extremities in various directions, are more spacious. The houses being generally whitened, and the roofs covered with blue slates, gives the whole a very clean and striking appearance. The situation of the city of Bath in Somersetshire, may be considered as greatly similar to that of Kendal, hanging on the southern declivity of a range of hills, bordering a low vale, which is watered by the Avon as this town is by the river Kent. The vale through which the Kent flows, spreads itself considerably on each hand, varying its dimensions and winding its course till it reaches the Estuary at Milnthorp. The road leading to the north from Kendal crosses the Kent by a good stone bridge, which has lately undergone great alterations and repairs, and is now rendered very convenient and commodious; the road leading from the other end of the town, forms an abrupt turn over a very old bridge. Between these two bridges there is a good foot bridge of stone. The town of Kendal does not present many public buildings of note. The Church is a large Gothic fabric, with a square tower, it has double aisles, and at the east end are four chapels or choirs. Near to the Church is Abbot Hall, the property of Sir Allen Chambre, knight. It is a handsome edifice, with a beautiful lawn extending to the river, and embellished with a variety of pleasing walks and shrubberies.

On the opposite side of the water are the noble ruins of a once strong castle, which stands on a fine green hill, and forms a picturesque and conspicuous object from most parts of the vale. Much of the enclosure wall of this castle still remains, a small part of two towers, one round and one square. The entire building appears to have been extensive, and built of rough stone strongly cemented; with an enclosed court and surrounded by a moat. It is generally believed to stand on the scite of a Roman station, and to have been erected by the first barons of Kendal. At the east end of the town is an extensive House of Industry, built some years since. The House of Correction stands near to this establishment. Besides the Workhouse there are several other charitable institutions which are respectably supported. Kendal and its vicinity present many handsome houses which belong to private gentlemen and manufacturers. There is a Museum in the town containing a variety of valuable curiosities especially shells and fossils.

The manufacture of Kendal is the toilenet and waistcoating, coarse woollens for the American market, linsey woolsey, hosiery, and knit caps; the cotton manufacture is nearly exploded here. A numerous quantity of hands are employed in working and polishing marble, which is procured in the neighbourhood, and in beauty and variety of colours it is generally considered to be equal to that imported from Greece and Italy. A little below the town are extensive gun-powder words.

Kendal had its charter of incorporation from James I. and the municipal establishment of the town consists of a Mayor, twelve Aldermen, and twenty-four capital Burgesses. This town although the largest town in the county, sends no member to Parliament. The population was enumerated in the year 1793, when it was found to be 8089, but must have considerably increased since that period. There is an extensive Market on Saturday, and three yearly Fairs, viz. 25th April, and 8th and 28th November. Kendal is 261 miles north of London, 21 miles north of Lancaster, and 44 miles south of Carlisle.

Post Office, High-gate.—C. Fenton, Post Master.—Mail dispatched to London, Liverpool, Manchester and the south at one P. M. and arrives at seven A.M.—Mail dispatched to Carlisle, Edinburgh and the north at 20 minutes past seven A. M. and arrives at 45 minutes past twelve P. M.—Penny post to Bowness, Ambleside, & Hawkshead dispatched every morning (Tuesday's excepted) at 40 minutes past seven A. M. returns same days at 15 minutes past seven P. M. The Sedberg Post arrives every Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday at eleven morning, and returns same days at two afternoon. Letters for the south must be in the office by 12 at noon.

MARYPORT

IS a seaport and market town, in the parish of Cross Canonby in Cumberland. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Ellen, which divides it into two parts: The harbour which will contain a great number of vessels, has been considerably improved. Many ships of heavy burthen, for the American, West India, and coasting trade, are built and repaired here. The principal manufactures of the place, consists of cotton and linen checks, hats, sail-cloth, and the usual routine of occupations connected with nautical pursuits. Maryport is an infant establishment, formerly the resort of a few fishermen, who occupied a number of miserable cabins along the beach; but now rising into importance, having some well built streets, and a population of about 5000 inhabitants, It is a place of considerable resort, during the appropriate season, being happily situated for sea bathing. A variety of articles are exported hence, the principal of which is, the valuable commodity, pit coal. The imports are timber, iron, flax and Baltic produce. Here is a Chapel of Ease, under-Canonby. In the neighbourhood is Ellenborough, whence the late celebrated judicial character, (Lord Ellenborough) derived his title. Near this town, are the remains of a considerable Roman station, supposed by Camden, to be Volantium, where the first Cohort of the Dalmatians were in garrison. At this place have been found, an immense number of altars, statues, inscribed stones, and other remains of Roman antiquity. The market is held on Friday.

Post Mistress, Jane Kitchen.—Letters arrive at five in the afternoon, and are dispatched at nine in the evening.

MORPETH.

SUPPOSED to have derived its name from Moor Path, or road through the Moor, is a pleasant well built town, seated on the northern bank of the river Wansbeck, in a warm and sheltered vale, surrounded with a rich and cultivated country. The market place is conveniently situated near the centre of the town. The market cross was rebuilt in the year 1783. A Tower is built near the market place, containing a good peal of bells; this circumstance is owing to the Church being placed at a distance from the town. In 1714, an elegant Town-house was built, by the Carlisle family in which the Manorial Court is held, and also the Quarter Sessions, for the county. Between the Town-hall and the bridge, is the County Gaol, which is a respectable structure, having a small Chapel, at the north end, and at the west end, a Grammar School. The Parochial Church, stands on the south side of the bridge, on Kirk hill, in the West park. The Baronial Castle, near the Church, has but few vestiges remaining. Morpeth, has sent Members to Parliament, since the first year of Queen Mary, in 1553. It is a prescriptive Borough, governed by two Bailiffs and seven Aldermen. The places of worship, are one Church of the Establishment, one Catholic Chapel, and two Meeting Houses for Methodists. The town is situated at the distance of 19 miles from Alnwick, 14 from Newcastle, and 286 from London.

The market day, is on Wednesday, and the annual fairs, on the first Wednesday in March, for hinds, Wednesday week before Whitsuntide, and Wednesday before July 22nd.

Population about 3000.

Post-Office, Market place.—Stephen Wilkinson, Post Master. Mail to the North, every day, at 12, to the South, every morning, at 10.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE

Is the most important trading and commercial Town in Northumberland; 15 miles from Durham, 35 from Alnwick, 119 from Edinburgh, and 271 from London. Ælius Hadrianus, who came into Britain in the year 120, and built a wall eighty Roman miles in length, from sea to sea. This wall began at Pons Ælii, (the present Newcastle) upon the Tyne, and ended at Tunnocelum, on Solway Frith, at which place were stationed the first cohort of Ælian marines. It is certain that Newcastle bridge was of Roman origin, for coins of Emperors, both before and after the time of Hadrian, were found in its piers after the great flood of 1771. Late discoveries have also ascertained the real scite of the Roman station here; for, in digging the foundations of the new County Court in 1810, two Roman altars, coins of Antoninus Pius, and several other Roman antiquities were discovered. Under the Saxon Kings of Northumberland, Pons Ælii became so famous for its Monasteries, as to be called Monkchester; but, when the Danish army under Halden ravaged the banks of the Tyne, it suffered in common with other places. The venerable walls of Pons Ælii so effectually braved the storms of eight hundred years, that Robert Curthose, in his return from his expedition against Malcolm, King of Scotland, in 1080, converted them into a fort, called the Newcastle-upon-Tyne. As this building protected the bridge from the attacks of the Scots, it was considered a place of considerable importance. King John made additional works to the Castle, and the Black Gate was built by Henry III. Here John Baliol did homage to Edward I. for the Crown of Scotland. In 1605 this Castle was let to the incorporated Company of Tailors, for the sum of forty shillings a year. The old Moot-hall was pulled down in 1810; its eastern wall appeared to have been a part of the wall of the Roman station, whose foundations were also discovered under the County Court. Till Elizabeth's time the County Courts were held in the great tower. After the time of James I. the old Chapel of the garrison was converted into a Moot-hall, and the dungeon of the keep reserved for the county prison during the time of the Assizes. The whole of the Castle Garth is in the county of Northumberland, though its inhabitants, since the 31st of Elizabeth, have been subject in all criminal prosecutions to the Sheriff of the county of Newcastle. The County Courts are on the scite of the Half moon Battery; Mr. Stokoe was the architect; and it is considered one of the finest specimens of Grecian architecture in Britain.

Newcastle was formerly walled round, these walls are mentioned in the charter of the 17th. of king John, and Edward 1st. granted the Black Friars a passage to their garden through the new wall. The same king in 1299, united Pampedon with Newcastle, which occasioned the new wall to be built through the close of the Carmelites, on Wall Knoll. After completing the walls, the town was divided into 24 wards. The gates were all embattled, and the walls at all points defended with strong towers, the walls were twelve feet high, and eight feet thick, and strengthened with a foss uniformly twenty two yards broad.

Saint Nicholas' Church, an ancient and beautiful edifice, founded in 1091, burnt down in 1216, and rebuilt as it now stands in 1359. The truces with Scotland were ratified in its vestry, August 13th. 1451. The steeple is 192 feet high, and its summit is considered a very ingenious and admirable specimen of architecture. John Knox preached in this church between the years 1550 & 1553. Saint Andrew's is a very ancient fabric. All Saints' Church is a very splendid and elegant structure, its form is circular; on the south it has a fine portico supported by five Ionic pillars, its spire is lofty, its old bells were cast out of an equestrian statue of James 2nd. which stood upon Sand-hill, the whole structure is built of polished freestone; and its pews are all of mahogany. Saint John's Church is of ancient date, its founder is unknown; it is mentioned in a charter of Edward the Ist., Cunningham the pastoral poet was buried here. Besides these churches, there are chapels of ease, and other places of public worship namely, Roman Catholics, Society of Friends, Presbyterians, Seceders, Calvanistic Baptists, Unitarians, Methodists, and others. Newcastle boasts of numerous important public institutions, among which ranks the Free Grammar School of Queen Elizabeth, in which Bishop Ridley, the Martyr, the famous Col. Lilburn, and Aikenside the Poet were scholars, Lord Collingwood, Lord Eldon, Sir Wm. Scott, and other persons of eminence, also received their first rudiments. The Mayor, for the time being, six of the Aldermen and Common Council are its patrons. The Jubilee School, built in 1810, is an elegant structure, conducted on Mr. Lancaster's plan. The Duke of Northumberland is its patrons. The School of the Trinity House was erected in 1712. The Charity School of St. Nicholas, was founded by Mrs. Eleanor Allan, 1705, for forty boys, and twenty girls, born in the parishes of St. Nicholas, and Saint John. The School-house was built by the corporation in 1786. Saint John's Charity School was founded in 1705, for forty boys, by Mr. John Ord. The corporation provided the School-house. Saint Andrew's Charity School, founded for thirty boys, by Sir William Blacket, Bart. in 1708, had an additional endowment from the son of its founder, for the purpose of clothing the boys. In 1792 a new School-house for this institution was erected in Percy-street, by subscription.

The Charity School of All Saints', in the Manors, for 41 boys, and 17 girls, was founded in 1709 by a voluntary contribution. Here is an Infirmary, Dispensary, House of Recovery, Lying-in-hospital, and a Charity for poor Lying-in Married Women, at their own houses. Gateshead, is an ancient borough with a population of nearly 8,000, it is situated on the south side of the Tyne, exactly opposite to Newcastle, out of which town, into Gateshead, the traveller has an easy access over an excellent bridge of nine arches. Gateshead which is in the Bishoprick of Durham, has a large and strong built church, various places of worship for dissenters, a post office, &c. &c. but its importance is absorbed in that of Newcastle. Curthose, brother to the Conqueror, (before named) built a castle among the ruins of Pons Ælii, in 1080, from which period the commencement of the commerce of Newcastle may be dated. The charter of Henry the first, to this town, mentions the arrival of ships at Tynemouth; the dyeing of cloth, buying of wool and skins, exportation of corn, &c. &c. In 1539, there came into this port 503 English, and 344 Foreign ships. Before the year 1650, it was observed that the coal trade had caused Newcastle to flourish. In 1805 there entered with goods, 1452 vessels coastways, 163 British vessels, and 150 foreign vessels, oversea; 101 vessels arrived from abroad with ballast, and in the same year, exclusive of the above, there belonged to the port of Newcastle, including Blythe, &c. 768 ships, of the burden of 165,883 tons. In 1810 Newcastle with Blythe, had 494 ships in the coal trade, and 258 in foreign trade, amounting in burden to 161,900 tons, and employing from 7000 to 8000 men. The exports of this flourishing town are coals, glass of all kinds, silverbullion, pig, red, and white lead, lead shot, copperas, grindstones, flags, fire stones, bricks and tiles, cast and wrought iron and steel, earthenware, painters' colours, sal ammoniac, watch glasses, lamp black, whale oil, butter, pickled salmon, bacon, hams, ale, porter, &c. &c. The principal imports are tobacco, timber, staves, masts, planks, tar, iron, deals, hemp, flax, smalts, hides, linen yarn, wine, spirits, fruit, sugar, &c. &c.—By means of the Tyne a cheap and comfortable passage is afforded to North and South Shields, by steam Packets; besides which, numerous passage boats, here called Comfortables, daily ply upon the river. Newcastle has a good flesh market, divided into four streets, containing 153 neat and uniform stalls, built of hewn free stone, and is well supplied with good beef, mutton, &c.; the green market is but scantily supplied; fish are plentiful and cheap. The market on a Saturday is abundantly supplied with grain of every description, and the concourse of people assembled that day is immense. Tuesday is also a market-day, but of inferior note. There is a neat and commodious Theatre here, and most eligible and handsome Assembly Rooms. The streets are in general (except the oldest parts of the town) wide, well paved, and lighted with gas. The Officers of the Corporation of Newcastle are a Mayor, Recorder, Sheriff, ten Aldermen, twenty-four Common Council, twenty-four Electors, two Coroners, a Town Clerk, Under-Sheriff, Sword-bearer, Clerk of the Chambers, eight Serjeants at Mace, a Water Bailiff, Quay-master, Gaoler, Corn Inspector, Town Marshall, Town Surveyor, and Common Cryer, besides the Constables of twenty-four Wards. There is a Court of Conscience; and Assizes are held twice a year; as also Quarter Sessions, held in the Guildhall. The Races are held annually in June. Newcastle contains three distinct classes of Freemen, all of whom have the right of voting at Elections. It sends two Members to Parliament; the present Representatives are Sir Matthew White Ridley, bart., and Cuthbert Ellison, Esq.

Post-Office, New-market-street.—John Lambton Loraine, esq., Postmaster.—South mail every day at half-past twelve. North mail every morning at ten. A mail to Shields and Sunderland, every day at half-past twelve, and to Carlisle every day at a quarter before one.

Post Office, Gateshead, Main-street.—Wm. Newton, Postmaster. Mails same as Newcastle.

NORTH SHIELDS,

A SEA-PORT, and Market Town, in the county of Northumberland, situated on the north side of the River Tyne, at the distance of eight miles from Newcastle, nine from Sunderland, and two hundred and seventy-eight from London. The Prior of Tynemouth, in 1292, had built a quay and twenty-six houses here, which were tenanted by fishermen, brewers, and victuallers, rich enough to supply loading and provisions for 200 ships of the tonnage of those days; but, at the suit of the Corporation of Newcastle, all these erections were removed. Before that time the place consisted only of a few Shiels, a provincial name for hovels) inhabited by fishermen. Notwithstanding which, this town. in the time of the Commonwealth, was of importance enough to complain to his Highness and Council of the want of a market, and Cromwell had certainly complied with its request, had not the breaking up of the Parliament prevented him. In 1668 the plague raged most violently in this town. The Church was consecrated in 1688, since which time it has been much enlarged, and ornamented with a steeple, in which are a peal of musical bells, presented to the parish by James Storey, Esq. in 1788. In its immediate vicinity the Roman Catholics have erected a Chapel, which for elegance, does honour to their taste. The people, truly denominated Friends, have a Meeting-house, so have the Methodists, both of the old and new connexion. The Presbyterians, Independents, and Burghers, have also places of worship nor is it deficient of Institutions affording relief to the indigent. Here is a Dispensary, and schools for the edueation of the children of the poor, on the Lancasterian plan. The Jubilee School is an elegant building. Here are two Banks, which are ornaments to the town; also a Theatre, not large, but neat: near to which is the Commercial Hotel. In the year 1804 the Duke of Northumberland gave licence for a weekly market to be held on Fridays; and for annual Fairs on the last Friday in April, and the first Friday in November. North Shields possesses dry docks, several ship building yards, extensive roperies; and Messrs. Foster and Pearson have large salt pans, on the Limekiln shore. At the foot of the town are two Beacons, maintained by the Trinity-house, in Newcastle: and near to them is Clifford's-fort, built in 1672, which effectually commands all vessels entering the river. The oldest part of the town is a long narrow street, on the margin of the river; and, in bustle and confusion, bears a strong resemblance to Wapping in London. The upper, or new town, is of recent erection, ascended in some places by more than 100 stone steps. Here the streets are spacious and well paved, the shops large and tastefully displayed, and, when lighted with gas, which is now in contemplation, this part of North Shields will not be inferior to any town in the county The harbour of North and South Shields is about a mile and a half in length. In spring tides it has sufficient water for vessels of five hundred tons burthen. Boats are constantly plying on the river, and the greatest facility is given to travelling between this town and Newcastle, by means of steam packets. Its population is estimated at about 8 or 9000.

Post-Office, Tyne-street.—Isaac Peart, Postmaster—North Mail arrives at two P. M. and leaves at seven A. M. South arrives at ten A. M., and leaves at a quarter past eleven A. M. Blyth, bye post, leaves at half-past two P. M. and returns at nine P. M.

PENRITH

A MARKET TOWN, in Cumberland, is situated on an easy inclination of ground, and chiefly consists of one long street stretching north and south. There are many well built houses here, and the inns are numerous and respectable. The church is a large and handsome structure, lately rebuilt, except the lower part; its roof is supported by pillars, consisting each of one entire stone dug out of a neighbouring quarry. In the church yard are two ancient rude stone obelisks, one of which is called the Giant's Grave, and said to have been erected to the memory of Sir Owen Cæsarius, a famous warrior, who destroyed the robbers and wild beasts that infested Inglewood Forest. Here is a good Free School, a Charity School, with Meeting Houses for Presbyterians, Quakers, &c.; considerable improvements have been recently made in the town; the Old Shambles, have been removed, and very neat and commodious ones erected behind the George Inn, on the plan of those at Carlisle. In point of amusement, Penrith has to boast of a newly erected and handsome Assembly Room, and one of the best Race Courses in the north of England, on the west side of the Beacon-hill, and which has been walled in. The annual races and hunt are well attended. The Castle, (of which some remains are yet standing,) overlooks the town from the west, and gives it a majestic appearance; it has nothing very antique in its ornaments, and the form of the windows, &c. does not discover any thing to carry our idea much beyond the time of King Edward the Fifth. Be this as it may, it is the general opinion that Richard, Duke of Gloucester, afterwards King Richard the Third, resided here for some time. This Castle was dismantled in the time of Charles the First, by the rapacious adherents of the commonwealth. The Beacon, which so much arrests the travellers attention, is a square building of stone, well placed for giving alarm in times of danger. The town is situated at the distance of 18 miles from Carlisle, and 289 miles from London.—The Markets are held on Tuesday and Saturday, and its fairs April 25th, Whit Tuesday, Sept. 27th. and Nov. 11th.—Population about 4000.

Post Office.—Thomas Garnett, Post Master—Mail to London every morning at a quarter past ten. Mail to Liverpool and Manchester every morning at ten. Mails to Edinburgh Glasgow, &c. every morning at half-past eleven. Post to Whitehaven at half-past eleven every morning.

SOUTH SHIELDS,

SO denominated from its local situation on the Tyne, is in the bishoprick of Durham; nine miles from Newcastle, and 274 from London, was formerly a fort or station of the Romans, on a hill at the entrance into the harbour called the Lawe. Various Roman coins, broken inscriptions, and the remains of a hypocaust, or sudatory, were dug up in 1798. There is also an altar in the Durham library, found here in the beginning of the last century. The Church is dedicated to St. Hilda. In 1402, Hemmingburg, prior of Durham, committed to the care of its chaplain, the inhabitants of Les Shiels, Harton, and Wiveston, with a moiety of fees and oblations, certain fish called St. Hilde fish, and a mark a year from the master of Jarrow. The edifice having been enlarged as the population increased, few traces of the old chapel have for many years been observable. In 1810 and 1811 it was chiefly rebuilt, at an expence of upwards of £4000. The Methodists have a very large chapel, capable of containing 1700 persons, which was opened in 1809, and cost £3,800. There are numerous other chapels, for different denominations. The market place is a spacious square, in the centre of which, stands the Town-hall, where the petty Sessions are held; in this also, a Court Leet, and Court Baron, the former for making presentments, &c. and the latter for the recovery of small debts.

On the Lawe Bank, facing the sea, is a guard house and a battery, which formerly mounted four guns, but which have been removed within these few years; concerning which, Whitelock, in his memorials says, "The Scotch, under General Lesley, in 1644, took a great fort over against Tinmouth, which commands all ships coming in or going out of Newcastle, and five pieces of ordnance, arms, powder and some prisoners, and lost but nine men." There are several public schools, one of which is endowed by Joseph Bulmer, Esq. of Ley-gate. In 1770, Bishop Trevor granted a market to be held here weekly on Wednesdays, and in 1772, annual fairs on the 24th of June and first of September. Ninety years ago South Shields had only four ships, at the present time it has more than 400. Here are several dry docks, and a great many building yards; also large manufactories of all sorts of glass, three breweries, and some large roperies. The salt trade, which in the beginning of the last century, was carried on by several of the most opulent families in the neighbourhood, is at present confined to four or five pans; but this loss is well compensated by the increase of other trades. The Life Boat owed its origin to a society of gentlemen belonging to this town, who, in consequence of the melancholy loss of the Adventure, of Newcastle, in 1789, offered premiums for plans of a boat, which should be the best calculated to brave the dangers of the sea, particularly of broken water. Mr. Greathead happily presented one which met the approbation of the society, the Committee of whom, directed that gentleman immediately to build a boat at their expence. The utility of the new vessel was first experienced January 30, 1790, when it put to sea for the glorious purpose of rescuing some unfortunate mariners, who where the sport of the tempest in the offing, a number of cork jackets being provided for the crew, in case their boat disappointed the expectation of the inventor, and failed in its object; but the precaution was unnecessary, the wreck was approached, and the wretched crew beheld the life boat offering refuge from the tremendous abyss that was opening to swallow them. Restored to life and hope, they were removed and conveyed to and, to the joy of the benevolent proprietors of the plan, who had the gratification of witnessing the rescue of several fellow creatures from inevitable destruction. Mr. Greathead has been rewarded with £1200, voted to him by the House of Commons, and honoured with a medallion from the Humane Society, with a diamond ring from the Empress of Russia, and with other marks of distinction. South Shields has its Theatre, in which the Durham comedians perform. The population is about 10,000.

SUNDERLAND, &c.

SUNDERLAND, a borough town, about seven miles from South Shields, thirteen from Durham, and 275 from London, situate on the south bank of the river Wear, and at high water, almost surrounded by the German Ocean; the antiquity of this town, is involved in much obscurity, having been included in the Parish of Bishops' Wearmouth, till the year 1719, at which time, it was made a distinct parish; so that it is most probable, it may have been included in the annals of the former place. At the western extremity of the town, is the magnificent iron bridge, of a single arch, 100 feet high, and 236 feet long, so that any vessel can pass with her top mast up; this bridge was built in the year 1795, and cost 27,000 pounds.

The harbour of Sunderland, is formed by two Piers, situated on the north and south sides of the river. The erection of which together with several other recent improvements, have obviated many inconveniences, which vessels in sudden storms, were formerly liable to. The mouth of the harbour, is defended by a battery, opposite to which there are barracks, for 3000 men, and at the extremity of the north Pier, there has recently been erected, an legant circular Light-house, previous to which, the only signal to enable mariners to enter the mouth of the river, was a lantern hoisted on the flag staff.

Within the last 40 or 50 years, the trade and shipping of this town, has become very considerable. Coal is the staple commodity, which is principally sent coast wise to the out ports; and in times of peace to France, Holland, and the several ports of the Baltic, the whole of this article annually exported, is said to amount to betwixt 3 & 400,000 Newcastle chaldrons. A great revenue arises from its exports, and its coal trade is a capital nursery for seamen, the exports besides coals, are glass and glass bottles, salt, lime, grindstones and copperas. The imports are corn, flour, wines, spirituous liquors, timber, tar, deals, flax, iron, &c. The High-street, which is the principal, is nearly a mile in length, running from east to west, and in some places 30 yards broad, and the houses are in general well built. Parallel with the High-street, runs the lower street on the bank of the river but very narrow; besides these, there are several narrow lanes connecting the two streets. The Trinity Church, is situated at the top of the town, and is a spacious handsome structure; the east end of which, has a particular light and elegant appearance, the altar being placed in a circular recess, surmounted by a dome of inlaid work, which is supported in front, by two fluted pillars of the Corinthian order. Besides the Church, there is a spacious Chapel of Ease, and several Meeting-houses, for the respective denominations of Methodists, Presbyterians, Independents, Baptists, Quakers, &c. Here are also several benevolent institutions, the principal of which are a Dispensary, a Charity for decayed seamen and seamens' widows, a School for girls, and a Blue Coat School for boys; also a Humane Society. The places of amusement are a large Assembly Room, and a neat Theatre. The Bishop of Durham is the Lord of the Manor of Sunderland, by whose representation a Court-Leet, and Baron, is held once a year, for the recovery of all debts not exceeding 40s. The town is governed by a Mayor, and has a Market on Fridays; two Fairs are held on the 12th and 13th of May, and the 13th of October, but they are of little consequence being chiefly for toys. The population is about 13,000. Adjoining Sunderland is

BISHOP'S WEARMOUTH, a place of remote antiquity, and although its history is involved in great obscurity, it appears to have been of considerable consequence in the Saxon ages. The Church, which is situated on an eminence, is a very ancient structure, supposed to have been founded soon after the restitution made by Athelston, it is a low building, embattled, with a square tower; the interior consists of a nave, aisles, and chancel. Near the Church is an Hospital or Alms-house, endowed in the year 1727, for the maintenance of twelve poor men and women, and at the end of a square called Wearmouth-green, is another Alms-house, built in the year 1725, for the same number of indigent persons. The population of Bishop's Wearmouth, including the Pans, is about 7000. On the opposite side, or northern bank of the river Wear, is MONK WEARMOUTH. It is also a place of great antiquity, and was the residence of Monks so early as the year 674, from whence it derived its name. The extensive monastery which was established here was removed to Durham on account of the various incursions of the Scots. There are several remains of this monastery near the Church, which is an ancient irregular building, consisting of a tower, nave and one aisle. The tower is supported on heavy, low arches, and appears to have been the work of the 11th century. The population of the town and shore are about 6000, yet it is to be observed that the actual population of the three towns is far greater than above stated, as all the seamen belonging to the registered vessels, and that numerous class called keelmen, are not included in the above statements, they having been returned to Government separately.

Sunderland Post Office, Russell-street.—James Robinson, Post Master.—South Mail 25 minutes before one at noon. North Mail quarter before seven in the morning. Mail to South Shields, at half-past eight in the morning. Bye Post to Durham at 12 at noon.

WHITEHAVEN,

WHICH has long ranked as the first commercial town and port of Cumberland, is situated near the extreme point of the county, next to the Isle of Man. On the authority of a respectable work, published about 25 years ago, the town was then stated to contain 16,400 inhabitants; this number it is believed has been increased, but not with the rapidity of great manufacturing towns. The present amount is imagined to be near 18000.

Whitehaven is seated in a remarkable creek overlooked by high ground on three sides. From the south, the town makes the best appearance, commanding a view of the interior of the streets, the Harbour and the Castle belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale, which form a fine object in the landscape. Descending by an excellent road from the north, which has been formed between two small eminences, the traveller approaches the town by a fine arch of freestone, decorated with the arms of the Lowther family; this erection is at once useful and ornamental, as the upper part serves as a continuation of the rail road for coals to the port, and the lower part leads into the town by a magnificent aperture.

In the year 1556, this town is said to have had only six houses; subsequently being supported by the fostering hand of the Lowthers, it has risen to wealth and in some respects to splendour, being at present the most eminent port in the coal trade except Newcastle. Two Acts of Parliament passed in the reign of Queen Ann, conferred great advantages on this port; by virtue of which the harbour was considerably improved. Whitehaven is a regular and well built town for the most part, the streets being broad and spacious, crossing each other at right angles, and the houses built with some display of taste. The places of worship are the Churches of St Nicholas, St. James and Trinity, the High and Low Scotch Meeting Houses, together with those of Baptists, Society of Friends, Roman Catholics, Methodists and two Meetings of Independents. The other public edifices and institutions are the Dispensary, the House of Industry, the Marine School, the Theatre, the Public Office, Lowther-street, the Custom House, the Baths, the Library, the Philosophical Society's Room and the Harmonic Society's Concert Room. In the market-place are two neat buildings, one of them appropriated for the sale of corn, flour, meal, &c. the other for fish, both of which are amply supplied; there are also two markets for shambles meat. Upwards of 200 sail of vessels are employed in the export of coals. There are also a considerable number built for the American, the West India and the coasting trade, and one vessel recently returned from a voyage to the East Indies. The harbour is more remarkable for safety than for easy access; the Lighthouse is not very lofty but has a pretty appearance, its utility is obvious. The port enjoys the advantage of a 24 feet tide at springs, and is perfectly dry at low water, it is defended by a battery of cannon level with the water; the cannon from the old fort on the hill have been recently removed. The principal manufactures of this town are linen, sail cloth, checks, ginghams, cabinet goods, earthenware, copperas, vitriol, aquafortis, paper, bleaching salts, tobacco, candles, soap, anchors and cables, &c. A considerable quantity of fish are cured and exported annually. Here are three banks, and three breweries; a number of well selected libraries, and two newspapers are published weekly.

The annals of Whitehaven do not furnish us with many remarkable circumstances. The attack made by Paul Jones during the American war, and the hurricane with which the town was visited, in 1793, are among the events most deserving notice. The following account of the coal mines at this place from the British Topography, will it is hoped be found acceptable.

"The coal mines at Whitehaven are perhaps the most extraordinary in the known world, the principal entrance is by an opening at the foot of a hill through a long passage hewn in the rock, which by a steep descent leads to the lowest vein of coal; the greater part of this descent is through spacious galleries, continually intersecting others; the coal is cut away, excepting large pillars, which in the deep parts of the mine are of enormous size, great strength being required to support the ponderous roof; the mines are sunk to the depth of nearly 150 fathoms, and penetrate under the sea to a great extent. These are the deepest coal mines that have hitherto been wrought below the surface of the sea. The very deep mines in Hungary and Peru being situated in mountainous countries, are elevated to a great height above the level of the ocean. These mines are at all times liable to the destructive effects of the damp but which danger is now in a great measure obviated by the use of the Safety Lamp a discovery which does honour to the head and heart of the inventor, Sir Humphrey Davy; at the same time that the lamp prevents danger from explosion, steam engines of extraordinary dimensions keep the mines clear from water. Some idea may be formed of the importance of this great article of commerce, when it is stated that at certain periods of great demand upwards of 1500 tons per diem, are brought down to the shore for the purpose of exportation, principally to the city of Dublin. A fine railway is now being completed, which will connect, (by a road cut through a mass of rock to the north of the town) with a series of new mines, containing an almost inexhaustible store of this valuable mineral.

The markets are held on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturdays, of which the first is the principal. A fair is held annually on the natal day of his Majesty George IV. viz. 12th of August, Whitehaven is situated at the distance of 8 miles from Workington, 15 from Maryport, 15 from Cockermouth, 43 from Carlisle, 53 from Kendal, and 307 from London.

Post Office, 68, Lowther-st.—Post Mistress, Mrs. C. Stowbridge.—Letters from the south, north and west arrive at seven in the evening, are dispatched at ten at night. Packet with Mail arrives from the Isle of Man every Saturday, and is dispatched every Monday evening. Bye Post to Ulverston, dispatched every Sunday, Tuesday and Friday at six in the morning, returns every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at six in the evening.

WIGTON.

THE town of Wigton, seated in a most beautiful and healthy part of Cumberland, stands on a gravelly soil and southern aspect, about an equal distance from the mountains, and surrounded with rich cultivated lands, was anciently a demesne of Allerdale, until Waldew, the son of earl Gospatrick, gave that barony to Odard de Logis.—It contained Wigton, Waverton, Bleneogo, Dundraw, and Kirkbride with their appurtenances, which five townships are several manors, within the barony of Wigton. The town of Wigton is situated 306 miles from London, 11 from Carlisle, and 25 from Whitehaven; the streets are spacious and many of the buildings are handsome and modern: the church is a neat structure, was erected in the year 1788 from materials procured from the Roman station, at Old Carlisle, which is about one mile south of Wigton; the neighbourhood is distinguished for Spinning by the common wheel, the best yarn in this country, and the manufactories consists of Hardings, bleached linens of a strong fabric, striped hollands, checks, calicoes, and fustians,—The market day is Tuesday, and it has a fair on the 25th. of March.—Population about 4000.

Edward Carrick, Postmaster.—Horse Post from Carlisle arrives every evening at half-past four, and is dispatched to Carlisle about seven.

WORKINGTON.

Is a sea port and market town of Cumberland, distant 8 miles from Whitehaven, 35 from Carlisle, and 318 from London; it is situated upon the Derwent, where that river falls into the Channel. The public buildings (principally of recent date,) are, the Church, a handsome structure with a gothic tower; a Presbyterian Chapel, with others belonging to Independents, Roman Catholics and Methodists; a House of Industry, several public Schools, an Assembly Room, a Theatre, &c. &c. Among the late improvements are the buildings of the new square, near to which are the corn market and public shambles, which are in general well supplied. The markets are on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Workington which like most of the towns on this coast, had its origin from the settling of fishermen, has not been laid out with much taste; it extends from the castle to the sea, consisting of two clusters, the most ancient one is near the building once a castle, the other in the neighbourhood of the church and pier, containing collectively about 6000 inhabitants. The Derwent which washes the town on the north, is celebrated for the quantity and excellence of the salmon taken from it. About a mile westward from the town are the piers, where the numerous vessels employed in the coal trade (which is the principal export) take in their cargoes. The imports are timber, bar iron, flax, and Baltic produce generally. Many vessels are built here both for the coasting and foreign trade. The harbour is esteemed one of the safest upon this coast, the quays having been much improved of late years. The principal manufactures are those of hats, ropes, cordage, and anchors; here are also several breweries, foundries and tanneries. Near the east end of the town on a fine eminence stands Workington Hall, the seat of John Christian Curwen, Esq. M. P. for Cumberland, the mansion which was formerly a castle, is a large quadrangular building, and still bears marks of antiquity. Great quantities of coals are obtained in this neighbourhood; in one of the mines belonging to the above named gentleman, is a steam engine of surprising power, equal to that of 160 horses, it is used for the purpose of draining; this immense erection was built by Messrs. Fenton & Co. of Leeds, a few years ago, and is supposed to vie with the largest in Britain. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before Holy Thursday and October the 18th.

Post Office.—Miss Jane Collins, post-mistress.

Post to Whitehaven departs at 4 in the afternoon, returns 6 in the evening.—Post from Cockermouth, Keswick, Penrith, and London, arrives at 6 in the evening, and is dispatched at ten at night; no mail received on Tuesdays, or dispatched on Thursdays.

The Commercial Directory

FOR

IRELAND, SCOTLAND, &c.

DUBLIN.

THE city of Dublin and capital of Ireland is situated at the mouth of the river Liffey, which empties itself into a large and beautiful bay, in the Irish Sea, considered to be equal in fine and picturesque scenery to the celebrated Bay of Naples, and in some respects its superior. The beauties of this entrance into Dublin are heightened by the grand elevation of the country towards the south of the city, which increases until it terminates in the wild magnificence of the Wicklow mountains, where the fine pointed cone of the Sugar Loaf forms a most sublime object in this diversified landscape, the beauties of which are not surpassed in any country in Europe. To the north of the bay the country rises with an imperceptible ascent, presenting a wide prospect of rich cultivation, the rugged hills of Howth forming the extremity of the northern boundary of Dublin bay, surrounded by this beautiful scenery, opens gradually to the view—the noble city, crowded in the perspective with lofty spires and domes, with numerous shipping moored in the harbour, altogether so happily combined as to form one of the most delightful of natures views, highly improved by affluence and taste.

As the limits of the Commercial Directory will not admit of entering at any great length into its ancient history, it is hoped it will suffice to say, that this fertile Island is about 300 miles in length, and about 160 in its greatest breadth. Ireland was (two centuries before the birth of Christ) known to the Greeks by the name of Juvernum, but who were its first inhabitants cannot be ascertained. When Cæsar undertook his expedition into Britain he visited Ireland and described it as about half the size of Britain, and although it never became subject to the Roman empire, it was afterwards invaded, and its capital beseiged and conquered by the Danes and Norwegians, which they strongly fortified, and sent forth their troops in every direction, committing the most deplorable ravages on the country and its inhabitants. The brave Hibernians with the greatest heroism opposed these oppressors, and gallantly disputed every foot of ground with them. It is the opinion of antiquaries that the first scite of Dublin was on the south side of the river, where the castle now stands, and also that its earliest inhabitants were a very few of the southern Irish, joined at different periods by people from the north of the island, and adventurers from Wales, whose principal employment at that early period was fishing. The progressive increase of population, industry and wealth, and the commodious situation of the port soon disposed the inhabitants to commercial pursuits and after experiencing many fluctuations Dublin has at length arrived at its present state of consequence, affluence and and grandeur.

EXTENT AND SITUATION OF DUBLIN.

When the Danes enclosed the city with walls, the extent, it is supposed, was not more than a mile, but so many of the ancient streets have been long since annihilated, and others so much improved and rebuilt, that it is utterly impossible now to say where some of them stood at that distant period, indeed so late as the Year 1535, there was a small harbour near Cork Hill, and a Strand of considerable length, which was not embanked till the reign of Charles the 2nd, is now the Scite of Essex-street, Crane-lane, Temple-Bar, and Fleet-street. The tide also flowed to the extent of two miles over ground which is now covered with elegant streets and quays: viz, Batchelor's walk, Ormond-quay, Arran-quay, Ellis's-quay, and many other parts that now form nearly the centre of this fine city: indeed so rapid has been its increase to this period, that it is now about 10 miles in circumference, and contains 240,000 inhabitants.

The situation of Dublin too, is, perhaps, as happily fixed as it is possible for the mind to imagine. This city is built in an extensive valley, of gentle and pleasing declivity, with ranges of hills and mountains on the north and south, which present to the view a diversified and most delightful scene, the lands are rich and highly cultivated, interspersed with pleasant villages, and seats of nobility and gentry, which cannot be exceeded in taste and elegance. Such is the delightful vicinity of this ancient, but now elegant city, embellished by the gently flowing Liffy, separating it into two nearly equal parts, with ranges of noble houses on either side, and many superb bridges across the river, the water of which has been collected by art and indefatigable industry, so as to make it a safe and commodious receptacle for shipping, adding greatly to the delightful scenery of the capital of Ireland.

The river from Ringsend and North Wall is enclosed by fine walls of granite to a distance of more than three miles westward, extending quite through the city. Below the Custom House, a fine capacious dock is now constructing, and near to Ringsend are extensive Docks capable of holding several hundred sail of vessels, equally capacious with those of Liverpool. The Light-house, which is situated at the extreme end of an immense wall that stretches for three miles into the sea, like another Pharos rising from the ocean fills the mind with admiration. This great work confines the Channel on each side, and forms a safe harbour for shipping in the front of an open sea. On the left, approaching from the bay, is Dunleary, where a new harbour and pier are forming,—an undertaking of the greatest magnitude, which does honor to the nation. On the right is the beautiful village of Clontarf, whose gently rising shores, and elegant white houses fill the mind of the spectator with delight.

PUBLIC EDIFICES, STATUES AND MONUMENTS

IT is impossible, within the limits of this publication to notice all the national and public structures of Dublin, in the manner which they deserve;—nor can we say which of the numerous architectural beauties should be placed first in order, but as the Custom-House presents itself to the traveller's view on his arrival in Dublin by way of Liverpool or Holyhead, it solicits our first attention. This magnificent pile of building, situated on the north side of the river, a short distance below Carlisle Bridge, was begun to be built in the year 1781, and was finished in 1791, it is 375 feet in length, and 200 feet in depth, having four elegantly designed fronts. In the centre of the building rises a noble and stupendous dome, 125 feet in height, on the top of which is a colossal statue of Commerce, 16 feet high; on various other parts of this amazing structure are many beautifully sculptured emblematical figures, with other ornamental embellishments. In the front, opposite the river, are arcades on each side of the grand entrance, the portico of which is supported by massy pillars of the most chaste and beautiful design. The building of this grand monument of national taste cost £255,000. The architect was James Gandon, Esq. At a short distance from the Custom-House, on the same side of the river, is the King's Tobacco Warehouse. This building is of immense size, vaulted underneath in a most ingenious and complete manner, the vaults being nearly as light as if above ground. The entire roof of this extensive building is of cast-iron supported by numerous pillars of the same metal; the stones underneath are also supported by iron-work and pillars. It is the largest building of the kind in Europe, and perhaps the most complete.

The Bank of Ireland, formerly the Parliament House, is situated in College Green. This building is of Portland Stone, and supposed to stand unrivalled in taste and elegant architecture. The entire structure, which is of a circular form, covers an acre and a half of ground, the front is adorned with a magnificent arcade with a fine lofty portico, supported by numerous Ionic Columns. This superb arcade is 147 feet in extent. The interior of this beautiful pile corresponds in elegance and accomodation to its external grandeur, and presents a highly-finished, full-length statue of his present Majesty, placed on a pedestal, on which are two emblematical figures of Religion and Justice. There is also a fine bust of his Grace the Duke of Wellington. This building, on the whole, is of peculiar beauty. It was begun in 1729, and was ten years in erecting; the roof is flat, and will admit a full regiment of soldiers to act in case of necessity.

Trinity College, which is very near the National Bank, fronts towards College Green, it is a superb edifice, consisting of two noble and spacious quadrangles. There are attached an elegant Chapel and Museum. The Library is a beautiful room, capable of containing 90,000 volumes in complete arrangement. There is also a Printing House annexed to the College. In the rear are fine and healthful Pleasure Grounds for the recreation of the students, and respectable persons are allowed to walk there at any time. The College in front extends about 300 feet, and 600 feet in depth. Adjoining the Pleasure Grounds is an Anatomical Lecture House, containing a collection of appropriate Wax Work, most ingeniously displaying the various stages of gestation. This collection is the performance of a French Lady, and is considered of great value. The College altogether (particularly the front which is of fine Portland Stone, and of the Corinthian order) has the appearance of a royal palace, This College is the only University in the kingdom and by its vast endowments one of the richest in Europe; it was first projected in the year 1311, but did not begin to flourish until the reign of Queen Elizabeth who granted it a charter. James 1st. endowed it with large estates in the province of Ulster, and in the year 1637 Charles 1st. was a great benefactor to it, and granted it a new charter and statutes. In the establishment are a Chancellor, Vice Chancellor, Provost, Vice Provost, twenty-two Fellows, and five Royal Professors of Divinity, Common Law, Civil Law, Physic and the Greek Language, there are also other Professorships, of Mathematics, Oriental Languages, Oratory, History, Natural Philosophy, &c. in addition to these Sir Patrick Dunn founded three others of Physic, Pharmacy, and Chirurgery. The number of students is generally about 400. At some little distance, opposite to this fine Institution, in College Green is a most beautiful brazen equestrian statue of William 3rd. raised on a massy marble pedestal. The Royal Exchange which fronts Parliament-street, is a costly edifice, and has a grand effect when viewed from Essex Bridge; this fine structure was ten years in completing, and cost £40,000. It is built of Portland stone, nearly of a square form, supporting a noble dome on its centre; in the front are fine Corinthian pillars, elevated on large flights of stone steps, ornamented with handsome iron palisades. The interior also possesses great architectural beauties; in the central part of the ambulatory, are twelve lofty fluted columns, which support the dome, and form a circular walk for the merchants. The entablature over the columns is splendidly ornamented and enriched, and above are 12 elegant circular windows. It was opened for the transaction of mercantile business in the year 1779.

The Castle of Dublin, which is adjacent to the Royal Exchange, is supposed to have been built about the year 1205. In the reign of King John it was considered a place of great strength. Queen Elizabeth established it as the seat of government. Before that time the Governor's Courts were held at Kilmainham and other places, the Castle has been the residence of the Lord Lieutenants of Ireland since the year 1563, who are entitled to a salary of £30,000 a year by parliament. This building is very extensive and has had many recent additions and improvements; it has an armoury for 80,000 men. Attached to the Castle is a new and beautiful Chapel of most exquisite architecture, the interior of which is superb in the extreme, divine service is performed there in public every Sunday at 12 at noon.

The New Courts of Justice, called the Four Courts, are situated on the north side of the Liffy on King's Inn Quay. This is an erection that claims the greatest praise; its magnitude and grandeur must be admired by every one who possesses a taste for architectural beauties. This elegant pile of building is 433 feet in length, with two wings 90 feet by 50. On the centre part rises a majestic collossal Dome, which gives light to an extensive Rotunda in the interior. This structure was begun, and the first stone laid by the Duke of Rutland on the 13th of March, 1786, and was opened for the administration of Justice on the 3rd of November, 1796.

The New General Post Office, which is situated nearly in the centre of one of the finest streets in Europe, viz. Sackville-street, is an edifice which for the same purpose has not its equal. It is a superb embellishment to the city. This important national erection is built of fine stone, and is of the most chaste design. The front is decorated with six beautiful Corinthian pillars, of great height, supporting a Portico, on the top of which are finely sculptured figures; the entire displaying a degree of elegance not to be surpassed. The interior is equally complete in its judicious arrangements for the dispatch of business. The foundation stone was laid on the 12th of August, 1814, (the centenary of the house of Hanover on the throne of Great Britain) by his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant. Immediately opposite to the General Post Office, is seen that grand memento of naval heroism, Nelson's monument, which perhaps stands unrivaled in beauty and effect. This fine Pillar is 144 feet in height and fluted to the top, on which is placed the Statue of the ever to be remembered Hero of Trafalgar. The figure is 13 feet high, finely executed, and in an appropriate position, reclining against a representation of the Capstan of a Ship. The pedestal is surrounded by handsome iron palisades and elegant lamps, it was built by subscription, and the first stone laid in February 1808.

The Rotunda, at the extreme end of Sackville-street, is an elegant circular building, where concerts are occasionally given and assemblies held. The annual fruit and flower exhibitions are also held in this building. At the rear are beautiful Gardens, in the centre of Rutland-square, during summer evenings these gardens are the promenade of beauty and fashion, bands of music attend; and there are occasionally vocal performances, for the benefit of the Lying-in-Hospital, a highly praise worthy arrangement, and an honor to those gentlemen who have the management.

The New Corn Exchange on Burgh Quay, is a large and nearly square structure of fine stone, the architecture of which is most beautifully chaste and neat; it has two grand entrances in front, and on either side are wings of red brick, but these are about to be taken down and rebuilt with stone, to correspond with the entire edifice, which will then be a most superb embellishment to that part of the City. The interior where the Corn business is conducted in commodious and complete; over this is a very large room where the Committee of the establishment assembles, &c.

The Commercial Buildings, on the north side of Dame-street, is an edifice of neat and plain architecture, the first stone of which was laid on the 29th July, 1796. It was erected by a company of spirited merchants, and incorporated by Royal Charter, 1st January, 1798. The Royal Exchange being judged inconvenient for mercantile pursuits, the merchants now assemble in these Buildings. Here is an elegant Coffee Room to which all respectable persons have access. In the rear are spacious Counting Houses and Offices fitted up with every convenience for Merchants, Insurance Companies, &c. &c. The Stock Exchange Business is transacted in a commodious room over the Coffee Room, which opens a quarter before three o'clock every day except Sundays.

The Linen Hall, in Linen Hall-street, is situated on the north side of the city, this is a building, although not so elegant as many, yet it is of great magnitude, and perhaps of as high importance as any in the kingdom, it is established as the receptacle of and to prevent frauds in the principal manufacture of the country. Linens from all parts of the kingdom are received at this Hall by the Linen Merchants, Brokers and Agents. It is the grand Mart for the sale of the staple manufacture of Ireland. The entire of this extensive trade, is conducted with the greatest regularity and is in every respect deserving the stranger's attention. We regret that our limits permit only a brief sketch of the Public Buildings of Dublin. In addition to those which have already been enumerated are many others which although less attractive are worthy of attention.

The Mansion House, in which the Lord Mayor resides, is a fine old edifice in Dawson street, Near it, on the left, is an Equestrian Statue of George 1st, placed on a handsome pedestal.. At a short distance to the right is Stephen's-green, allowed to be the largest Square in Europe. In the centre, (which is an extensive beautiful meadow of about seventeen acres) is elevated on a fine stone pedestal, an Equestrian Brass Statue of George the 2nd, which was erected in 1758, it is a grand embellishment to the Square and produces a noble effect. On the west side, is the Surgeons' Hall, an elegant building of fine stone. The houses round the entire of this immense square are pleasingly diversified, interspersed with many superb mansions belonging to the nobility. Stephen's Green a short period since was surrounded by rows of trees and water, but within these three years it has been very greatly improved by fine gravel walks, which are guarded from horses and carriages by numerous granite posts, connected by massy chains of wrought iron entirely round the square, the green part, which is planted with a new shrubbery, is enclosed by elegant iron palisades, altogether forming a delightful promenade of a mile in circumference.

In the Phœnix Park, at the west end of the town, lately erected on a fine elevated spot, stands a noble pillar in commemoration of the Heroic achievements of his Grace the Duke of Wellington at the ever to be remembered Battle of Waterloo. This Park is an extensive Royal Enclosure, and was formerly part of the lands of the Monastery of St. John of Jerusalem; it is seven miles in circuit, containing woodland and beautiful rising grounds. The Viceroy's elegant Villa, and the seat of the Principal Secretary are situated here; also the Hibernian School, a grand and commodious edifice. The Powder Magazine, and other erections adorn this Picturesque spot, which being so contigious to the city a visit to it forms a rural and healthful recreation to the inhabitants, the rides and walks in it being delightfully arranged for either of those exercises.

The Royal Barracks, on Arbour Hill, are situated near to Phœnix Park, they were built in 1706, and are supposed to be the largest and handsomest in Europe, they consist of four spacious open courts, whose elevated situations command the most beautiful prospects. In addition to these are the Richmond Cavalry Barracks, which are situated on the Grand Canal, near Kilmainham, they are very extensive, and were finished about the year 1811. Near to this, is what may justly be called the Rialto, or Island Bridge, it crosses the River from north to south in one beautiful eliptic arch, extending 356 feet (being 12 feet wider than the celebrated Rialto at Venice) in breadth it is 38 feet, including two flagged foot-paths. This elegant bridge is justly considered a monument of national taste. Many other Public Edifices adorn this grand and beautiful city, namely, the Dublin Society House, formerly the town residence of his Grace the Duke of Leinster. This is a noble mansion of stone, with two fine fronts, one facing Merrion-square with a beautiful lawn; and the other fronting Kildare-street, enclosed by a wall and lodge gates, entering into a spacious court-yard. This structure now contains an extensive Museum of natural curiosities, which on certain days is opened for public view, gratis. The Club House, in College Green is a very capacious building. The New Club House is a beautiful structure, the interior of which is elegant and convenient. The Stamp Office, in William-street, formerly the residence of a nobleman, is a superb mansion of stone, beautifully embellished with sculptured ornaments. A fine flight of steps, adorned on either side with stone balustrades, forms the grand entrance.

The Theatre Royal, in Crow-street, is an ancient building, and in its external appearance has little to recommend it to the stranger's notice. It is in contemplation to erect a new one, which there is no doubt will vie with any Theatre in the United Kingdoms. The interior of the present Theatre is very handsome and spacious, and the performances are generally most respectable. We cannot dismiss the subject of the Public Buildings of the metropolis of Ireland, without repeating our regret at not being enabled (from a want of space) to be more descriptive of their justly celebrated merits. The generality of the Streets, Squares, &c. correspond in beauty with the public structures. Merrion-square is magnificent and extensive, with fine gardens and walks in the centre, enclosed by iron pallisades. It is often enlivened by the playing of a military band of music. Mountjoy-square, on the north side, is also a spacious superb square, with a large pleasure ground and shrubberies, and iron pallisades. Rutland-square, contignous, is not inferior in elegance and size. Sackville-street, divided from Westmoreland-street by Carlisle Bridge, with the immediate view of the Bank of Ireland, Trinity College, the Custom House, the Four Courts, General Post Office, and Nelson's Pillar, with the river Liffy, combine at once a view which cannot perhaps be equalled in the world, for the variety and extent of beauties which nature and art has so abundantly accumulated.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

In no part of the world is there to be found more unlimited munificence than is evinced in the city of Dublin. Independent of the Royal Hospital which is similar in its establishment to Chelsea Hospital in London, are the Royal Military Infirmary, with the Hibernian and Marine Societies for maintaining and educating the children of soldiers and seamen, and the Charter School, near Clontarf. This city contains above fifty other Charitable Institutions, evincing the humanity of the Irish nation, many of which are of private endowment. These Institutions are adapted to every age and situation of life, and no city in the world can boast of greater and more worthy examples of attention to every species of distress. These invaluable Public Institutions we can only briefly enumerate, as follows :

The Royal Hospital, at Kilmainham, for the reception of invalid and superannuated soldiers, was erected by King Charles the 2d, about the year 1684. It will hold about 300 of these very deserving servants of the nation, and is generally full. The building is noble and well adapted for its purpose. It stands on the south side of the river commanding an advantageous elevation : when viewed from Phœnix Park it has an admirable effect. The Blue Coat Hospital founded in 1670, was the first, and the Invalid Soldiers the second eleemosynary Institution that was founded in Dublin.

The House of Industry, in Brunswick-street, is an extensive range of building, and was founded to receive such as were by age or sickness rendered incapable of earning a subsistance, and for relieving the city from vagrant impostors. It is supported by voluntary subscription, parochial collections, and grants from Parliament.

The Lying-in Hospital, situated in Great Britain-street, was founded by Doctor Mosse, a physician of Dublin, and was opened for the reception of patients, 1757. That gentleman with the most humane and liberal efforts, erected this stately fabric, for the purpose of relieving poor lying-in woman, it is the first institution of the kind in his Majesty's dominions. The interior is finely adapted to its several uses, and the chapel which is attached, is much admired for its simple elegance.

The Foundling Hospital is situated at the farthest end of Thomas-street. It is a fine commodious building, and was originally intended for the relief of the Poor of the city of Dublin ; but by an act of Parliament which dissolved the old Corporation, in the year 1728 there were new Governors appointed of rank and fortune, together with the Lord Mayor, &c. By this Act they were to receive common beggars, and children of all denominations above six years old. Since that period, another Act has been passed, which enacts, that from the 15th of March 1730, " the governors shall receive into the house, all exposed and deserted children of either sex." This Act has totally changed the nature of the institution from the first intentions of the founders, it being now an hospital entirely for foundlings, except a few indigent people who are admitted by a general board. This is most certainly a very laudable and praise-worthy charity. The preservation of exposed infants, rescued, as many are from destruction, and their being received into this House, from all parts of the kingdom, renders it of the utmost utility and consequence. The younger children, as soon as they are received, are suckled by nurses, who are maintained in the hospital for that purpose, under the inspection of proper persons ; and as soon as nurses with proper certificates can be provided in the country, the children are sent to them, where they remain till six years old ; they are then removed again to town and instructed in reading, writing, and the principles of the Christian Religion ; when they arrive at a proper age they are put apprentices to useful trades, to enable them to procure their future livelihood. There are generally altogether about 5000 children in the House, and with the country nurses.

The Hibernian Society for maintaining, educating, and apprenticing the orphans of soldiers, was opened the 1st January, 1765, by subscription, since which period 3125 boys and girls have been admitted into this humane Institution. A committee of fifteen meet the first and second Tuesdays in every month to regulate its affairs.

The Hibernian Marine Society for maintaining, educating, and apprenticing the orphans and children of decayed seamen in his majesty's navy and merchants' service, is situated on Sir John Rogerson's Quay. It is a spacious neat building and was opened in the year 1773. On one side is a handsome Chapel, and on the other a commodious School Room. The apartments where the children sleep are kept in the neatest order and well adapted to promote health. This building will contain 200 children, it cost £6,600, and the expence was defrayed by Parliament: the society obtained a charter in 1775.

Dublin General Dispensary, No. 28, Temple-bar: a very useful and laudable charity where medical and surgical relief is administered to the poor gratis. A physician and surgeon to each of the six city wards are also retained to visit those who are unable to attend the Dispensary. It is wholly supported by voluntary contributions.

Hospital for Incurables, near Donny-brook-road. This institution was founded by the musical society, who disposed of the produce of each year's subscription for this praise worthy object: the undertaking commenced on the 23rd of May, 1744, and met with deserved encouragement and the most liberal support, and at length a large and fine edifice has been provided for the reception of such objects as are deemed incurable.

Mercer's Hospital, Stephen-street. This institution was founded by Mrs. Mary Mercer in 1734, for the reception of sick poor. The physicians and surgeons, who are appointed Governors, give their advice and attendance gratis. In the interior are from 60 to 70 beds, but the number of patients who receive advice and medicines out of the Hospital is more than 4000 yearly. The lady above named gave the building for this useful charity; and it is supported by casual benefactions, annual subscriptions, and the profits arising yearly from a musical performance at St. Andrew's Church.

Charitable Infirmary, Jervis-street, was opened on the Inn's-quay, 12th August, 1728, when first established, for the reception, without distinction, of sick and wounded poor. This infirmary was removed to Jervis-street in the year 1803; it is managed by 20 trustees who are chosen annually; they meet the first Friday in every month.

Charitable Loan. The Governors of the Charitable Musical Society (incorporated by Act of Parliament) for lending out money, interest free, to indigent tradesmen, meet at St. Ann's Vestry Room, every Thursday morning at 12 o'clock, when they receive applications from all persons who wish relief by this charity, not less than £2, nor more than £5, are lent to any person at any one time, for which his note must be given joined by two other persons.

Magdalen Asylum, Leeson-street, founded by Lady Arabella Denny, and opened the 11th June, 1766, for the reception of such unfortunate females as had deviated from the paths of virtue. They are supported by voluntary contributions, a Charity Sermon, collections in the chapel, interest of £2,000 and sewing performed by the penitents, of whom there are generally about forty.

The Bethesda Lock Penitentiary and Work House, Dorset-street. This institution is for the reception and employment of females who leave the Lock Hospital, and are desirous of abandoning their former evil courses, and returning into the paths of virtue and industry; it was opened the 19th March, 1794, and has afforded relief to many hundreds of those unfortunate women, who must otherwise probably have perished from the impossibility of extricating themselves from vice and wretchedness. Several ladies of rank and humanity superintend this fine charity. It is endowed with a fine chapel and other buildings by the generosity of Wm. Smith, Esq. of Granby-row, the earnings of the penitents amount to about £500 net, per annum.

Orphan House, for destitute boys, Prussia-street, opened in 1793, is supported by voluntary contributions. This Charity is for receiving, maintaining, educating, apprenticing, and bringing up in good habits, poor destitute boys, who are without parents, and are between the ages of 4 and 10 years. Subscribers to this generous and usefully institution of £4 are governors for one year, and those who subscribe £20 are governors for life.

Orphan House, for destitute female children, Circular-road, opened the 1st January 1791, is conducted in the same judicious manner, and is precisely to the same intent as that of the destitute boys' charity, the only difference is the girls are admitted at from the age of 5 to 10 years, they are educated and brought up as useful servants and at a proper age are apprenticed out.

Freemason's Female Orphan School, Dumville-lane, Ranelagh, founded in May 1797. Under the Patronage of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. Patricians, a large and charitable body of men, who contribute towards supporting eighty orphans, destitute of friends. Every person who feels so well disposed may belong to this Society by paying 6s. British, annually; the Committee meet every Monday.

Strangers' Friend Society, established in 1790, an institution formed on principles the most generous and disinterested, to afford instant relief to the deserving stranger, where no other recommendation is required than evident apparent distress.

Literary Teachers' Society, instituted by a few literary gentlemen, and since incorporated by Act of Parliament, for the support of superanuated Literary Teachers and their Families.

Society for the relief of Sick and Indigent Room Keepers, established in the year 1790, it is calculated that since the origin of this humane Institution to the present period, that not less than 400,000 people have been relieved by this society.

House of Recovery, Cork-street; this hospital was opened by subscription, on the 14th May, 1804, for the purpose of counteracting the progress of infection in the habitations of the poor, within theCircular-road. No recommendation is necessary but fever and poverty, ascertained by the report of one of the physicians, after an application is left at the House for admission. This institution is supported by parliamentary aid, and voluntary contributions.

Dispensary for the Infant Poor, Clarendon-street, was opened 25th March, 1800, where advice and medicine are given gratis, three days in the week, to all infants and children, without distinction or recommendation, under 12 years of age. Children with infectious diseases must not be taken to this Dispensary, but they will be supplied with medicine, on their situation and complaints being described. In the month of October, such children as bring certificates from subscribers of their parents' inability to clothe them, will receive flannels, &c. to protect them from the winter's cold. About 40,000 have been relieved in this way since the foundation of this laudable charity.

Charitable Dispensary, Meath-street, for administering medical and surgical aid, to the sick poor, and assisting them and their families with the necessaries of life during sickness, and also for preventing the spreading of contagious diseases. It was opened in November, 1794, and is supported by charitable donations and annual subscriptions.

Dispensary for the Parishes of St. Mary, St. Thomas, and St. George. This charitable Institution was the first of the kind established in Dublin. To those whose ages, complaints or situation, by being able to procure the necessaries of life, render them improper objects for public hospitals, may receive medicines and advice at their own dwellings every day, if necessary, and at the Dispensary three times a week. The expenses of this very useful charity are defrayed by private subscriptions, and public parochial contributions.

The Blue Coat Hospital, was originally in Queen-street, and was founded in the year 1670, by the contributions of the inhabitants of Dublin, together with other benefactions. A beautiful new building, opposite Blackhall-street, which already has cost £24,000, and it is expected, will yet, before its completion, cost several thousands more, is the present Blue Coat establishment, where instruction in the duties of religion, and a good education qualify the boys for respectable pursuits in life. At a mature age, it is observable that they generally prove sober and diligent, and many of them have become citizens of the highest class. This admirable institution was chartered by king Charles the 2nd. who granted it the ground on which the building stands. The entire of this establishment is of the Protestant Religion.

County of Dublin, or Meath Hospital, situated on the Upper Coombe, was appointed by Act of Parliament, in the year 1774, as the General Infirmary for the county of Dublin. It is a commodious good building, and supported by private subscriptions.

Simpson's Hospital, Great Britain-street, incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1780, and opened in 1781 for the reception of the poor, decayed blind, and gouty men, who are maintained, lodged, and clothed in a most comfortable manner, Thirty-six blind, and thirty-six gouty men are always in the Hospital, every department of which is conducted with the greatest cleanliness and exactness.

Swift's, or St. Patrick's Hospital, for Lunatics and Idiots, founded by Dr. Jonathan Swift, Dean of St. Patrick's, in 1745, and incorporated by charter in August, 1746. The Dean bequeathed £11,000 for this Institution, which has been considerably augmented by legacies.

Stephen's Hospital, Stephen's House, James'-street, founded by Miss Stephens, and opened in 1723, for the reception of curable poor persons. The building is extensive, and rendered capable of containing 300 patients, seventy poor decayed housekeepers, tradesmen, and servants of both sexes are also constantly supported in this Hospital, besides externs who attend for advice and medicine. Persons meeting with accidents are received at all times.

Nicholas' Hospital, Francis-street, united with St. Catharine's, was opened 1st. of April, 1743, and is capable of containing 40 internal surgical patients. Two physicians attend every Tuesday and Friday, and five surgeons alternately every morning, from eight to ten o'clock. Persons receiving sudden accidents are not admitted into this Hospital.

Westmoreland Lock Hospital, Townsend-street, for the indiscriminate admission of all indigent persons afflicted with the venereal disease. It is a large and elegant building, and was opened the 20th of November, 1792. This Hospital generally contains from two to 300 patients, who are regularly attended by physicians and surgeons. An establishment of the greatest importance, has been recently attached to this Hospital, for the relief of the ruptured poor; two senior surgeons attend every Wednesday and Saturday to distribute trusses to such as may then apply.

The Molyneux Asylum, in Peter-street,—a new and invaluable Institution for blind females of every religious persuasion, founded by Lady Molyneux, and opened the 1st of June, 1815. In this excellent and very praise-worthy Asylum, poor blind females are supported and instructed in such employments as will best enable them to earn their own livelihood. The building is sufficiently commodious for accomodating fifty such poor females, who are destitute of the great blessing of sight, and are objects of true sympathy. A permanent Asylum for the aged blind is already, or will be very soon provided Mendicity House, Hawkins-street. This establishment commenced, about two years ago, and is one of the greatest importance to every inhabitant of this large city. We can only speak of it in a very brief manner, as it is quite in its infancy, and of course, the arrangements are yet incomplete ; but notwithstanding, from the great exertions of the late Lord Mayor, Alderman M'Keuny, and the committee, to whom too much praise cannot be given, the streets of Dublin have hitherto been kept free, from those wretched mendicants, who before infested them, and struck every stranger, with horror and surprise, that this fine and munificent metropolis should be so much annoyed, by such numerous objects of filth and poverty. It is most sincerely to be hoped, that this laudable institution will not want that general, and liberal support, that the nature and extent of the undertaking will require. In its present early stage, it has had the most desired and pleasing effect to every feeling mind, and its internal arrangements, in all the departments, appear to be conducted with the strictest regularity, wanting only time and further public contributions to perfect it. This establishment is entirely dependent on the generous and liberal subscriptions of the inhabitants of Dublin, for its present support ; it is therefore hoped, as its utility is so evident to every individual, that all will, when they duly appreciate so invaluable an Institution, contribute their aid.

There are besides these already spoken of a great number of other Hospitals, Penitentiaries, and Sunday and Day Schools ; indeed to particularize the whole would form a volume of itself ; but those already enumerated must be a convincing and very evident proof that no nation in the world evinces more refined feeling, and charitable generosity than the Irish.

PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Dublin is the See of an Archbishop, erected in the year 1152. It was a bishopric in the seventh century, and in the year 1214 the Bishopric of Glandalough, which was founded in the sixth century, was incorporated with Dublin. The See of Dublin has two Cathedrals, both within the city, Christ Church, founded for regular canons, and converted into a Collegiate Church, for a dean and chapter, by Henry the 8th in the year 1541 ; and St. Patrick's for thirteen, now twenty-two Prebendaries. These two Cathedrals are rich Gothic buildings, but from their great antiquity, are in a state of decay, particularly St. Patrick's, which is obliged often to undergo repairs, in this cathedral is the monument of the celebrated Swift, who was a native of Dublin, many other very ancient Monuments, are also in the interior of this Gothic pile, which would afford great pleasure to the antiquary. There are eighteen other Parish Churches, and two Chapels of ease, besides eighty-three chapels of different persuasions which all contribute to ornament the city.

St. Werburgh's Church, Werburgh-street, is a most beautiful and large structure, with a fine elevated tower and spire containing a grand peal of bells. The architecture of this church is rich and chaste; the interior is extremely handsome, in which is erected a fine toned organ. St. Werburgh's Church was twice burnt, and was erected the last time in 1759. St. George's Church, Hardwicke-place, is a recent erection and, perhaps for its size not to be equalled for superb elegance. The body of this church forms a beautiful square, the tower of which stands in front, with a cupola, altogether presenting a masterpiece of architecture. This fine building stands on elevated ground, and is a prominent object in the picturesque view from Dublin Bay. St. Andrew's Church, Andrew-street, is a beautiful circular building, the interior is extremely handsome, and from its peculiar form has a most pleasing and grand effect. The New Catholic Chapel, near to the Merchant's Quay, is a very superb building. It has lately undergone great interior embellishments, and contains a fine new organ. It is perhaps, one of the neatest and most elegant Catholic places of worship in the kingdom. To particularize the entire of the churches, chapels, &c. &c. of Dublin, is impossible in this work, much as we desire to convey a just idea of this fine city. St. Ann's Church, Dawson-street, St. Audoen's, Audoen's Arch ; St. Bridget's, in Bride-street ; St. Catharine's Thomas-street ; St. James's James-street ; St. John's, Fish-shamble-street ; St. Luke, in the Combe ; St. Mark's, Mark-street; St. Mary's, Mary-street; St. Michael's, High-street; St. Michan's, Church-street; St. Nicholas' within, Nicholas-street; St. Nicholas' without, Patrick-street; French Church, Peter-street; Danish and German Church, Poolley-street; St. Paul's, King-street; St. Peter and Kevin's, Aungier-street; St. Thomas, Malborough-street, &c. &c. Are all respectable edifices and many of them very handsome, adding splendour and magnificence to this great metropolis.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND POLICE.

The Civil Government of the city of Dublin was anciently under the management of a Provost and Bailiffs, in the year 1308, John le Decer, was appointed the first Provost, and Richard de St. Clare, and John Stackbold, bailiffs. In the year 1400, the title of the chief magistrate was changed to that of Mayor, when Thomas Cusack was appointed to the office, Richard Bove and Thomas Shortail being Bailiffs. In the year 1547 the office of Bailiffs, was changed to Sheriffs. In 1660 Charles 2nd, gave a Collar of S.S. to the Mayor, with a company of foot guards, and in the year 1665, this monarch confered the title of Lord Mayor on the chief magistrate and granted him £500 per annum, in lieu of the Guards. Sir David Bellingham, was the first who was honored with the title of Lord Mayor, of the city of Dublin. Charles Lovet and John Quelsh the same year were Sheriffs. In 1672, Arthur, Earl of Essex, introduced new rules for the better government of the City, and in 1683, a Tholsel was built, for the Magistrates to meet in, and to hold their Courts, Assemblies, &c.

The civil government at present is vested by various charters in the Corporation, consisting of the Lord Mayor, who is chosen annually, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Common Council; the Sheriff's Peers are 24 in number, the Aldermen are chosen from among them for life. The Common Council consists of 96 members, who are chosen by their respective Guilds, or Companies, of which there are 25. The Sheriffs are chosen annually, and must be Freemen, and qualified by being worth £2000, without incumbrance of Debts. The Lord Mayor tries all offences, even capital ones, except for murder and treason, and also tries matters of property for any sum under 20*l*.

A New Police is lately established by Act of Parliament, under a Chief, and three Assistant Commissioners, and four Divisional Justices, who are Aldermen of the City. This excellent establishment consists of 40 horse patroles, and 400 foot, well armed, trained, and clothed. They have stationary watch-houses, and are patroling their different districts every night, from dark 'till light in the morning. There are six divisions, each having a Police Office; the head of which is the Castle Division, in Exchange Court. At this Office, Hackney Coaches and Cars are licensed; and complaints may be lodged against the drivers for imposition, &c. To each of the six districts three Magistrates are appointed, and sit alternately every day, from ten to three o'clock in the afternoon, and from seven to eight o'clock every evening. In addition there are regular watchmen, so that no city can be better protected from nocturnal depredations.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

The Trade of Dublin consists of various Manufactures of Silk, Woollens, Worsteds, Fustians, Cottons, &c. The Poplins and Tabinets that are made here are celebrated for their beauty and excellence, the manufacture of which employs many hundred looms and workmen. These trades are chiefly carried on in the Suburbs, a part of the Town called the Earl of Meath's liberty, of very considerable extent, and now that the export restrictions are removed, for woollen and other goods, it is hoped that the daily enlargement of the exportation trade will produce a proportional increase of commercial consequence and opulence. The mercantile business of Dublin has heretofore consisted chiefly in the importation of foreign commodities; but from the great increase of the Manufactures, and their progressive state of improvement, there is no doubt, but in the course of a few years, the Metropolis of Ireland will boast of an extensive foreign Export Trade. The inconvenience arising from the state of the harbour is at present a great obstacle to the Shipping Trade of Dublin, but it is expected to be soon removed by a Canal being cut from Sutton, through the Isthmus of Howth, or from Dalkey, to communicate with the Grand Canal, by which there would be an excellent passage from the sea for the largest ships, which now are obliged to send their cargoes up the River in lighters.

The Wholesale and Retail Domestic Trade of Dublin is conducted in a most respectable and extensive manner. The Warehouses are very commodious, particularly for Woollens, Cottons, Muslins, &c. &c.; and at two seasons of the year, viz. Spring and Autumn, are crowded with shopkeepers from all parts of the country, who then purchase their stocks for the ensuing seasons. The retail business of this city is also very great. The numerous shops in all branches of trade, are elegant, and some of them superb: in fact to give a just idea of the general traffic of Dublin, it is only necessary to say that almost in every feature it resembles the style and splendour of the Metropolis of Great Britain.

ADJACENT COUNTRY.

The country round this charming city corresponds with it in beauty. The river and walks are on the one hand enlivened by the delightfully shaded green lanes of Clontarf, with a view of the craggy hill of Houth, and on the other the scene is highly finished by the distant prospect of vessels, with their extended white sails majestically gliding from the view. Opposite to this on the other side of the water, at a considerable distance are the wildly magnificent Wicklow Mountains softening into mild and varied beauty as they approach the city, forming altogether environs that are not to be equalled in Europe. The Black Rock about three miles distant towards the bay, is a pleasant village, where there is most excellent bathing, the salt water being extremely pure. This place in summer, is numerously attended, and the throng of Cars and Carriages of all descriptions that are then on the road (particularly on Sundays) is calculated to strike the stranger with astonishment. In the same direction, about six miles distant, is the Dargle, a wonderful natural curiosity, it is an immense valley, lined with fine lofty trees, whose tops are considerably below persons who are walking on the elevated ground on either side. Proceeding forward at some short distance is a Cataract of great depth, the water falls from the precipice into the abyss below, with a noise that gives a sublimity to the entire scene. The lands are richly cultivated to the foot of the mountains, interspersed with plantations, gentlemen's country residences, and many beautifully rural cottages. In another direction from Dublin towards the North West, is the beautiful village of Leixlip, which perhaps stands unrivalled for its varied charms; here may be seen the happiest combination of wood and water, forming the most exquisite scenery conceivable. The young and the gay may here ramble among the most enchanting walks and prospects, while those more sedate may select shaded recesses, formed as it were by nature to contemplate these her wondrous beauties. In short Dublin and the country around, want nothing but a resident Nobility and Gentry, to make it as flourishing and as happy a land as any on the Globe.

ATTORNEYS.

Note. The Letters K King's Bench, C Common Pleas, E Exchequer denote the Courts to which they belong. Those without Letters belong to all the three Courts. Those in italics we have not been favoured with the information in which Courts they practice.

Those lettered s admitted Solicitors in Chancery, pursuant to an order of that Court, the 1st day of January, 1791.

Thus marked * are Members of the Law Club; a Society instituted in the year 1791, for the better regulation of practising Solicitors.

ANTRIM.

THE town of Antrim, in the county of the same name, is a small neat market town, 84 miles from Dublin, and 14 from Belfast, the trade of this place is not very extensive owing to there being no linen or butter market held here, consequently, the chief of the business on market days is for domestic purposes, and of little benefit to the resident trades-people.—Contiguous to the town, are the concerns belonging to A. & T. Ledlie, Esqrs. consisting of a very extensive paper manufactory, starch works and brewery, which contribute greatly to the employment of numerous workmen, and are also generally of great service to the Town.—Some considerable quantities of linens, and a few cottons are made here, about 300 looms for that purpose are kept in constant employ. This town stands on the north end of the beautiful Lake, Lough Neagh. It is a very ancient borough, whose Mayor, once commanded a very great extent of coast in the county, and also in the county of Down, the Corporation receiving the benefits of the customs of the vessels that came within the bounds of their jurisdiction, (those of Bangor and Belfast excepted) but this right being purchased some time back by the Crown, the general Custom-House was then transferred to Belfast. Antrim consists of one handsome, spacious and clean street, at the top of which is a very neat Market-House, with a handsome Cupola, near this is the fine lodge and castle gate, the entrance to the late Earl Massareens Castle, which is a superb mansion, and furnished in a style of great magnificence. The Church which stands in the main street, is a small neat building with a handsome square tower, terminating with a fine high spire, at a place called Steeple, very near the town, is one of those ancient round towers, and about three miles west, immediately on the shore of the Lake, stands Shanes Castle. The country round is beautifully pleasant in summer, and the lands are good and fertile, there are four yearly fairs, viz. 1st. Jan. 12th. May, 1st. August, and 12th. Nov. Market day on Thursday. The population is considered to be about 1800 inhabitants.

Post Office.—Elenor Charters, Post Mistress.—The mail from Dublin arrives in Antrim every day at twelve o'clock; and letters dispatched to Dublin at two.—The mail leaves Antrim at half past two daily, by which the Londonderry letters are forwarded, and returns at six every morning, when the Belfast bags are sent off.

ARMAGH.

ARMAGH is a neat and well built town, situate on the river Callen, 62 miles north of Dublin, in a rich and populous country, chiefly occupied in the manufacture of linen. It is the see of the Archbishop of Armagh, the Primate of all Ireland, This city, 50 years ago presented a very different appearance contrasted with its present state; its cathedral was dilapidated, the streets unpaved, mud cabins, miserable hovels, were the only wretched retreats of a population wanting industry, and even cleanliness; excepting the cathedral, it was without churches or schools. Such was Armagh half a century ago. Another "Man of Ross" in the person of prelate Robinson, by the generous sacrifice of £30,000 of his fortune effected in the space of seven years a perfect metamorphose. He repaired the half ruined cathedral and built three churches, exclusive of a very handsome one of white stone, to the erection of which he was instrumental. He constructed likewise a school of considerable magnitude, now termed the College; built and endowed a public library; was the means of establishing an infirmary, and the present handsome appearance of the city may be principally attributed to the plans laid down by him. He erected also the Episcopal Palace and the Market House, which is at once useful and ornamental. The Barracks at the suggestion of his Grace, were built in a situation which prove an embellishment to the suburbs of the city. This excellent man encouraged piety by his example, and industry by his munificence. The following statement extracted from the annals of Armagh, will at once shew its antiquity and recapitulate its misfortunes. In 547, St. Patrick founded a priory of Canons of the order of St. Augustine, which continued for many ages one of the most celebrated Ecclesiastical Institutions in the world.

670 and 687. The town destroyed by accidental fires.
724. St. Colman Huamacensis Biographer of St. Patrick died here.
729. King Flathbert abdicated his Throne and became a Monk in this Priory.
778. The town consumed by Lightning.
831. The Danes plundered Armagh thrice in one month.
839. The Danes burned the town and destroyed all the sacred reliques.
850. The city was laid waste by invaders.
873. The Danes plundered and burnt the town, and massacred 1000 of the inhabitants.
830. The Danes sacked Armagh, destroyed the great Church and other edifices, and carried away captive 720 of the inhabitants.
893—895 and 898. The town was pillaged by the Danes.
919—931 and 943. The town plundered, sparing only the sick and the Churches.
1004. King Boromh presented a collar of gold weighing 20 ounces to the Clergy of the Cathedral.
1012. The Danes reduced the town to ashes.
1013. King Boromh and his son (killed in the battle of Clontarf) were interred here.
1016. Sitric with the Dublin Danes burned Armagh.
1022. Malachy Monarch of Ireland was interred here.

The City of Armagh suffered greatly from fires, in the years 1074—1090—1093—1112—1116—1122—1150—1164—1166—1179 and 1195.

1160. Sir John De Couray plundered Armagh when Thomas O'Corcoran the Archdeacon was barbarously murdered.
1179. William Fitz Adelm forcibly removed St. Patrick's Crozier to Dublin.
1184. Philip De Worcester with a great army ravaged the town for six days.
1189—1199—1206—1208. The City was plundered by De Couray and De Lacie the younger.
1373. The possessions of the Abbey seized by King Edward III.
1612. Abbey suppressed by Henry the VIII.

The principal public buildings and places of note in Armagh are the Cathedral, which contains some fine specimens of sculpture, particularly a monument to Drelincourt, author of the celebrated work on "Death;" with others of Archbishop Robinson and the Rev. Thomas Carpendale, &c. The Metropolitan Palace and Deanery House—The Sessions House—The Barracks—the Market and Yarn Halls—The College and Charter School—The New Gaol whose appearance is terrific to the guilty mind—The New Church—The Model School—The Infirmary—Public Library, and the Observatory.—The Tontine and Commercial News Rooms, the Savings Bank, in English-street, the County Excise office, the Mall, a delightful promenade, in College-street, the romantic walks in the suburbs, termed "Dobbin's Walk," &c. &c. The places of worship not of the Establishment, are the Catholic Chapel, the Presbyterian and Seceders Meeting Houses, one of Wesleyan and one of the Modern Methodists.—The Provision Market is held on Tuesday, and that for Corn on the Saturday. Fairs.—March 28th, July 10th, August 12th, October 5th. The Races are held on the third Friday in October.

Post Office, bottom of Scotch-street.—Post Mistress, Mrs. Abigail Bolton.—Mail from Dublin arrives at ten in the morning dep. at a quarter past four in the afternoon.—Mail from Belfast (with the letters from Scotland,) arrives at ten in the morning, dep. at half past four in the afternoon.—Bye Post daily, from Loughgall, arrives at four in the evening, departs at a quarter past ten in the morning.—Bye Post from Caladon, Tynan and Glaslough arrives at four in the evening, departs at a quarter past ten in the morning.—Bye Post to Keady and Castle Blaney, arrives at half past ten in the morning, departs at three in the Afternoon, on Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

ATHLONE

FORMERLY a town of considerable note, is situate nearly in the centre of the kingdom, stands on the great river Shannon, which in its course divides it into nearly two equal parts, one situate in the County of Roscommon, in the Province of Connaught, the other in Westmeath, in the province of Leinster, but in close connection with each other. It is 59, miles west from Dublin, and 47 from Galway. It was formerly fortified, and is famous in the annals of Irish History, as the scene of one of the greatest efforts of valour on record, for, in the year 1691, General Ginckle, at the head of King William's army, passed the river, which was here deep and rapid, in defiance of a heavy fire, kept up by the French and Irish armies, who were in possesion of that part of the town, which was deemed impregnable, and to the astonishment of all, stormed and carried the works in less than half an hour.——On the bridge which joins that part of the town, situated in the county of Roscommon, to the Westmeath side, are some badly executed figures, with inscriptions indicative of the success of Queen Elizabeth, and of the mode of execution practised on the Rebels in her time.

In that part of Athlone called the English town, on the east of the Shannon, a Monastery was founded by Cathel Croible Deary O'Connor, prince of Connaught; who, not living to finish the building, it was compleated by Sir Henry Dillon, who was buried there in the year 1244. In the Connaught part, a Monastery, called De Innocentio, was anciently found, to which King John in 1216 gave some land, in exchange for the scite on which he built the castle; and to which, in the year 1279, King Edward the first, granted all the weirs and fisheries, together with the toll of the bridge, and eight acres of arable land. In the year 1241, Albert Archbishop of Armagh, consecrated the great Church. It is recorded that on the 27th October, 1697. The town of Athlone was visited by an unusual and terrible storm of wind, rain and lightning. accompanied with the loudest claps of thunder ever heard. which so appalled the soldiers, on duty, after witnessing the guard house stript of its covering, that they fled to the doors and windows, in the greatest trepidation; but here they were doomed to witness a scene more terrific and alarming; an Ebon darkness prevailed for a short time, torrents of rain fell with great violence, impelled by a hurricane; the clouds discharged immense globes of the electric fluid, some of which struck the castle; in an instant, a most tremendous explosion announced the direful catastrophe. The magazine blew up, containing 260 barrels of gunpowder, 1000 charged hand granades and 810 skains of match: these were all blown into the air, together with 220 barrels of musket and pistol balls, great numbers of pick axes, spades, shovels, horse shoes and nails, spreading devastation all around. The town's gates were forced open, the windows all broken, the houses shaken to their foundations, the town and neighbouring fields covered with the spoils of the castle, and the alarmed inhabitants invoking heaven to have mercy on them, who suddenly roused from sleep, thought the last trump proclaimed the day of judgment. Notwithstanding the advantageous position which Athlone commands, at the extremity of Lough Ree, and bearing witness to the daily improvements which are made in places all around it, from supineness, or some other cause, it continues in a ruinous state.

Athlone is governed by a Soverign and Vice Sovereign. The present officers are Richard Handcock, jun. esq. Sovereign; Richard Handcock, sen. esq. Vice Sovereign; John Hasttings, Clerk; Thomas Gray and John Longworth, Bailiffs; George French, Esq. Ecclesstreet, Dublin, Recorder; Peter Shackey, Deputy Recorder, and Town Clerk.

BANDON

Is situate on the northern side of the river Bandon, in the county of Cork, in the province of Munster, at the distance of 137 miles from Dublin, and by the new line of communication 17 from Cork. The great Earl of Cork, as he was called, founded this town, about the year 1640, for the accommodation of his English followers, to the total seclusion of the natives, who were not permitted to enter a town built on that ground, from which, very few years before their Ancestors had been driven. Having almost a Princely estate in this county, he wished to have it entirely inhabited by English Protestants, and the poor natives were to be expelled to make room for those new settlers. From the vast property gathered from his hitherto poor Irish tenants, he was enabled in a very short time, to erect Bandon, containing two churches, and two market-houses, with several well built streets, and a bridge across the river Bandon, whence the town took its name. The town was founded on firm land, in midst of an impassable bog, which was drained by Richard Boyle, first Earl of Cork, and father to the philosophic Boyle, who was born at Lismore, and, whose physical tracts are in such high esteem. It was well fortified against the attacks of the Irish enemy, and rapidly increased in size and wealth. As the People he settled here were industrious and economical, all Protestants, and lived within side the walls. After some time, the streets within the walls became incapable of containing the increased number of inhabitants, and several very long streets were built outside of them in every direction. Time at length saw the walls and gates demolished, and the admission of Irish Roman Catholics into the town of Bandon; indeed, the compiler of the Commercial Directory, views with inexpressible satisfaction, the expiration of prejudices, in the union of all parties, and trusts the day is not far distant, when man will embrace his fellow man by the tender name of brother, laying aside all religious and polical differences, and studying most how to render each other happy. Bandon contains two parishes, namely, Ballymodane and Kilbrogan. One of the churches and one of the market houses, are on the north side of the river, the other on the south. At present, the foundation of a third, and an extensive market house is dug, and from the well known spirit of enterprize and perseverance in the leading characters in Bandon, it will doubtless soon become an ornamental and useful building to the town. The river divides the town, in which there are two churches, as already noticed, two Roman Catholic chapels, two Methodist, and a Presbyterian chapel, a female school of Industry, a Charity school for Protestant boys; two Charity schools for Catholics, one for boys, the other for girls; a fever hospital, and a Dispensary, a Court house, and a Bridewell; extensive, new, and very eligible shambles, on an eminence without the town, circular in form, very spacious, with an excellent contrivance to admit fresh air into each stall, and in the centre of the area, possessing a large public pump. Near to these shambles, is a barrack for cavalry, and a Savings' Bank. In the neighbourhood is a Salmon fishery, and a mile from the town is Castle Bernard, the seat of Lord Bandon. Bandon is a borough, and very considerable market town. In one of the market houses is a market held on Wednesday, and in the other on Saturday, the latter of which is the best and one of the largest in the county, it is also one of the most reasonable, butchers' meat being cheaper than in Cork, or Kinsale. Most articles of shop business may here be procured on reasonable terms; numbers of them the manufacture of the town. The inhabitants, generally respectable, and frequently opulent, are remarkable, to a proverb, for sober demeanour, and diligent attention to their respective pursuits. There are several extensive manufactures carried on here, giving full employment to the numerous inhabitants, viz. that of linen, particularly tickens, cottons, corduroys, &c. woolcombing, stuffs, also blankets and coarse woollen cloth. Blue dying is carried on extensively, that colour being a favourite one with the country people, who manufacture their own frize and send it to the town to be dyed. There are also extensive flour mills, a very large brewery, and eligible tan-yards; all of which are carried on with great spirit, to the credit of their respective proprietors, and the advantage of the whole town. It is governed by a Provost, twelve Burgesses, and town clerk, and sends one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday & Saturday. Reverend Joseph Jervois, Provost, John Cotter, town clerk. Its fairs are held on Ascension day, the 6th. of May, 29th. of October, and 8th. of November; and its population are stated at 14000.

Post-Office, Bridge-street.—Post Mistress, Elizabeth Hall.—Mail for Cork, &c. is dispatched every day at fifty minutes past two o'clock in the afternoon; and for the six western towns every morning at half past nine.

Conveyance

From James Harts, Bridge-st. A Jingle to Cork every morning, [Sundays excepted] at six o'Clock, for passengers and parcels.

BELFAST

Is situated on the western side of the Lagan, in latitude 54° 35' 42" north, and in longitude 6° 1' 30", west of London, on a tract of land remarkable for being extremely level. Near the bridge of 22 Arches, was formerly a ford at low water, and a ferry at high tide. It is supposed to have derived its present name from Bela Fearsad, which signifies a town at the mouth of a river. Belfast Lough, is a safe and commodious harbour, the entrance being in breadth about five English miles, from the Point between Groomsport and Ballyholme Bay, in the county of Down, and the White Head in the county of Antrim. The length of the Bay, from the White Head to the Quays, is about twelve miles, gradually becoming narrower as it approaches the bridge, where it is much contracted by the different landing-places on the one side, and the embankments of Ballymacarret on the other. Formerly, at high tide, there was not more than from eight to nine feet water at the town;

now, the depth is so much increased by the judicious labours of the Ballast-Office, that vessels which require fourteen feet water, are moored close to the Quays. Belfast is mentioned by Spencer, as having been wasted by Edward Bruce, in his progress at the beginning of the fourteenth century. Of the Castle there is no date known. The charter constituting Belfast a Corporation consisting of a Sovereign, and twelve Burgesses, was granted by James I. At this period the town probably was not a place of much note, as it is styled in the patent, town or village. In 1648, it was taken possession of by General Monk, for the Parliament, and during the protectorate, tranquillity seems to have been established, which however was interrupted during the reign of James II. who endeavoured to force a new Charter upon the Corporation, but which in fact was never acted upon. In 1740, Lord Strafford purchased on the part of the Crown, from the Corporation of Carrickfergus, their Privilege of importing foreign goods, at one third of the duties payable in other places. This most judicious measure, would have been of small consequence had not Belfast and the surrounding country been at that period inhabited by an industrious people, who applied themselves closely to the manufacture of linen, which created a demand for articles of importation. But the wars subsequent to the year 1741, caused considerable interruption to the rising prosperity of Belfast. But from the day that peace was given to the country, and attention was paid to its interests, by encouragement afforded to the already established manufacture of linen, then a wonderful fabric of prosperity was raised, and in the beginning of the last century, Belfast was well known in Europe, as a place of considerable trade, since that period it has arisen to a degree of prosperity seldom exceeded in any age, or by any country. The population of Belfast, including Ballymacarret, may at the present period be estimated at 35000. Rapid as the increase of inhabitants has been, the progressive improvement of trade has fully kept pace with it; the average amount of customs for eight years previous to 1818, amount to the sum of 370,000 pounds. The Sovereign has the government of the markets, and the regulation of all matters respecting the sale of provisions, he is also an ex-officio Magistrate of the county of Antrim. Commissioners of Police are vested with authority to execute all regulations respecting the paving, lighting and cleansing the streets, and we feel pleasure in stating that their exertions are deserving the warmest approbation.

Ballast-Office.—The Ballast-Office, has the power to make bye laws, for cleansing and improving the Harbour, and regulating all matters relative to the shipping. Its revenue arises from a tax on registered tonnage. An additional Graving Dock, is now being formed, which it is anticipated will prove of great benefit. Belfast Academical Institution was opened in 1814, under the superintendance of a board of managers and visitors. The school department is conducted by several masters; and the Collegiate department under the direction of a Faculty, consisting of the several professors. The building forms a fine termination of Chichester-street. This Institution was erected by voluntary subscription, amounting to 22,000 pounds, and is justly considered the glory of the town. Its regulations are admirable and the number of students and scholars, amount to some hundreds. Belfast Academy in Donegall-street, was founded in 1786, under the direction of a President, Trustees and Patrons; the departments of learning taught in this Academy, are the Classics, Mathematics, French, English, Mercantile and Writing Schools. Belfast Lancasterian School, Frederic-street, is open every day in the week except Sunday, for the instruction of children of every religious denomination.

The Chamber of Commerce was established in the year 1800, for the purpose of guarding the Mercantile interests against encroachments, and the arbitration of disputes between Merchants.

The Commercial Buildings, end of Donegall-street, are now nearly completed, 20,000 pounds, having been subscribed for its erection. This Building is intended, exclusively for the accommodation of Merchants; it is fronted with the best Granite from Dublin, and presuming from the elegance of the design; it will be a conspicuous ornament to the town.

The Custom House is a large building situated on Hanover Quay, with appropriate offices for transacting the business of the Port. The Exchange is situated in the centre of the town at the termination of Donegall-street. The building is handsome, built of brick, faced with stone. Above, are elegant Assembly Rooms, and below, the Piazza, where the Merchants assemble on Mondays and Wednesdays at twelve, and on Fridays at eleven o'clock, for the transaction of Business.

HOSPITALS, DISPENSARIES, AND INFIRMARY.

The Dispensary was established in 1792, for the relief of sick poor at their own habitations. The benefit of this institution will be apparent when it is stated that in the first four years more than 2000 persons had received advice and medicines: connected with the Dispensary is the Fever Hospital. The advantage of this establishment will be best seen by stating that in the year 1817, in the short space of three months 959 patients were admitted, of which number 46 only died. Which will appear a very small proportion when compared with the ravages, made by that wide spreading malady the Typhus Fever, in other large towns.

The Lying-in-Hospital was instituted in 1794, and is supported by the subscriptions of the ladies of Belfast and the surrounding neighbourhood.

The House of Correction erected in 1817, near the upper end of Chichester-street, is a good brick building and well adapted for the intended purpose, and possesing excellent regulations.

The House of Industry, instituted in 1809, for the suppression of mendicity, and of giving employment to indigent Females in spinning flax, &c. This may be considered one of the best institutions in the town.

The Public Library, White Linen Hall, termed the Belfast Society for promoting knowledge, contains a valuable collection of books, and a Museum: it is supported by annual subscriptions.

Linen Halls. The White Linen Hall was erected by subscription in the year 1783, it is situated at the end of Donegall-place. The building is spacious and convenient and the business transacted in it is very considerable. The Brown Linen Hall, in Donegall-street, where the unbleached linens are exhibited, has lately been greatly improved. A considerable quantity of fine yard wide linen is sold on each Market-day.

Markets. Belfast is well supplied with shambles meat; it has two markets for the sale of this commodity, one in Hercules-street, the other in Castle-place, better known by the name of Montgomery market; which latter has accommodations for the sale of fish, vegetables, fruit, &c. a market for the sale of eggs, butter, and vegetables has lately been established on May's ground, lower Chichester-street. There is also a well supplied fish-market, in William-street south. A market is held in Smithfield three days per week for the sale of grain, and on four days per week for the sale of hides.

The News Rooms of Belfast, are the Commercial Inn, Waring-street, in the buildings of the White Linen Hall, and at the Nelson Club House, in Donegall-place. They are well supplied with papers of the three kingdoms, Magazines, Reviews, &c. &c.

The places of Public Worship are numerous and well attended. They consist of the Parish Church of St. Ann and St. George's Chapel of ease; four Presbyterian, two Seceding; one Convenanting; one Independent; two Methodist; one Baptist; and two Catholic Chapels; also one Friends' Meeting House.

The places of Amusement are the Theatre, in Arthur-street, Montague Talbot, Manager; and the Private (Amateur) Theatre, 42, Castle-street, Alex. Johnstone, Manager.

The Poor House and Infirmary, built by Subscription and private Lottery, was opened in 1774.

The Belfast Savings' Bank, was instituted in the year 1816. It is open every Friday evening, at six, at the House of Industry.

The Female Society for clothing the poor, commenced in 1812, it is supported by voluntary contributions, and has been productive of much good among the necessitous in periods of distress.

The Literary Society, was instituted in 1801. Its objects are science, antiquities, and Literature.

The Association for discountenancing vice; a branch of which was established here in 1815, for the distribution of Moral and Religious Tracts, &c.

The foregoing are the principal public institutions and buildings of Belfast, there are however others, which at once denote the piety, the humanity, and public spirit of this flourishing town.

The markets of Belfast, are open daily, although Friday is considered the principal one.

The Fairs are held on the 12th of August, and the 8th of November.

CARLOW,

THE metropolis of a county of the same name, anciently called Catherlough, or the city on the Lake, is pleasantly situated on the great river Barrow, about 40 miles south west from Dublin; 16 from Naas; and 18 from Kilkenny. The two principal streets are long, and by crossing each other at nearly right angles, divide the town into four parts, nearly equal; in each quarter are other streets of minor importance. There are also extensive suburbs on each side the river. The situation of Carlow is exceedingly pleasant; up the river the landscape is highly picturesque, and for eight miles downwards, is one of the most delightful rides imaginable. In this town is a very good flesh market, and a most extensive one for butter, most of which is sent to Waterford for exportation. The church is a modern building, plain, but neat, with a steeple of a moderate height. The Romish chapel is very large; the Methodists have a chapel here, and the Quakers a meeting house. The Roman Catholic College, or Academy, is a large and elegant building. Carlow has a very cheerful appearance at a distance from the number of White houses scattered up and down in its neighbourhood, nor is the stranger disappointed when he enters it, there being a cleanness and neatness, in the the streets superior to most towns in the Kingdom. The Court House is built over the Gaol, there is a Barrack in this town, and, on an eminence overhanging the river, stands the remains of an old Castle, which, at present, a traveller would imagine, from the stupendous masses of stone cemented together, and covering a lage plot of ground, that some convulsion of nature had shook its foundations: the ruins of an abbey also present themselves to observation, built as early as the year 634, whose founder was buried there, and gave name to the structure. The Castle is said to have been erected by King John, and was taken by one of the Cavanaghs, named Donald M'Art, who stiled himself M'Murrough, King of Leinster, in the 20th year of Richard 2nd 1346: in his possesion it remained for some time. In 1577 it sustained a long siege against Rory Oge Moore, then in rebellion against Queen Elizabeth, but at last was obliged to surrender, when it was plundered, and many of the inhabitants inhumanly put to the sword: it was once walled round, but submitted to Cromwell, on his first approach. On Carlow, a party of insurgents made a violent attack on the 25th of May 1798, but were so well received by the small garrison, that above 600 were killed, and numbers burned in about eighty houses, which were destroyed; forty-eight men and several rebel officers were taken prisoners, and executed a few days after. The great road to Kilkenny, Waterford and Cork, runs through the town, thereby making it a great thoroughfare. The river Barrow is navigable from Athy, (where it is joined by the grand canal from Dublin) through Carlow, and from thence to where it falls into the Suir below Waterford, so that boats pass from Carlow to the Metropolis, Ross, Waterford, &c. By these means this town has the advantage of inland navigation to a superior degree. Here is a bridge of eleven arches, beyond which is an extensive suburb called Graigue; there is a lock on the river in this part, and good quays for the convenience of trade. A passage boat goes daily from hence to Athy, where the Barrow is joined by a branch of the grand canal from Dublin.

Carlow possesses a Dispensary, and a Fever Hospital. A Nunnery with a beautiful chapel attached; a new Presbyterian Chapel, the first ever erected in Carlow. A Magdalen Asylum; and a Military Hospital; an elegant Assembly Room; and a subscription News Room. The trade at present is very much circumscribed, being principally confined to provisions, and in supplying the town and neighbourhood with coals from Kilkenny. It is governed by a Sovereign and sends one member to Parliament. The present member is the Right Honourable Lord Charleville. Its market days are on Monday and Thursday, and its fairs the 4th of May; 22nd June; 26th August, and 8th of November. Carlow contains a population estimated at 8000 souls.

Post Office, Burrin-street.—Post Mistress, Mary Shervington. Mail to Dublin every morning at ten o'clock. To Cork every evening at half past six. To Waterford at half past three every morning, and to Dublin every night at half past ten. A bye post to Tullow at four every morning, returns every evening at seven.

CLONMEL

IS a very considerable and thriving town, situated on the northern side of the river Suir, whose water is beautifully clear, and navigable to Waterford, it is the county and assize town of Tipperary in the province of Munster, about 83 miles from Dublin, 25 from Kilkenny, 24 from Waterford, and 42 from Cork. It is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, Bailiffs and Town Clerk. The streets are long and regular, and the houses are well built, the greater part of which are rough cast, and are either cream coloured or white, save here and there one of neat appearance, whose front is often curiously ornamented with blue slates, cut into various devices. From the great fertility of the country in which this industrious town is situated, it gained the appellation of the golden vale, and contains some of the richest land in the whole island. Clonmel within these few years has been very considerably enlarged, Mr. Banfield has added much to the appearance of the town by the erection of a row of very genteel houses, at the east entrance, and Messrs. Rialls, are adding very considerably both to its extent and appearance, in the erection of a whole street of very eligible houses, the streets are clean, and well paved, but want that comfortable accommodation, a flagged causeway. The Church is an ancient gothic building, in good preservation, with a handsome octagonal steeple, containing a ring of five musical bells; there are ramparts round the top of the steeple, as well as all round the church; the interior boasts an elegant simplicity, and possesses an excellent organ, the exterior corresponds with the rest of the town in appearance, being roughcast, and white washed. Within the church yard is a pleasant walk, overshadowed by trees on each side, which gives a truly picturesque appearance to the whole. There are two Catholic Chapels, one of them large, new, and beautiful, the other in Irishtown; there is also a Friary, a Nunnery, and a Monkhouse, two Methodist Chapels, a Meeting-house, belonging to the Quakers; a Baptist, and a Presbyterian Chapel. There is also a house of Industry, large, clean, and convenient, a building which reflects the highest credit on the county; it was erected in the year 1811, and is chiefly supported by county presentments, at present it consists of three departments, namely, infirm poor, vagrants and lunatics: though its advantages are not confined to these objects, for in March 1818, when the Typhus fever proved so fatal, the Governors with christian charity, admitted into it the orphan children of such parents as fell victims to the disease, in the various hospitals in the town, who had not friends to afford them relief; the number of such children in the house amount to 23, who are comfortably provided with meat, drink, washing, lodgings, clothes and education: the aggregate number of the persons in the various departments at present, is 180. There is a Fever Hospital and a Dispensary, of elegant appearance; a Lying-in-hospital; a Sick Poor Establishment, and a Female Orphan Protestant Asylum. The county Gaol is a strong stone fabric. The new Court-house stands in an eligible situation, in Nelson-street is a good convenient building, and an ornament to the town; the old one is devoted to the use of the soldiery, possesses a good clock, is known by the name of the Main-guard, and stands at the entrance into Main-street, in which the Post Office is situated, at the far end of which one of its gates is still standing, and which leads into Irishtown; in Duncan-street is a commodious Commercial Coffee Room, supported by Subscription; and at the Royal Mail Coach Hotel, a Subscription News Room; in Warren-street is an Abbey in ruins, though the steeple is nearly perfect; it is of considerable extent, and supposed to have been built in the thirteenth century. There is a Butter Market House, which is a very large stone building, containing two Offices, for the Butter Inspector, &c. &c. where regular entries are made of all butter weighed, and where all must be taken to be weighed that is sold, either for home consumption or for exportation, the average quantity sold in the market annually, is about 50,000 firkins, supplied from the daries of several adjacent counties. William Chaytor, Esq. is Weigh Master, and John Keating is Buttter Inspeetor. The Corn Market is one of the greatest in the Kingdom, immense quantities being purchased for exportation as well as for manufacture and home consumption. There is a large market-place for potatoes, and a very excellent shambles. Three good stone bridges admit an easy passage over the Suir, into the two counties of Waterford and Tipperary, the one near the east entrance into the town, is of four well turned arches, the second bridge is of three arches, and the third bridge is at the extremity of Irishtown, near to the House of Industry, and is the direct road to Youghal, by way of Cappoquin, Aglish, and the ferry across the united streams of the Bride and the Blackwater. The traveller on his approach to the town, has a good view of two fine and extensive Barracks, one for artillery, the other for infantry. In an airy situation without the town, is an extensive and convenient military hospital. Clonmel is a Borough, and sends one member to Parliament; its present Repsesentative is John Keily, Esq. Its market days are Tuesday and Saturday; its Fairs are the first Wednesday in every month, except those of May and November, in which months they are observed on the fifth day of each. The population is estimated at from 15,000, to 16,000.

Post Office, south Main-street.—Rev. James Worrall, Post Master.—J. O'Brien, acting Post Master.—This office is open from eight o'clock in the morning, till ten at night. —The Cork Mail to Dublin at one o'clock in the morning.—The Dublin Mail to Cork, at a quarter past three in the morning, also at half past three in the afternoon.—To Cahir, by Post Boy, at a quarter before eleven in the forenoon.—To Waterford at half past six in the morning.

COLERAIN.

THE town of Colerain, in the county of Londonderry, is 114 miles N. E. from Dublin. It has long been famed, for the superior fabric and fineness of the linen manufacture, of which the principal part is exported to the English markets. Colerain is also remarkable for the large quantities of salmon, of superior quality, which are caught in the river Bann. The fishing season commences in March, and continues till August, the principal part of the salmon then caught, are exported to Liverpool packed in ice, by fast sailing smacks, which are dispatched twice weekly; at a distance of a mile above the town there is a ledge of rocks which intersect the river, over which the water that issues from Lough Neagh, in its progress to the sea is precipitated with grand rapidity, a height of 12 feet. Piers are constructed on these rocks, between which are cuts at spaces of 27 feet, 15 feet, and leaving 40 open, it being only when there is a strong fresh that the fish can leap up the rocks on their progress up the river to spawn. The places where the cuts are erected, being easier of ascent, hence they enter and are taken thereout with hand nets, but the largest quantities of salmon are taken at the Creena, a mile below Colerain, in nets which extend across the river, it is only the fish that pass those nets that are taken at the cuts. There are also two eel fisheries, on the Bann, commencing in September, when considerable quantities are caught, which are chiefly salted for winter use. Colerain is a handsome well built town, governed by a Mayor, and twelve Aldermen, (one of whom is annually elected Mayor) and twenty-four Burgesses, under the government of Sir John Perrot, it was intended to be the chief city of the county, and it now is the second town for extent and importance, containing upwards of 5000 inhabitants. In the centre of the town, is a spacious handsome square, called the Diamond, surrounded by well built houses, and respectable shops, the markets are held here, and in the middle is the market-house, a large handsome building, (with a Piazza) under which is the meal market, and above, the courts of quarter sessions, assemblies, &c. are held; indeed the town of Colerain can vie with most others, with good, well paved, clean streets and handsome houses, additions are also rapidly making.

The trade of this port, consists principally in the export of linen and linen yarn, butter, pork, hides and salmon to Liverpool, Glasgow, America, and British Plantations; the importations consist chiefly of timber, sugar, rock salt, coals, hardware, earthenware, herrings, &c. &c. leather and cotton goods are manufactured in this town, to some considerable amount yearly. The importation of tobacco, spirits, teas and wines are not permitted, which is of considerable disadvantage to the merchants, as they are obliged for the most part to purchase such articles from Belfast; could these restrictions be done away (to which there appears no reasonable objection) and the entrance to the harbour improved, Colerain would then perhaps be as flourishing a mercantile town as any in the Kingdom. The staple manufacture of the county being linens, they are brought by the weavers, (which are in immense numbers) to the weekly markets on Saturdays, when the merchants and bleachers attend and purchase the webs in a brown state; this trade in Colerain, and its immediate vicinity, is little less than 600,000 pounds annually. Provision merchants also attend this market for the purchase of pork, beef, &c. in very large quantities,

The shambles and market for domestic uses, are plentifully supplied with beef, mutton, rabbits and fine turbot and other fish, at very reasonable prices. The town is pleasantly situated, and the country round, with the Bann river, and the salmon leap at the cuts, (the Proprietor of which is George Little, Esq.) are extremely interesting, and well worth the strangers notice. The Giant's Causeway, that wonderful natural and grand phenomenon, is only nine miles from Colerain; and attracts numerous visitors to the town, and neighbourhood, during the summer months, particularly as there is excellent bathing all along the coast. There are here two Protestant Churches; one of which in a street called Killowen, is very ancient, two places for Dissenters, one Methodist, one Independent, one Sectarian, and one Catholic Chapel. The Fairs are held on the 12th. May, 5th. July, and 2nd. November. Market days on Saturdays.

John Boyd, Post Master, and Stamp-Office, Bridge-street.—The Mail for Dublin, is dispatched from this Office, at half past ten o'clock every night, (Fridays excepted.)—The letters from Dublin arrive at eleven o'clock every night, (Mondays excepted.)—The Belfast and Scotch letters, are dispatched and received by the above mail.—The English letters, are sent also at the same time.—The cross post to Baliycastle, through Bush-mills, leaves at five every morning, and returns at nine every evening.—A cross post to Magharafelt, every day at twelve at noon; returns every evening at eight o'clock.—Letters for Dublin, Belfast, England and Scotland, must be in the Office before nine o'clock in the evening, to go by next day's mail.

CORK,

THE capital of the county, is a sea port, and Bishop's see, in the province of Munster; 124 miles S. W. of Dublin; 25 from Youghal; 42 from Clonmel, and 60 from Waterford. It is situated on the river Lee, by which it is intersected; and over which it has several bridges; the principal one, of very elegant structure, named after the tutelar Saint of Ireland, and standing on three beautiful arches. Cork is the second city in the kingdom, and is peculiarly well situated for trade, being built on the north and south sides of the river above named, and on a number of Islands, round which the river forms natural canals, by means whereof boats come through the town, and deposite their cargoes along the numerous quays. It is said to have been founded by the Danes, and enclosed by them with walls, about the middle of the ninth century. It was never a place of any considerable strength, yet it made a resistance of five days against a regular army, in Sept. 1690, when it was besieged by the Earl of Marlbro', who took it from King James' army, at which time, the Duke of Grafton, was slain in the attack, who was serving as a volunteer; the garrison, consisting of 4,500 men, surrendered on Michaelmas day, and were made prisoners of war. The ancient name of this city, was Corcag, i. e. the West Plain, Marsh, or Morass; and from the circumstance of the great number of marshes, and the river branching out in several directions, and flowing through many of its streets, causes the whole to bear a strong resemblance to a Dutch town. The city of Cork is large, the main streets well built, wide and airy, and the houses, with a few solitary instances, fronted with blue slates; one of them called the grand parade, is ornamented with an Equestrian Statue of George 2nd. The Mansion-House at the corner of Henry-street, is a spacious and elegant edifice, and pleasantly situated near the windings of the river. The Cathedral is dedicated to Saint Patrick, and is said to have been founded by him in the seventh century. In 1725, it was taken down, and rebuilt in about ten years after, from the produce of a duty on coals. In this city, were several religious foundations, particularly the Abbey of Saint Finbar, founded by the Saint of that name, who died at Cloyne, but was buried in his own Church, where his bones were afterwards deposited in a silver shrine. Historians relate that, A. D. 800, this Abbey contained seven hundred Monk, sand seventeen Bishops. In 1057, Mugron O'Mutan Comorb, of St. Barr, was murdered in the night, by his own people. In the year 1134, this Abbey was refounded by the King of Desmond, for Canons regular of St. Augustine. A Dominican friary, was founded in 1229, and was granted by Henry VIII. in 1546, to William Bouveman, at the yearly rent of 6s. 9d. sterling. And in the year 1578, the Bishop, to the great grief of the Irish inhabitants, publicly burned at the high cross of the city, the image of St. Dominick, which had belonged to this friary. In 1420, an Augustinian friary, was founded by Patrick Lord Kinsale; which in 1576, was granted by Queen Elizabeth, to Cormac M'Teige M'Carthy. The walls of the Church, and the steeple, which is sixty four feet high, still remain, on the top of which is a gilt ship, serving as a fane; the east window, the only one of the choir, was thirty feet high, and fifteen feet broad, and uncommonly magnificent. It is now distinguished by the name of the Red Abbey, and is the residence of Philip Donovan, who is greatly improving it.

In the south suburbs, the priory of St. Stephen was founded, for the support of Lepers, which, at the general suppression of Monasteries, was granted to the city of Cork. Here was also a nunnery of St. John Baptist, near to the scite of the present market-house. A house for Carmelite friars; and a preceptory of Knights' Templars. The city of Cork, contains thirteen ancient parishes, which, by Act of Parliament, were, about the year 1726, by joining and dividing, formed into seven; and from that time, till 1749, the old Churches were thrown down, and new ones built, according to the new division; except in the parish of St. Peter, which was not rebuilt till the year 1783. The parish Church of St. Anne Shandon, on a very high ground, on the north of the river, is the most striking object in the view of the city, from its lofty situation, with a high steeple, consisting of several stories, gradually diminishing to the top, where it terminates in a beautiful Cupola; in this steeple is a good ring of bells. A little lower, on the same hill, is situated the parish Church of St. Mary Shandon; to which the old parish of St. Catharine is united; hence passing over the old north bridge, into the ancient city, St. Peter's parish, whose Church is remarkably simple, but elegant within. Near the southern end of the main-street, is Christ-Church, one of the largest modern parish Churches in Ireland; it was built in 1749, of hewn stone, with a tall steeple, but the foundation being bad, gave way at one side, which obliged it to be taken down as far as the roof of the Church, but the remaining part continued so leaning in its position, as to threaten destruction to the passengers, and in this state it remained more than half a century, when it was taken down entirely. The parish Church of St. Paul, in the eastern part of the city, is a large and neat building, but without a steeple. The Cathedral Church of St.Finbarry, which is also a parish Church, is well situated, and kept in excellent order: it has a tower at the west end, supporting a spire of considerable height, but of very inelegant form. In the neighbourhood of this church, is the Bishop's Palace, a large modern buildng. The parish Church of St. Nicholas, which serves for six parishes, is a small neat building, but without a steeple. There are three Roman Catholic Chapels; four Friaries; three Methodist Chapels; one Presbyterian; one Baptist; and one Calvinist; also a Meeting House for Quakers. Two Infirmaries, a Dispensary, a Fever Hospital, and a Dispensary for the cure of diseased Eyes; a Lying-in Hospital, a Foundling Hospital, and an Orphan Asylum. Nor is Cork without its Magdalen Asylum; and House of Industry; attached to which is a Lunatic Asylum, situated on a rising ground without the town, named Terrace-walk; of which two places, Mr. William Collins is governor; and Mrs. Mary Ann Day the matron: here are three Nunneries, and two Monk-houses, a Bridewell; two Gaols, two Court-houses, and several offices of Justice. An Exchange, a Custom-house, and Commercial-buildings, there are several Charity-schools.—A Vaccine Institution, a Society of Arts; two Theatres; a Linen Hall, a Butter Weigh-house, excellent Shambles, and well stocked Markets.

The Cork Institution is a public one, founded for the purpose of diffusing knowledge, and facilitating the general introduction of all improvements in arts and manufacture, especially agriculture; and for teaching by courses of Philosophical Lectures and experiments, the application of science. It was incorporated by Royal Charter, in 1807, and is principally supported by an annual Parliamentary grant. Attached to the Institution, are a Botanic Garden, a Scientific Library, a Museum of Minerals, and a Collection of Agricultural Implements, to serve as models for farmers; the Right Honourable the Earl of Shannon, is President; and, there are three professors belonging to the establishment, viz. Edmund Davy, Esq. professor of Chemistry. Jas Willis, Esq. M. D. professor of Natural Philosophy; and George Tisdall, Esq. professor of Agriculture. There are connected with the establishment, eight Farming Societies, in different parts of the county, which receive an annual grant from the institution, to promote agricultural improvement; contiguous to the Institution, is the Savings Bank, which is open for the transacting of business, every Saturday, between the hours of twelve and three. The Foundling Hospital, situate in Leitrim-street, is on an extensive scale, having no fewer than 360 children in the house, besides 650 out at nurse, supported by a tax of one shilling per ton, on all coals imported. The Rev. Thomas Cole, is Superintendent the Mayor, Sheriffs and Common Speaker, for the time being, to gether with the Common Couucil, and 26 Freemen of the city elected annually, are the Governors. Her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta, is patroness of the Sunday and daily Free-schools, for children of both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. The Lying-in-hospital, is chiefly supported by charity sermons, it is situated in a retired and healthful part of the town, in Nile-street, and is calculated to receive twelve poor women, but from its depressed funds, is only capable of affording relief to ten; the Right Reverend Lord Bishop of Cork is Treasurer. The Orphan Asylum, supported by voluntary subscription, contains 40 children, besides supporting 37 out at nurse. Another institution does honour to Cork, called the Humane Society, the object of which is not confined to the recovery of persons apparently drowned, but also extends to the administering of advice and medicine, to the poor of the county and city: nor should the Cork society be passed over in silence, which was established for the relief and discharge of persons confined for small debts, to which is annexed, a charitable Loan society. Numerous other charitable institutions open their friendly doors to the indigent of this spirited city, amongst which is the Blue Coat Hospital, founded in the year 1700, by the benevolent Dr. Edward Worth, for the maintainence and education of poor boys. A Green Coat Hospital also affords an Asylum to 30 boys and 10 girls. A School of industry was established in 1801, for the educating, dieting and clothing 100 children of both sexes, without any exception to religious tenets. The Barracks situate on a rocky mountain, which overlooks the city, are very fine buildings, and on an extensive scale. The Markets, which are covered in, are commodious and accommodating, enabling the caterer to purchase, Flesh, Fish, Poultry and Vegetables, without danger of being wet. The city is supplied with fresh water by means of machinery, which raises it into a reservoir, and thence into pipes that are conveyed through the city. The country around is extremely pleasing, chequered with hill and dale, wood and water, and highly cultivated; indeed, the landscape views down the river, on both sides, afford extensive and diversified prospects. The north side called Glanmire, is elegant beyond description; and up the river are two beautiful walks, one called Sunday's well, and the other the Mardyke, a gravell walk nearly an English mile in length, with rows of trees on each side, which meet at the top; this walk is the summer retreat of beauty and fashion, and is terminated by the elegant Mansion of Doctor Coghlan, distinguished by the name of Mardyke House. This city possesses an annual Revenue of about £2000 out of which the Mayor enjoys £500 for his salary. The Harbour of Cork is opposite to Cove, seven miles below the town where ships of the greatest burden can ride; but, those of great draught can proceed no higher than Passages, five miles and a half from the city, where they lighten their cargoes; the Lee admiting vessels of 150 tons only up the town. The export trade is very considerable, exclusive of an immense quantity of Spices, Groceries, Hardware, Earthenware, Cloth, Fish, and various articles from England, with Wines, Brandy, Oil, Timber, Shingles, Staves, Tar, Turpentine, Rum, and Sugar, from the Continental States America and the West Indies. In the year 1812, it imported 5,754 hhds. of flax seed; and exported 57,156 barrels of different kinds of grain; 2,896 cwts of flour and meal; 34,750 barrels of beef; 127,084 cwts of butter; 64,990 barrels of pork; 4,813 flitches of bacon; 5,000 bullocks and cows; 10,000 hogs; and 1,337,787 yards of plain, with 105,394 yards of coloured linen. This trade is of long standing; and, in consequence of the establishment of most extensive breweries, and distilleries, porter and whiskey have of late years added very considerably to its exports. The principal intercourse is with Bristol, Liverpool and London. Its chief manufactures are sail cloth, sheetings paper, leather, glue, glass, and coarse woollen cloth.

Cork is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, Bailiffs, Town Clerk, Aldermen and Common Council. The mayor is annually elected from among the Burgesses. The present men in office are the Right Worshipful Isaac Jones, Mayor; Wm. Waggett, Esq. Recorder, Wm. Preston White, Esq. George Atkins, Esq. High Sheriffs; Thomas Parsons Boland, Esq. Common Speaker; Wm. Jones, Esq. Town Clerk, and Clerk of the Crown and Peace; Wm. Phillips, Henry Hardy, Coroners; Lieut. General Lord Beresford, G.C. B. Governor; Major General, James Stirling, Lieut. Governor; James Comerford, Esq. Town Major; Cork sends two members to the imperial Parliament; its present representatives are Sir Nicholas Conway Colthurst, Bart, and the Honourable Christopher Healy Hutchinson.

The fairs are held on the day after Trinity Sunday, and on the first day of October. Its market days are Wednesday and Saturday, and its population estimated at 85,000.

DROGHEDA

Is a town and county of itself, locally situated in the counties of Louth and Meath, although principally in the former. Its antiquity is so great that no records are preserved of its origin; it is seated on the banks of the Boyne, rendered memorable by a great battle fought near it, between King William the third, and King James the second, on the firs of July 1690, in which the latter was discomfitted; the English army crossing the river near the old bridge, two miles from the town, in attempting which, the gallant Schomberg was killed by a shot from the Irish army, in commemoration of which, a pillar of 90 feet high has been erected on the spot where he fell; the Boyne runs through Drogheda from west to east, and empties itself into the Irish Sea, two miles below the town, by means of which, it carries on an extensive commercial intercourse with England, exporting grain, linen and butter, and importing coals—Over the Boyne is a bridge of three arches, which affords a view of the Custom House, and an extensive prospect of diversified scenery; nearly opposite the Custom House, majestically soaring above the town, and not far distant from the Boyne is a strong round tower of stone, supposed to have been built by the Danes, adjoining to which is a more modern building, used as a barrack for soldiers. Several good buildings adorn the town. St Peter's Church, a beautiful edifice, commands an elevated situation, with an extensive burial ground; in this church yard stands St. Peter's Charity School, erected in 1723, which is supported by subscription, educating and maintaining twenty poor boys. The Tholsel at the end of West-street, is a good stone building. The Linen Hall is very capacious and well adapted to the purpose of its erection. The Corn Market in Fair-street is a neat structure, near which is a barrack for infantry. The Charitable institutions of Drogheda are numerous; the County Hospital in great George-street and St. John's Poor House in Peter-street afford support and relief to many. In Barlow's-field in an open airy situation stands the New Gaol, erected in the year 1818; it is a stone building plain and commodious, and as far as a prison can be rendered comfortable, it is so; within its walls is a Chapel; ten cells for felons, in which the sexes are kept apart, and the unfortunate delinquents classed: a plan of the greatest utility, for arresting the progress of crime and immorality; also comfortable apartments for Debtors. The other buildings and institutions of Drogheda worthy of notice, are the Commercial, News, and Assembly Rooms on the quay; the Patrician School, conducted on the Bell and Lancasterian systems, the Endowed School of Erasmus Smyth, in Lawrence-st; the Female Orphan School in Fair street; the Nunnery in Fair-street; the Wooden House in Shop-street, and the City Gates, termed Sunday, and St. Lawrence Gates, are worthy the attention of the antiquary, particularly the former, which is completely formed of oak timber, curiously carved; the pannels in the front and sides are connected by osken projecting pins, not a solitary piece of iron being found near it, the date of its erection appears to be 1517. In the vicinity of Drogheda is the seat of George Ball, Esq. romantically situated; from various scites the eye is gratified with the trnly picturesque views of Ball's Grove, where trees of varied hue adorn a gradual slope of great extent, beautifying and overshading a public walk leading to Navan; the municipal government of Drogheda is vested in a Mayor, two Sheriffs, a Recorder, twenty-four Aldermen and Common Council, High Constable and four Serjeants at Mace; in remote periods, it appears that parliaments were held here; the town at the present period sends one Member in the person of Henry Meade Ogle, Esq. The population of Drogheda it is believed, now amounts to upwards of 25,000. It has a good market held on Saturday, and four Fairs, viz. May the 12th, June 22d, August 26th and October the 29th.

Post Office, Lawrence street—John Allen, Post Master.—Mail to the north every morning at eleven o'clock, and every night at twelve, to the south every morning at three o'clock, and every afternoon at three.

DUNDALK

IS an ancient market and assize town, of the county of Louth, built on the south side of the Castle town river, and near the shore of a large open bay to which it gives name, 40 miles north of Dublin; it is a flourishing sea port, containing about 10,000 inhabitants. Its principal import, is flax-seed.—Its exports which are considerable, consist of barley and oats, beef, butter, live cattle, hogs, and a great quantity of plain-linen.—The bay is large and safe, with from one to three fathoms water, with a sandy bottom. The town is pleasantly situated in a valley, surrounded by rich enclosures, and backed by a bold outline of mountains, particularly those of Carlingford, to the east and north. The houses are of stone, and the principal street extends to the distance of a mile, near the centre of which is a well built Mansion, now in the possesion of Lord Roden. In the neighbourhood of Dundalk, is a Tumulus, supporting a fine building of large dimensions, commanding pleasing and extensive views, the present proprietor of which is Mr. Burns; near it is a very old Castle, with a square tower at each angle, converted into a modern dwelling house, the residence of Charles Eastwood, Esq. The Castle was erected by Edward Bruce, in 1318. The country south of Dundalk, is extremely rich and well cultivated. This town has experienced its share of sufferings, in the early periods of its history, and was a royal city in the time of King Edward the Second. In this Reign, Robert de Bruce, King of Scotland, taking advantage of the divisions which at that time existed in England, sent over an army of Scots, under his Brother Edward, who being assisted by the malcontents of the day, entered the English Pale, plundering all the cities and towns in his way to Dundalk, where he caused himself to be proclaimed King, and reigned for the space of one year: The English Monarch, having appeased his domestic troubles, sent over an army under Lord Birmingham, and in the engagement which ensued, Bruce lost the battle and his life. The present bridge over the Castletown river, possesses but few claims to admiration. A new one however, is about to be built, the estimated expense of which is 14,000 pounds. The most remarkable public building, of Dundalk, are the fine Church of St. Nicholas; the Charter School; the Courts of Justice, and new Sessions-House, with fine Pillars in front; the Market Hall, News and Assembly Rooms, where a Guild is held periodically; the Corn Stores, the Butter Crane, and a Linen-Hall. The Barracks are rather a spacious than comfortable habitation for the soldier. Two Catholic Chapels, with one Presbyterian, and one Methodists and a Lancasterian Free School. The town also possesses a Literary Society of some eminence, a Fever Hospital, and the general one of the county of Louth. The principal manufactures established here, are those of salt, soap, candles, and tanned leather, in the neighbourhood, a great quantity of Linen is fabricated. The "Lady Well" is celebrated for fine water, and many cures are attributed to it. The neighbourhood of the Black Rock, is peculiarly favourable for sea bathing. The market which is well supplied and attended by multitudes is held on Mondays. The Fairs are Feb. 22nd. May 17th. July 5th. Aug. 30th. Oct, 25th. & Dec, 13th. A Hunt & Races are held annually, at Lord Charlemonts. The 24th. of June, (St. John's) is held as a festival at Castle-Town, and the 29th. (or St, Peter's) is celebrated at Sea Town.

Post-Office, upper Ward.—Post Master, George M'Gusty, Esq.—The Mails to Dublin at quarter past twelve at noon, and at twenty-five minutes before twelve at night.—To Belfast, at two in the afternoon, and a quarter past three in the morning.—Bye mails every Sun. Wed. and Fri. arrive at ten minutes past eight in the evening, departs at six in the morning.—Post-Offices established at Dunleer, Castle-Bellingham, Lurgan-green, and Flurry-Bridge.

DUNGARVAN

A Sea Port, borough town and bay of the same name, in the county of Waterford, 100 miles from Dublin, 22 from Waterford, and 42 from Cork; it is one of the most considerable fisheries in Ireland and is remarkable for producing in its vicinity the first apple potatoes in the country. It supplies a great part of the interior of Munster with fresh fish, and is itself a remarkably cheap town. It was formerly noted for its export of fruit and timber to Dublin, but that trade has lately declined, and in its place has sprung up a considerable export of corn, butter and provisions, to the ports of the English channel; it also possesses a great number of sloops and brigs, which are employed in the carrying trade for all the neighbouring ports. The river Colligan runs through the town, and divides it from Abbey-side, where there is an ancient castle and abbey, in the latter of which, is still to be seen some sheeting boards of the ground arch, of old Irish oak, which, although but an inch thick, are yet undecayed after a lapse of centuries. The Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the western division of the county are held here generally twice or thrice a year, in January, April, and October; there is also a Manor Court held here, by the Seneschal, every three weeks, at which debts under £15 may be recovered. The Church is a neat building delightfully situated, commanding a full view of the bay and harbour, and when the fishing boats are going to sea, presents a most picturesque prospect. The Catholic Chapel now building, will be both large and handsome, and when finished, not inferior to any thing of the kind in Ireland. The Duke of Devonshire is principal proprietor and patron of the town, he has lately made considerable improvements therein; built a fine stone bridge and causeway upwards of 900 feet long, at a very great expence, and has most generously given it toll free to the public. The Seneschal is appointed by him, and is the returning officer for the borough. Dungarvan sends one member to Parliament. Present member Hon. General Walpole. It contains about 8000 inhabitants. Saturday is the chief market day for pigs; and there are four other market days in each week for corn and provisions.

GALWAY

IS extremely well situated for foreign and inland trade, manufactories and fisheries, on a broad and stony river. This ancient town has ready access to the navigation of the Atlantic, and to a large range of country, through the medium of Lough Corrib, which extends 30 miles, with a range of coast of near 50 miles, through a populous and fertile country, This lake is said to occupy 30,000 acres, and contains upwards of 1000 acres of arable land and its isles; its surface is asserted to be only thirteen feet nine inches above high water, and its medium rise in floods is about three feet. Galway, so early as 1280 was a place of note, as is evinced by their town records, &c. about this time they began to fortify themselves, and surrounded their town with walls, bastions, &c. We may find from the reports of the commissioners on the records of Ireland two Rolls, one from the Sixth of Edward I. empowering the collecting of customs and tolls, on various commodities, in aid of, and for building the walls, &c. The other record from the patent Roll of the 49 of Edward III. entitled "Charter of the staple of Galway;" also another record granting unto Germyn Lynch the office of Warden and Master of the Mint in Ireland, dated the 6th August, the 1st. of Edward IV. empowering him to coin money for Galway. The merchants here carried on an extensive trade with France and Spain, particularly in the wine and brandy line; of the former article, their records assert they used to import 1200 tuns a year, which they engrossed for near four centuries. They not only supplied all Connaught, Leinster, and part of Munster, but they even had their vaults and stores at Athboy, in the county of Meath, the remains of which are to be seen there to this day, from whence they supplied Dublin, Drogheda, and the adjacent towns; in return for which they exported wool, beef, pork, butter, and fish. At present the fishery gives employment to between 3 and 4000 of the inhabitants. They used for a long time to contract for, and supply the British navy with beef and pork. Their trade and commerce was so lucrative that it enabled the thirteen tribes at an early period to purchase large estates all over Connaught, and part of Munster, many of whom notwithstanding the different revolutions that have occurred, their posterity enjoy to this day agreeable to the various charters, &c. In some parts of the town the houses are divided into separate estates or properties, for each room of which, the respective tenants pay a quit rent to the Crown, in consequence of a separate patent having been granted by Oliver Cromwell. Galway is constituted a town and county of itself, the liberties of which extend upward of four miles round. The meat markets are plentifully supplied, particularly with veal, kid, and lamb in the season, one of which is conveniently situated at the entrance of the town; it was erected about the year 1802, fitted out with stalls, and handsomely shaded. The streets, which are long and narrow, are in a bad state, not having been paved for a number of years. The greater part of this town consists of square edifices upwards of 200 years old, with each a small court in the centre; there is an arched way from the street to the court, with a stone staircase on each side. The public buildings are the Collegiate Church, which is very large and of gothic structure, of which the constitution and privileges are unique; an Exchange; a Charter School and an Hospital; a County Jail, which is a noble structure, built in a simple but elegant stile of architecture, at a place called Nuns-Island, situate at the west end of the town; it was ready for the reception of prisoners in June 1811; and for situation and convenience rivals any prison in the empire. Here is also a Barrack that will contain several thousand troops; four Nunneries and three Monasteries. Galway is governed by a Mayor, (who is a magistrate, ex officio, of the county at large) a Recorder, Aldermen, and Sheriffs. The population is computed to exceed 20,000: it sends one Member to Parliament, the present is V. Blake, Esq. Market-days, Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs, 31st May, and 4th of September.

KILKENNY.

KILKENNY, the largest inland town in the kingdom of Ireland, is situated on the banks of the Nore, in a county of its own name, in the province of Leinster, about 58 miles, S. W. of Dublin; it consists of a city and borough, without any perceptible division, namely, the city of Kilkenny, or the English town, and the borough of St. Canice, or the Irish Town, independently of extensive suburbs; it is the seat of the Bishop of Ossory, and the adjacent territory is a county in itself; its situation on the river Nore is romantically pleasant, covering two little hills; on one of them stands the Cathedral, and on the other the Castle of the Ormond family, founded in the year 1192, by Randolph, the third Earl of Chester, but it owes its present form to the Butlers. It enjoys a commanding situation, on a precipice overhanging the bend of a deep and rapid river, whose water is remarkably clear, so that aquatic plants, or small pebbles can be distinctly seen at a great depth, and have a pleasing effect; in the immediate neighbourhood of this city, and over the river, are two stately bridges, the one named St. John's, the other Green Bridge, the last is the most distant up the river and is composed of seven arches, St. John's Bridge, which is nearest to the Castle; has but three arches, but of very wide span, of hewn marble, in fine eliptical proportion. The city and borough are tolerably well built; it appears from ancient records, that in former times there were seven Churches in this city, now there are but two; viz. the Cathedral and the Parish Church of St. Mary. The Cathedral Church of St. Canice is a fine Gothic structure, in the form of a cross, it was begun in the year 1202, and was finished 1252; the length from E. to W. is 226 feet, and the length of the cross from N. to S. is 123 feet, being perhaps the largest Church in the whole Kingdom, except St. Patrick's and Christ's Church in Dublin, and in the beauty of its nave, it exceds both, the roof of which is supported by five pillars, and a pilaster of black marble. In the north transept is the Chapel of St. Mary, where the parochial Vicar of St. Canice formerly officiated. On the outside, round the Church, runs a regular battlement, and at the west end are two small spires. The tower of this Church was never finished; but it is possessed of a ring of six bells, and in the Church is an elegant Organ; the present organist is Mr. Christopher Bettesworth Bailey, professor of Music; a man highly respected for professional talent. From the Bishop's Palace to the Church, is a long double colonade, in the modern style; the nave is divided from the aisles by massy columns of black marble; the Churchyard is regularly planted with trees, into which, from Irish town is an entrance by a flight of twenty-seven marble steps; on the west of the church is a handsome terrace walk, from which there is a beautiful prospect, of a fine and well cultivated country. The Cathedral is both neat and light, though a strong fabric; the Choir is beautiful, the ceiling adorned with curious fret work, the stalls are of wood, but elegantly ornamented. There are some Monuments scattered about the Church, which though irregularly disposed of, have an imposing effect. One of these merits particular attention, it is that to the memory of Doctor Nicholas Smyth, Bishop of Ossory, who was murdered by James Dallard, an assassin, as he was examining him in the Bishop's house, for the crime of Adultery. The tomb is cut out of one entire block of marble. Near the Cathedral is a round tower of great height, and in a good state of preservation; it is in the Church-yard, and on the south side of the Cathedral. The Bishop's Palace is a handsome building, enclosed by a high wall, in which are two gates, one leading out of the Church-yard, and the other into a back street. The present Bishop of Ossory, is the Right Rev. Robert Fowler, and the Dean of Ossory, the Honourable and very Reverend Joseph Burke.

The parish Church of St. Mary, situated in the high street of the English-town, is a good building, in the form of a cross, with a steeple of a tolerable height, and possesses a good and handsome organ. There are four Roman Catholic Chapels, very well attended; and a Methodist Meeting-house. The Castle is a noble edifice, in the Gothic style, the situation is beautiful, the front lies nearly S. W. looking towards John's-bridge; before the front is a lawn edged with flowering shrubs, this lawn, with its walls, forms a rampart next the river; a walk of about eightfeet in breadth, has been taken from the river, for the recreation of the citizens, which is called the Mall, is very pleasant in fine weather; and much frequented by the genteel of both sexes. On the opposite side of the river, is the residence of the Rev. Andrew O'Callaghan, delightfully situated, where young gentlemen are boarded and educated. The College, founded by the Ormond family, is a good building, whence many learned men, particularly, Swift, Berkeley and Congreve, have been produced. There are two Charity Schools belonging to the Roman Catholics, and one to the Protestants, all three supported by subscription, and conducted on the plan of Mr. Joseph Lancaster; there is also a Nunnery, with a School belonging thereto; and four Parish Chapels for the Catholics; two Convents, the one Franciscan, the other Dominican. There are also the ruins of two Monasteries, and the remains of the Abbey of St. John, and those of St. Francis: newly erected Barracks for soldiers, of light and elegant appearance, possessing an extensive area in front, enclosed by a good stone wall. The main street is an English mile in length, spacious and well built. There is a convenient Market-place, and the Tholsel is a good building, with a lofty steeple, in which is a good clock, of infinite service to the citizens; and a numerous peasantry, who attend the Markets, which are held here, on Wednesday and Saturday, and for cattle, pigs, &c. on Tuesday and Friday. Many of its gates are still standing, and some remains of its old walls, which indicate its former strength; and in some places they are raised over rocks. In the English town, stands the Town Hall; the Gaol, with a fine sculptured figure of Justice in front, and a Market-House. Without the town, at a short distance, stands the building, used at present, as a Fever Hospital, formerly a Work-house, or House of Industry, with a Lunatic Asylum. At a little distance beyond the Castle, is St. James's Asylum, founded and endowed by the late James Swifts, in 1803. In this Asylum, there are five rooms, two of which are devoted to the service of widows of the Roman Catholic persuasion, and three to those of the Protestant. Every widow is allowed twenty pounds per year, besides the produce of the garden. Not far from the Castle, is a Theatre, of light and tasteful appearance, where the general performances, (chiefly by amateurs of the first families) are the means of amply contributing towards the support of those; who are dependent on the fostering hand of charity. In the city, and its environs, abundance of blankets and coarse woollen cloths are manufactured. The Corporation consists of a Mayor, a Recorder, two Sheriffs, 18 Aldermen, 36 Common Council Men, and a Coroner; the Mayor is elected on the first Thursday, after Midsummer day, he is then stiled the Mayor elect, and enters into office, on the 25th of September following; he is obliged to reside in the town, during the time of his Mayoralty. Kilkenny sends one Member to Parliament; the present Member is the Hon Chas. Butler. Its fairs are held on the day of Corpus Christi and on the 28th of March, there are other fairs of minor import. Its Markets are well supplied with every necessary of life; and its Shambles are plentifully supplied with meat, and the town with immense quantities of milk. In the College Meadow, on the banks of the river Nore, and in a marble quarry, is a chalybeate water, which is in very great repute. A mile from this city, are the noted marble Mills, and quarry, the property of Charles Collis Esq. the mechanism of which is so contrived, that they saw, bore, and polish at the same time; and at little more than an hour's walk, is the famous Cave of Dunmore; well worth the attention of the curious stranger. The population is estimated at, from 25,000, to 26,000

Post Office, John's-bridge.—William Clifford, Acting Post Master: this Office is open for letters all the day; and letters are delivered out, after eight o'clock in the morning. Letters for Waterford, and the West of England, if put into the Office, before four o'clock in the afternoon, are dispatched by way of Gouran; but, if after that hour, they are sent by the Cork Mail Coach, by Clonmel, at ten o'clock at night.

KINSALE

An ancient borough town and sea-port, 136 miles from Dublin, 10 from Bandon and 12 from Cork; lies on the north side of the Bandon river, where it falls into a bay called the Harbour of Kinsale, which is deep, spacious, and commodious; frequently resorted to by vessels of war, that are occassonally repaired here. It is well defended by Charles' Fort, on the left bank of the river, above the bar, which has from three to three and a half fathoms of water, at the lowest tide. Its harbour, though much less spacious than that of Cork, is one of the most compact and secure that can well be imagined. It is of a round form, with a long and deep entrance from the south, and perfectly secured by high land surrounding it in every direction; yet this town derives but little advantage in the way of trade, from so fine a harbour, the superior situation of Cork, engrossing the foreign commerce. Something however is done here in the import of coals, and also in the coasting trade; but the great marine establishment is its fishery; immense numbers of boats, of about twenty tons burden, are employed in this business, and afford an ample supply of fish to the markets of Cork, Kinsale and Bandon. In the year 1600 the Spaniards took the town, but were driven out of it the same year by the Lord Deputy Mountjoy, who obliged the Spanish commander, with 5000 men to surrender the place. Charles' Fort, though a place of great strength, was taken by the Earl of Marlborough in 1690 from the forces of King James II. Kinsale being an old town, the streets are narrow and ill paved. From the great number of trees in and about it, it has the appearance of a town in a wood, when viewed from some of the rising grounds in the neighbourhood. It has been greatly improved within these few years, by the erection of many comfortable and commodious houses; in addition to which, the establishment of hot and cold salt-water baths have contributed much to the influx of company. There is an Assembly Room, and a Bowling-green, where a beautiful prospect is gained of the harbour, and the two well built villages of Cove and Scilly. Kinsale possesses one Church, two Catholic Chapels, and one Methodist Chapel. A Fever Hospital and a Dispensary; a Female School of Industry; Alms-houses, and a building called the Gift House, for widows of freemen; also a Gaol, and a Barrack. There is a Dock and Yard for repairing ships of war, and a Crane and Gun Wharf for landing and shipping heavy artillery, with a hulk in time of war, for laying down and careening ships of great size, with the proper establishment of a royal dock yard, the more remarkable, as this is the only one in the island. Kinsale gives the title of Baron, to the ancient and noble family of De Courcy, lineally descended from John De Courcy, Earl of Ulster. It is governed by a Sovereign and Recorder, and sends one member to Parliament. It is in the county of Cork, and has a good Market on Saturday.

The population of Kinsale and its parishes are estimated at 12,000.

Post Office, Lower Fisher-st.—Ann Furzer, Post Mistress.—The Dublin Mail leaves every day except Friday, and arrives every day except Tuesday. The Cork Mail arrives every morning at nine, and returns every afternoon at three o'clock.—Attendance in the Office from nine in the morning until four in the afternoon.

LIMERICK.

LIMERICK is a large, populous, well built city, three miles in circumference, situated on the east side of the river Shannon, on the borders of the county of Limerick, one of the most fruitful and best cultivated in Ireland; it lies in 8° 30" W. longitude from London, and 52° 35" N. latitude; it is distant 94 miles from Dublin, 50 miles Cork, 50 from Galway, 66 from Waterford, and 50 from Tralee. Limerick is a city and county of itself, and sends one Member to Parliament, has two weekly markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and four fairs, viz. on Easter Tuesday, the 4th of July, the 4th of August, and the 12th of December. There is a privilege annexed to the fair on the 4th of August, that during fifteen days, no person can be arrested in the city or liberties, on any process issuing out of the Tholsel Court of Limerick. The number of its inhabitants has not been exactly ascertained, but are generally supposed to be about 60,000. The linen and woollen manufactures are carried on here to some extent, and the export of provisions is very considerable; Limerick is the see of a Bishop, to which Artfert and Aghadoe in the county of Kerry are united; it gives the title of Earl, to Edmund Henry Perry, nephew to the late Lord Perry. It is governed by a Mayor, Sheriffs, Recorder, Aldermen and Burgesses, who compose the common council of the city. The Burgesses serve the office of Mayor, before they are elected Aldermen, but in Dublin and other cities they are elected Aldermen before they come to be chief Magistrates. There are six Justices of the Peace appointed by charter, viz. the present Mayor, the late Mayor, the Recorder and three Aldermen; there is also a Military Governor, and a Town Major on the establishment. There are barracks for a considerable number of military, both horse, foot and artillery. St. Michael's, Parish or Newtown Perry, is situated near the Old Town, and is regulated by 21 Commissioners, (seven of whom are elected every two years) appointed under an Act of Parliament granted a few years ago, to the above parish, the commissioners are authorized by the said act to levy money for the purpose of paving, cleansing, watching and lighting the parish, the management of which, reflects the highest credit on those to whom it is entrusted. There is a Chamber of Commerce established by Charter, consisting of the principal merchants who give bounties to encourage the manufactories. The river Shannon is navigable for vessels of 500 tons burden, from the quay of Limerck to the sea, which measures 60 miles. The pool where vessels anchor, is an English mile from the city, and the prospect from thence is deservedly admired by foreigners, when sailing up to the town. On one side Newtown Perry, with the Bishop's and Sir Henry Harlstonge's gardens close to the river; on the other a number of villas, belonging to the citizens, and in front, a full view of the city. A great proof of the early consequence of Limerick is, that King Richard, in the 9th year of his reign, 1197, granted a charter to the city to elect a Mayor, an honour which London did not obtain until ten years after, nor Dublin until the year 1308, and Cork not until the year 1318; Limerick was formerly well fortified, and has sustained some memorable seiges: one against General Ireton, son-in-law to Cromwell, and Lord Deputy for him in Ireland; King William also, in 1690, sat down before it, but was obliged to withdraw his forces; the following year, the French and Irish having retreated thither after the battle of Aghrim, were followed by General Ginckle and the King's troops, and after a month spent in the seige, forced the fords of the river some miles above the town, dispersing the cavalry who guarded them, attacked the works that covered Thomond bridge, and drove the inhabitants into the town, who thereupon surrendered on honourable terms. Donald O'Brien, King of Limerick, bestowed his palace to the Church, about the year 1180, on the site of which, St. Mary's, or the Cathedral Church now stands. The entire edifice is in the ancient gothic taste, and only remarkable for the noble simplicity attendant on that order. There are seventeen arches in the ails and choir, besides the great eastern window which is a good antique; there are also three Parish Churches, and a Chapel of ease; four Roman Catholic Parish Chapels; three Friaries, and one Nunnnery; a Meeting House for the Presbyterians; a Methodist and a Quakers Meeting House; there is a House of Industry and a Fever Hospital; a handsome Custom House; a new Court House; and a Prison for the city and county prisoners; there is another new Prison for the county just finished, near Gallows-green.

Post Office, Cecil-st. Edward Bernard Post Master.—The Dublin Mail leaves every morning at eleven o'clock; the Cork Post every afternoon at four; the Ennis Mail every afternoon at half past three; the Mallow Post every afternoon at four o'clock. The office is open from nine o'clock in the morning, until twelve, and from three until five, in the afternoon,

LISBURN

A NEAT and well built town on the north side of the river Lagan, which separates it from the County of Down, was in the reign of Elizabeth only a small village called Lisnegarvey. It is situated about 7 miles south of Belfast, and 73 N. by E. from Dublin. In the reign of James I. Sir Fulk Conway obtained a grant of it, and settled some English and Welsh families there; but the rise of Lisburn to commercial importance, may be attributed to the settlement of French refugees in 1699, when a patent was granted to them, (after the repeal of the Edict of Nantz) who introduced the manufacture of linen, and for which it has been long famous, and great quantities together with cattle and seed corn, are constantly disposed of on its principal market day, which is Tuesday. The chief buildings of note are the Church, the Market House, and Linen Hall. A Catholic Chapel, together with one for the Society of Friends, one Presbyterian, and two Methodists' Chapels. The public Institutions of Lisburn are: The Quakers' School; the Humane Society; the County Infirmary; the Philanthropic Society; the Spinning Institution for the assistance of the industrious poor; a Fever Hospital; a School for boys on the joint plan of Bell and Lancaster, and two Schools for girls. The population is about 5000. The fairs are held on July 21st. and October 5th. The markets are held on Tuesday and Saturday; a Manor Court sits every third Wednesday.

Post Office, Castle-street.—Post-Master, Felix Cunningham. The Dublin Mail arrives at ten in the morning, and departs at five in the evening. The Belfast Mail arrives at five in the evening, departs at ten in the morning. The Inniskillen Mail arrives at nine in the morning and departs at five in the afternoon. Car with mail, passengers and parcels, every evening at five to Lurgan, where it arrives at eight same night, dispatched from Lurgan at six in the morning, and returns to Lisburn at nine.

LONDONDERRY.

THE city of Londonderry is situated 112 miles N.W. of Dublin; it is a Bishop's See and derives its name by a grant to a company of London adventurers, who built it in the reign of James the first. This city is renowned in history for the brave and patriotic defence made by the inhabitants, under the command of a Mr. Walker, (a clergyman) in the seige of James the second, when, (except the metropolis) he was in possession of nearly all the Kingdom. Londonderry is also remarkable for its noble and brave opposition against a numerous army, at the time of the revolution, during 105 days of almost unparalleled hardships, privations and famine, which was sustained so long a time with the most determined fortitude. This fine city seems not the least degenerated from its ancient respectability and consequence, and may in fact be ranked with any in the kingdom (of its size) for elegance and cleanliness. Londonderry is a city and county of itself, and is governed by a Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder and Sheriffs. It is finely situated on a rising ground from the Foyle, which is a beautiful river, and flows round nearly two thirds of its eminence. The city is walled entirely round, nearly a mile in circumference, 24 feet high, and six feet thick, with bastions, and four entrance gates battlemented, viz. the Ship's Quay Gate on the E. Ferry Quay Gate on the S.E., Bishop's Gate on the W., and Butcher's Gate on the N. W.; the walls, although built in the year 1632, are in perfect repair, and form a fashionable and picturesque promenade. The streets within the gates are spacious, well paved, lighted and kept well cleaned; the houses in general are well built and handsome, mostly of brick. The Diamond, a large handsome square in the centre of the city, adds greatly to its beauty, in the middle of which is the market place and market house, a fine stately building; the Cathedral, which stands on lofty ground, is a grand Gothic structure, with a lofty square tower containing ten fine toned bells; it is furnished with a good organ, and was built in 1633, under the inspection of Sir John Vaughan; the tower has a fine effect when viewed at a short distance. The New Court House, (of which too much can scarcely be said) is a recent erection in Bishop-street, it is built from an Athenian model furnished by Mr. Boden, of the finest stone, in the most chaste style of architecture: in the centre front is a grand portico, supported by four massy fluted pillars, on the top are the Kings Arms, on one side the emblematical figure of Mercy, and on the other that of Justice, finely sculptured in stone; in fact, the entire edifice displays an elegant design of taste and grandeur. The other public bulidings are the Presbyterian Chapel, a neat Doric erection, the Linen Hall, Theatre, and County Goal; there are also excellent Shambles, and a good Fish market, all well supplied.

Across the river, is a wooden bridge, that deserves particular mention, constructed by Samuel Cox, of Boston, North America. This wonderful structure, is 1068 feet in length, and 40 wide, with a broad parapet on both sides for foot passengers. It is lighted by 26 lamps; at about a third of its length, is a fine turning bridge, with very ingenious machinery, to admit vessels through. The water that supplies the city, is carried across this extensive bridge in metal pipes; indeed take it altogether it is an elegant, curious and wonderful erection. The mercantile trade consists in the export of linen and linen yarn, grain, meal, mess pork, beef and considerable quantities of butter; and importing rum, brandy, wines, tea, sugar, flax seed, timber, &c. &c. Various manufactures for domestic purposes are carried on in the town and suburbs; in fact, the entire trading part of Derry, is highly respectable, as failures are scarcely ever known here. The places of worship, are the Cathedral, a Protestant Chapel of ease, a Presbyterian Chapel, a Covenanter Meeting-House, one Methodist Wesley's Chapel, and one Methodist of the New Light; a Catholic Chapel, and an Independent Chapel, is about to be built. The Charitable Institutions consist of a city and county Poor House, an Infirmary and a Dispensary, a Society, conducted by Ladies, for the relief of sick and indigent Room-keepers, (a very praise worthy undertaking) a Bible Society, and Saving's Bank; all respectably and well conducted. There is also a good News Room, and an elegant Library attached to it. The country round is fertile and pleasant, and the river adds much to its picturesque beauties The Quays are good and commodious, and the Harbour for shipping is extensive and safe. The population is considered about twelve thousand. The Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. There are three fairs in the year, viz. June 17th. Sept. 4th. Oct. 17th.

NEW ROSS

IS a borough town, and a small, but busy sea port; most advantageously situated on the great river Barrow, in the province of Munster, and county of Wexford, at the distance of 67 miles from Dublin, 12 from Waterford, 19 from Wexford, and 76 from Cork. Its local advantages are very great, but from its proximity to Waterford, and a combination of other circumstances, they are not of that real utility to the adventurer, that a superficial observer would be willing to ascribe to them. At little more than a mile from New Ross is the junction of the Nore and the Barrow, over the latter of which rivers, leading into the town from Waterford, is a very long and wide wooden bridge, possessing a portcullis, to admit vessels up or down the river as their destination may require. The river here is deep enough to admit large vessels to the quays, and which, (since it has been made navigable through most of its length) has added much to the commercial prosperity of the town. New Ross was formerly strongly fortified, accounted of considerable consequence, and adorned with many religious houses, among which was a crouched friary, built on the summit of a hill in the town; but which was totally destroyed in consequence of a murder committed by one of the friar's, on a principal inhabitant; the atrocity of the deed stirred up the whole body of the people, who arose collectively, put the friar to death, and demolished the friary. On the scite of this ill-fated building, the Monastery of St. Saviour was afterwards erected, by Sir John Devereux, for conventual Franciscans, and the east end of this last building is now the parish Church. In the reign of Edward III. a friary for hermits following the rule of St. Augustine was founded here. In the civil wars of 1641, an engagement happened near this place, between the English forces under the command of the Marquis of Ormond, and the Irish commanded by General Preston, in which 500 of the latter were slain, and all their baggage and ammunition taken by the victors. On the fifth of June, 1798, a considerable battle was fought here, by a very large body of insurgents and the king's troops, when the insurgents were completely routed; three thousand falling in the attack, and Harvey their General was deposed. New Ross, though small, possesses a Fever Hospital, with a Dispensary attached; a Lying-in-Hospital; an auxiliary Cow-pock Establishment, and the Trinity Hospital for reduced housekeepers. Here are two Catholic Chapels; three for the use of the Methodists; a Quakers' Meeting-house, and an extensive Nunnery; also a spacious and well-built Court-house, ornamented with a steeple and a good public clock. Amongst the useful buildings, rank the Corn Market; two Charity Schools, and in a most eligible situation, over-looking the river, is an endowed School, founded by Sir John Ivory, in the twelfth year of the reign of Queen Anne, in which four poor scholars are taught the Greek and Latin tongue. Present master, the Rev. Thomas Surridge, A,M. who has in a spirited manner much improved the House, School, &c. at his own expence. Three of the ancient gates of the town are still standing, and, in the old part is a cross of singular rustic appearance. Nor does it want for a Barrack, which is here fitted up for cavalry. Many good houses and lofty stores adorn the town, and, in general, the streets are pretty wide and tolerably well paved. It is governed by a Sovereign, Recorder, Chief Burgess, Bailiffs and Town Clerk, and sends one member to Parliament; the present representative is Charles Tottenham, Esq. Its market days are Wednesday and Saturday, and its inhabitants are stated to be about 8000.

Post Office, top of John-street.—Richard Ulysses Burgh, Post Master.—Mail to Dublin every day at three in the afternoon. To Wexford and Taghmon every evening at six, To Thomastown every afternoon at three, and to Enniscorthy every evening at six.

NEWRY

SEATED on the banks of a small but navigable river, which bears its name (Newry Water) is a considerable River Port, Borough, Market, and Post Town, chiefly in the County of Down, 50 miles north of Dublin. It is principally built on the side of a steep hill, and its situation generally is but indifferent; the streets are for the most part narrow, and it boasts of but few Public Edifices worthy of note. This town owes its origin to Sir Nicholas Bagnall. He rebuilt it, and erected the Church (now in a state of dilapidation) with a strong Castle for its defence. Within the last 50 years Newry has become the most opulent and Commercial Town in the County, possessing many wealthy Merchants and Traders. By means of a navigable communication with the Irish Sea, on the one hand, and with the celebrated lake of Lough Neagh and the town of Belfast, on the other, its exports and imports are very considerable; among the former may be enumerated, oats and oatmeal, beef, pork, hams, and flitches, live cattle, hogs, plain linen and butter; for the latter article it is particularly famous. Among its imports may be named flax seed, timber, iron, and colonial produce generally. The town contains about 2500 houses, and upwards of 15,000 inhabitants. The principal employment of the labouring classes in the vicinity, is the manufacture of linen cloth, of which upwards of 3,000,000 of yards are exported annually. Newry, it has been previously remarked, is comparatively poor in Public Buildings. The New Church however, forms an exception, it possseses some degree of grandeur, but its scite is by no means happily selected. It has a good Commercial Coffee Room, used as an Exchange, with a small but neat Theatre. The places of worship are two Churches of the Establishment, one Catholic Chapel, with Meeting Houses of Presbyterians, Methodists and Seceders, and three Public Schools. Here are also a Fever Hospital; two Sessions Houses, and a Bridewell. The town is governed by a Seneschal, Magistrates, High Constable, and four Baronian Constables. The Borough of Newry returns one Member to Parliament; the present representative is the Hon. Francis Jack Needham. Markets are held every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and the Fairs on the Monday after Easter and the 29th of October. Cairn Bane Races on the 1st of November.

Post Office, Hill-street.—Assistant Postmaster, Mr. J. Moore.

SLIGO.

THE county of Sligo, which the Atlantic Ocean confines on the North, is from N. to S. 32 miles in length, and the greatest breadth is 30 miles. The town of Sligo is the capital, and the only sea port and town, of any trade in the county, it is 104 miles, N. W. of of Dublin, and is a very flourishing commercial place. Within these eight or ten years, the London trade has been greatly extended here. The merchandize consists in the exportation of butter, meal, grain, mess beef and pork, linen and linen yarn, chiefly shipped to London, Liverpool & Glasgow; the butter trade forms a very prominent feature of mercantile interest; it commences about May, and continues till December following, and is transacted in the butter market, which is a spacious new and convenient erection. The merchants here make their purchases from farmers, &c. who bring the butter from the surrounding country, packed in casks ready for exportation, previous to the sales taking place, it undergoes an examination by the butter taster, (appointed for that purpose) every cask is then marked according to its quality, such an excellent regulation prevents all possibility of imposition, which probably at one period of the trade was practised. The amount of cash paid in this market weekly, is from 3 to 4000 pounds, with an encrease of nearly 30,000 casks more than was sold last year. The purchases of grain in the corn market, is also considerable, there being bought, 44,000 barrels of oats more this, than the last year. The market days for corn and butter, are Tuesdays and Fridays. The encrease of commerce generally, is evident from the list of tonnage of shipping, which belonged to this port in the year 1810, being only 280 tons, and all small sloops; and at the present period, there are upwards of 1200 tons and many fine large vessels, which are constantly employed in export and importation, beside many ships often arriving from foreign parts, with timber, flax seed, &c. &c. The public Institutions of Sligo, evince the refinement and liberality of its respectable inhabitants, viz, a well conducted Infirmary, Fever Hospital, and a most respectable Charter School; there is also a News Room, (to which all strangers have free access) a well edited news paper, is published in this town, every Tuesday and Saturday, by the much respected Proprietor, Mr. Alex. Bolton.

The places of worship are at present, an extensive Protestant Church, an independent Meeting House, a Methodist Chapel and two Catholic Chapels, viz. the Convent and St. Patrick's, another large Church of England is in contemplation, and is supposed will soon be built. Close to the town are the ruins of an Abbey, supposed to have been built in the thirteenth century, the cloisters and some parts which are still pretty perfect, display great chastity of architectural beauty; within it are many tombs and monuments of very ancient date, and would allow great pleasure to the antiquarian. The country about this flourishing town is mountainous, romantic and wildly grand; the river Garrogue which flows through the town adds considerably to its beauty, and in the summer months there are numerous aquatic parties who frequent it. Hazelwood, the seat of Owen Wynne, Esq. two miles distant, is a most delightful Demesne, and a model of agricultural taste; no stranger should omit visiting this beautiful spot, it being open to all respectable people, to ride or walk round it. There have also lately been built a very neat and commodious Custom House, and a spacious new Quay, which adds considerably to the convenience of the shipping interests; the town is also much beautified by many handsome new houses being lately erected. There are five fairs annually, viz. on the 27th of March; the first Saturday after old May day; 4th of July; 12th of August and 9th of October; which are held one day each, and are chiefly cattle fairs. The market days are Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

Post Office, Stephen-st.—Adam Guthry, Post Master.—The Dublin Mail, leaves Sligo, every morning, (Saturday's excepted) at eight. The North and Scotch Mails, are dispatched on the arrival of the Dublin Mail, at six every evening. The English letters, are forwarded by the Dublin Mail.

STRABANE.

THIS town is in the County of Tyrone, 101 miles north-west of Dublin: it is situated on the river Mourne, about half a mile from its confluence with the Foyle, which flows in beautiful serpentine windings to the north-west, is a handsome and well built populous Town, and gives the title of Viscount to a branch of the noble family of Hamilton; it is also the seat of a good and extensive market.

The linen trade of Strabane is of great importance, and it may be considered the third town in Ireland for the quality and quantity of that branch of manufacture; the provision trade (mess, beef, and pork) is also carried on very respectably and extensively here; the Strabane brands are highly approved in foreign and other parts where they are exported to, but the chief part of the provision is more immediately shipped to England and Scotland. The butter trade is not so extensive here as it otherwise would be if encouragement was given to it by Parliament, extending the Act to Strabane; the butter that is now taken to this market must undergo another inspection at some town where the Act does extend, before it can be exported, which is a great impediment to the trade, however, if this obstacle was removed, it would probably be as large a butter market as any in the kingdom. The canal, which is extremely wide and fine, with a large basin, is about four miles in length, and communicates with the Foyle opposite to Port Hall, it is navigable for vessels of 200 tons burthen; some time ago a line of canal was marked out from Port Hall to Lough Ern, which, if it had been accomplished, would have added the greatest benefits to the trade of a great extent of country, Lough Ern being navigable for 40 miles, and by the opening of so desirable a communication it would have been of the highest national importance, besides having afforded the pleasing gratification of hundreds of the poor being so usefully employed. Strabane contains a Protestant Church; a large handsome Market-house; a Dispensary; Fever Hospital; and Sunday Poor Schools, supported by voluntary contributions. There are four yearly fairs, viz, on the 1st of Feb. 12th of May, 1st of August, and 12th of November. The general market days are on Tuesdays and Saturdays; that for linen cloth, yarn, and butter, on Tuesdays. The town of Lifford is across the Foyle about a mile from Strabane; it is a very small place, and no trade whatever, although the Assizes are held there; it is pleasantly situated and contains a good Church, with the County Goal, Court House, &c. The town altogether has a pleasing and picturesque effect in the view from Strabane, the river adding greatly to the beauty of the scene.

Post Office.—Oliver Jenkins, Post Master.—Letters leave this office for Dublin every morning at nine o'clock, and arrive there at six the following morning. Letters to Belfast dispatched at five every evening; letters to England are sent by Dublin mail; letters to Scotland by Belfast; the Londonderry mail leaves Strabane every afternoon at three o'clock.

WATERFORD.

THE capital of a county of the same name in the province of Munster, is the third export city in Ireland, and situated on the south side of the broad and rapid river Suir, about four miles from its junction with the Nore and Barrow, 76 miles from Dublin, 64 from Cork, and 25 from Wexford; in latitude 52° 18' N. and longitude 6° 54' W. This city was originally built in 879, but destroyed in 981; it was much enlarged by Strongbow in 1171, and still more in the reign of Henry VII, who granted the citizens considerable privileges; in 1399, Richard the second landed, and was crowned here; and in 1690, James II. embarked in the harbour for France, after his defeat by William III. who made this city his residence for some time. The ancient name given to Waterford by the Irish, was Cuan-na Groith, that is, the harbour of the Sun; a second name was Glean-na-Gleodh, the valley of lamentation; so called, from a bloody battle fought between the Irish and the Danes, in which the former gained a complete victory; and burned the city to the ground. Waterford is deservedly famous for its manufacture of white glass; there are also here, on an extensive scale, Breweries, Salt Houses and Foundries. The foreign trade of Waterford, is the export of beef, butter, hides, tallow, pork, corn, &c. to which the extensive inland navigation of the Nore, Suir and Barrow, greatly contributes, as they also do to the import trade, from the demand for foreign commodities, in the several rich counties and flourishing towns adjoining. The trade it carries on with Newfoundland, is of the utmost importance, as a number of ships are employed in supplying it with provisions; some idea of which may be formed by the vast number of large hogs killed, which amount to upwards of 5000 per week, during the season; the export of bacon in 1818, was 249,739 flitches; butter, 93000 casks; oats 201,163 barrels; the annual export of provision, &c. amounts to more than £1,500,000. Waterford is the see of a Bishop, who has here a fine palace built of stone, with two fronts; to this the see of Lismore, was united in 1363. The cathedral is very beautiful and extensive, with a tall spire steeple, a clock and a ring of six bells; there are two other Churches, St. Patrick, and St. Olaves; the Churches of St. John St. Stephen, St. Peter and St. Michael, have been a long time in ruins; there are four Roman Catholic Chapels, one of which, lately built, is by far the most elegant in Ireland; the roof of which is supported by twelve pillars, and has a beautiful front of hewn stone; there are also one French Church, one Presbyterian and one Independent Chapel, a Meeting House for people denominated Quakers, and a Methodist Chapel; this city contains a number of public buildings, and can boast of many Charity Schools and Humane Institutions, well supported; among the former must be noticed the Town Hall, on the mall, the City Prison and Court House, Patrick-st. (John L. Wright, Governor) the County Prison and Court House, Ballybricken (Shapland Greaves, Governor) the Exchange, Chamber of Commerce, &c.; among the latter, the Fever Hospital, House of Industry, Dispensary, &c.; at the extremity of the quay stands a large antique round tower, which formed an angle of the city walls, it was built in the year 1003 by Reginald the Dane, and in 1171, held as a fortress by Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke; in 1463, a mint was established in it by Edward the fourth; in 1643, it was bombarded from the opposite side the river, by Cromwell, one of whose balls remain visible in its side, near its summit; and in 1819, repaired in its antique style, and appropriated to the use of the Police Establishment of the city. The streets are in general narrow and confined, except those in which recent improvements have been made, but the quay is esteemed one of the finest in Europe, being an English mile in length; the river here is a considerable breadth, and flows up to the town in one noble reach, from the Aestuary, and the opposite shore presents a bold hill, that rises immediately from the water, to an elevation which renders the whole truly magnificent. Over the river Suir there has been an elegant wooden bridge erected, connecting the counties of Kilkenny and Waterford, it is 832 feet long, and 40 broad, with a portcullis for shipping to pass up the river: the expence of the bridge, and purchase of the ferry amounting to thirty thousand pounds, was raised by associated individuals, of whom Sir John Newport, Bart. was Chairman; the harbour extends about eight miles in length, nearly in a straight line, the water particularly clear; without the harbour it is twelve fathoms deep, and in the mouth seven or more; upon the E. side, seven miles from the city, lies Duncannon fort, which is extremely strong, and so well situated, that it commands the harbour, opposite to which lies Passage, in a very great hollow, where 500 sail of shipping may safely ride. Dunmore, at the harbour mouth, is where the packets sail for Milford. Waterford sends one Member to the Imperial Parliament; the present Member is the Rt. Hon. Sir J. Newport, Bart.; it contains about four thousand houses, and forty thousand inhabitants; the city is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Sheriffs, Town Clerk, &c. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs, May 4th, June 26th, and October 25th.

Post Office, little George-street.—Alexander Boyd, Post Master.—Mail to Dublin every day at half past three (except Saturday) arrives every morning from Dublin at eleven; Mail to Cork every morning at half past eleven, arrives from Cork every night, fifteen minutes past ten; to Clonmel every evening at three, arrives every morning at eleven; New Ross and Wexford, every day at three, arrives every morning forty minutes after nine; British Mail by Milford is due every morning at ten, and dispatched every morning at half past eleven.

WEXFORD,

CALLED by the Danes Wessford, is the capital of the county, and a sea-port, 66 miles from Dublin, 19 from New Ross, and 12 from Enniscorthy, is situated under a hill, upon the river Slaney, over which there has been an elegant wooden bridge built, by much the largest in Ireland, being 1554 feet in length, and 34 feet in breadth, it consists of 75 piers of oak drove into the ground, 6 timbers in each pier, with a portcullis for the admission of shipping up the river; at ebb tides there is 16 feet of water underneath. The harbour is immensely large but divided; the inner harbour being four miles long by one in breadth; the river which is navigable to Enniscorthy, 12 miles, adds much to the commercial convenience of the town. Wexford was one of the earliest colonies of the English, and the first forces from England that attempted the conquest landed here. From this town King Henry II. embarked for England after receiving homage from most of the kings and princes of this nation; here was the ceremony of the marriage performed between Raymond, afterwards viceroy of Ireland, and the Lady Basil, sister to Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke; and is the second town that Cromwell besieged. Where the castle stands is a rocky hill that overlooks the town. There are several parts of the wall standing, and the gates yet remain; the town consists of one long street with some lanes on each side, and contains several handsome buildings. There are several ruins of ancient abbeys and religious houses; the public buildings are the Church, Market-house, Court-house, and County Jail; besides the established Church, there is a Catholic Chapel, and a Methodist Meeting House; a Nunnery, Convent; and Catholic College; a Lancasterian School; a Subscription News-room; a House of Industry and Lunatic Asylum, James M'Evoy, Governor; a County Infirmary and Fever Hospital. Near the west gate is a small structure that covers a mineral well, which they call a Spa, but the appearance of the water is not very inviting, though it has many virtues attributed to it. The chief exports of Wexford is corn, barley, live cattle, ad malt. Provisions of all kinds are plentiful and cheap, there are fine wild fowl to be had from the month of November to May. The trade of the town is considerable, and its commerce with England is great. On the 30th of May, 1798, it was entirely evacuated by the troops on account of the insurgents, who were become 20,000 strong, and were ready to attack it; they shortly after entered it, and held possession of it till the 21st of June following. In the Barony of Forth, adjoining Wexford, are the remains of an ancient British colony, planted there by Henry II. The people of Wexford retain their native language, manners, and many singular customs to this day; and it is probable the ancient British or Celtic language has been preserved with less corruption here than even in Britain; the inhabitants are remarkably industrious and cleanly. Wexford is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, and Bailiffs; and contains about 12000 inhabitants; and sends one member to Parliament; Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs, March 17th, May 1st, June 29th, August 24th, and November 1st.

Post Office, Allen-st.—John Hickey, Post Master.—Royal Mail to Dublin every day at half past two, except Saturday, on which day the bags are delivered to all intermediate places, but no Dublin mail carried; arrives every morning at half past eleven with the Dublin mail, (except Monday) on which day the English packets only are brought.

Munster Mail to England by way of Milford, leaves this office every day at twelve returns every night at eleven. A bye mail to Broadway every Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings at twelve, returns Monday, Thursday, and Sunday mornings at eleven.

Day Coach to Dublin through Enniscorthy, Carnolin, Gorey, Arklow, Wicklow, and Newtown Mount Kenedy, every morning at six, returns the same way, and arrives in Wexford every evening at half past eight.

FROM MR. JAMES KENSELAH'S MAIN-ST.

A Car to Waterford, through New Ross every morning at eight (except Sunday) returns every day at four o'clock.

YOUGHAL

IS situated on an arm of the sea, on the eastern frontier of the county of Cork; 24 miles from that city, and 108, S. W. of Dublin; in the province of Munster. It is a corporate market fair, and Post town, extending more than a mile in length, from N. to S. with a number of inferior streets and lanes, branching therefrom, in easterly and westerly directions. It is under a high hill, near the mouth of the bay, beautifully situated, as approached to from the opposite shore of the county of Waterford, bearing a striking resemblance to the City of Algiers, The meandering Bride, and the Black Water, here empty themselves into the sea, from which immense quantities of fish are caught by the adventurous poor of this ancient borough; and from whose bosom, rich tillage is daily collected, which being dried, makes excellent manure for their favourite root, the potatoe, which was first grown in Ireland, in the immediate neighbourhood of Youghal. This borough is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, Bailiffs and town Clerk, who, together with the Aldermen, Burgesses and Freemen, return one Member to Parliament; who at present, is the Rt. Hon. Lord Viscount Bernard. Its original inhabitants, were a Colony from Bristol. Youghal has a very safe and commodious harbour, in which vessels can ride in 24 feet water at the lowest ebb, protected from all winds. Good Quays and Piers now adorn, and benefit the town. The principal street is divided into two parts, by a lofty square building, rebuilt in the year 1777, called the Clockgate, from its containing a town clock, surmounted by a cupola, covered by a gilt ball and fane. Over the arch which crosses the street, is the town prison, Gaolers rooms &c. one division of the street is called the North Main street, and the other the South Main street; at the extremity of which, there has recently been made a thoroughfare for carriages, leading into the new road to Cork; and passing by an Antique-looking Church, which is now erecting on the site of the Cemetery of an Abbey or Friary, formerly venerated in its vicinity. At a short distance from the Dispensary, which is built on the site of the walls, stands the Church, a large gothic edifice, evidently of great antiquity. Youghal, was incorporated by King Edward the Fourth, and invested with great privileges, which were confirmed and augmented by succeeding Monarchs. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, it held out against the Desmond rebellion, in favour of the Crown; and though obliged to submit to Cromwell, for want of succour, yet, in the year 1618, the Corporation were amongst the first to proclaim Charles Second, King of England. In North Main street, is the remains of a Castle, now converted into wretched dwellings, the ground floor of which is used as a coal store. There are two Protestant Churches; one Chatholic Chapel; two Methodist Chapels; one Meeting House for Quakers; and a Chapel for Presbyterians; a Free School founded by the first Earl of Cork; and Alms Houses for six widows, who have each of them lodgings, firing, and five pounds per annum. Here is also an Infirmary, and a Dispensary; a clean neat flesh market, and a commodious fish market, on one of the Quays, well supplied with fish,

There is a market for butter, of which Mr. Richard Cox, is weigh master. The woollen manufacture, which some few years ago, was carried on very spiritedly, is much on the wane; whilst the manufacture of that kind of earthenware, which English Potters term coarse, or brown ware, is in a flourishing state; there are no less than three Potteries of this kind established. Youghal possesses also, a share in the Newfoundland trade. There are several gentlemen's seats in the immediate neighbourhood; those which claim the greatest attention are, Myrtle Grove, the residence of Sir Christopher Musgrave, Bart. Clifton, the seat of John Keily, Esq. Green Park, the pleasant residence of John Robert Parker, Esq. and Bell View, the elevated one of the Rev. Arthur Keily, which has a commanding prospect of all vessels coming in, or going out of port. Its market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the latter of which, is well supplied with every necessary of life. Its population is estimated at 8000.

The Life Insurer by the reduced rate of Premium required at this Office has not only an advantage equal to an immediate Bonus, but every ten years will be entitled to participate in the profit arising from the Life Insurance department: Persons wishing to sink money may receive a present Annuity which will enable them to dispose of a part of the money so sunk at their deaths. The full value will be given for Annuities secured on long leasehold or life interest property. Endowments for Children effected upon terms peculiarly advantageous to the Public. To facilitate the laudable object of Life Insurance, by which a provision may be made for the Widow and Orphan, the present Company have had Tables calculated for Quarterly and Half yearly, as well as Annual Payments, leaving it to the option of the Insurer to select any of the above periods for the Payment of the Premium.

Further particulars may be known on application to the Office as above, or to any of the following Agents.

PRESIDENT, John Patteson, Esq. Alderman of Norwich

SECRETARY, Samuel Bignold, Esq. | ACTUARY, Richard Morgan, Esq.

The management of the Society's Affairs is entrusted to the President and twenty-four Directors resident in Norfolk and Norwich, who are assisted by the SUPERINTENDING BOARDS, or Committees, (appointed from the most respectable Insurers) at London, Manchester, Edinburgh, Dublin, Leeds, Birmingham, &c.

THE NORWICH UNION is founded on the equitable principle of Mutual Guarantee; its premiums (under 50 years of age) are nearly 10 per cent below the usual rates; and the whole of the surplus premium is added, at stated periods, to the sums insured by the policies of the members, in proportion to the sums they have respectively contributed, so that a Policy of £1000. will ultimately produce 1500 or even 2000 Pounds without paying any increase of premium.

The Society was established in 1808, and has already accumulated a capital of £313,000, which is chiefly invested in real and government securities. A bonus of 20 per cent. upon the Premiums paid, has been added to the sums insured by such Policies as were affected prior to June 1815.

The Society is at present in receipt of Premiums to the amount of £90,000 per annum, and the new Policies now issuing are in the proportion of more than Eight Hundred annually.

An instance of the beneficial effects of the Norwich Union mode of making the bonus depend on the amount of premium paid, instead of the amount insured, may be adduced in the case of Mr. JESSON, of West Bromwich, who insured only £1000, but whose representatives, at his decease, received no less than £1154 4s.

The advantages of Life Insurance are in some degree illustrated by a single example.

A person, 28 years of age, may, by an annual payment of £2. 6s. 8d. insure £100. payable to his executors at his decease; or for £23. 6s. 8d. may secure £1000; and thus at a moderate yearly expense, preserve his family from distress.

THERE is scartely any class of the community, or any situation of society, in which Life Insurance may not be made conducive to the happiness and prosperity of individuals and of families.—FRIENDS may aid those in whose welfare they are interested—A GENTLEMAN ABOUT TO MARRY may make a settlement upon the object of his affection, in case she should survive him—A FATHER may protect his married daughter, by an insurance upon the husband's life, from being reduced to poverty by his decease—A Husband, by insuring his own life, may make provision for his wife and children, or by insuring his wife's life, may prevent inconvenience from the loss of an income that will cease at her death—A WIDOW may be enabled to afford portions for her daughters, and to purchase livings or Commissions for her sons, or to supply them with a capital for entering into business—A CREDITOR may secure himself against losses from bad or doubtful debts—A DEBTOR may ensure the satisfaction of his creditors without distress to his surviving relatives—A PROPRIETOR OF LEASEHOLDS may be prepared with the renewal fines payable at the expiration of subsisting lives In all these cases, and in many others which the ordinary affairs of life and the circumstances of parties will supply, the benefits resulting from the Insurance of Lives must be as obvious as they are important. Even this enumeration might be deemed superfluous, if it were not a fact, that until within the last few years Life Insurance was but little understood, and that there are still many persons entirely inattentive to the subject, whose situations renders it highly desirable that they should avail themselves of its advantages.

Persons may effect Insurances with this Society on their own lives, or on the lives of others, and either for the whole duration of life, or for any limited period The payments of Premium may be made either quarterly, half-yearly, annually or in a gross sum, and on the extinction of the life upon which an Insurance has been effected, the party entitled may receive the benefit of such Insurance, either by being paid the amount insured, with its accumulations, or by having an ANNUITY FOR LIFE of equal value to the sum due upon the Policy.

AN OPTION is given to those who insure, of having the accumulation of surplus Premium appropriated as Bonuses or ADDITION TO THE SUM INSURED by the Policies, OR APPLIED IN REDUCTION OF THE ANNUAL PREMIUM PAID FOR INSURANCE.

ANNUITIES, immediate, progressive, deferred, or by survivorship, are granted by this Society.

ENDOWMENTS for CHILDREN, on their attaining a given age, may be purchased of the Society, either by gross or annual payments.

Persons from any cause wishing to discontinue their Policies, may dispose of them to the Society at a fair price.

The Policies of the Society may also be at any time sold or mortgaged, and on notice of such transactions is required to be given at the office.

The Society makes no charge for entrance money.

TO SOLICITORS, &c.—SOLICITORS AND OTHER PERSONS RECOMMENDING INSURANCES, ARE ALLOWED A HANDSOME COMMISSION.

No extra Premiums is demanded on account of Sea Risk for the passage between Dover and Calais, or for that between Hollyhead and Dublin; provided such passage be taken on board his Majesty's regular packets.

The Society's Terms for Annuities and Endowments, and Pamphlets explanatory of every Description of Life Insurance, may be had Gratis of the Society's Agents:

FIRE SOCIETY.

This Institution is of the nature of a Benefit Society; and its object is to give Security against the Calamity of Fire on the cheapest terms.

In the NORWICH UNION the whole savings arising upon Insurances, after deduction of charges, and a reservation for a Guarantee Fund, are RETURNED to the parties at the end of every seventh year. On 25th Dec. 1819, not less than £68,480 3s. of savings had been so returned.

The success and stability of the Society are proved by that Report, founded upon an experience of 21 years; and by the fact, that the total number of persons who have Insured is not now less than 90,000

It deserves to be added, that, by means of the establishment of Boards at London, Edinburgh, and Dublin, and of Local Committees in the leading provincial towns, corresponding with Norwich, all settlements of Loss are made through means of a body of disinterested resident individuals of high character, who see prompt and ample justice done to every sufferer.

By the rules of both the Fire and Life Offices, a sum of Capital is to be invested in Scotland, proportioned to the business of the Society there; so that, retaining this Capital in the country, and bringing back all savings in the shape of RETURNS, these Societies may be regarded as truly Scotch.

LIFE, ANNUITY, AND ENDOWMENT SOCIETY.

In this Society which is on the Principal of a Benefit Society, and its leading characters and great success resembles the EQUITABLE SOCIETY of London, the savings made are, at stated intervals, ADDED by way of bonus to the sums insured.

In 1816, a bonus of 20 per cent. was declared. The income of the Society is now about £100,000 per annum. Between 1st. January and 31st December 1819, there was issued no fewer than 623 new policies, yielding an income of £13,928, 16s. 6d. and covering £445,405. The premiums are lower than in most other Offices. No entrance money is charged. Persons wishing to discontinue their policies may dispose of them to the Society at a fair price; and the amount [and bonus] is paid within three months from the intimation of proof of death.—Solicitors and others recommending Insurances, are allowed a commission, as in other respectable Offices.

The benefits of Life Insurance to all professional men, persons in public offices, or engaged in any sort of business, stipendaries, annuitants, tenants of land, and in general, to all individuals whose income ceases or is impaired to their families on their death, are certain and obvious, and daily become more understood. In this Society, these benefits are obtained at the lowest possible rate.

ANNUITIES immediate, progressive, deferred, or by survivorship, and ENDOWMENTS TO CHILDREN, are granted upon either a single or an annual payment.

Pamphlets explanatory of both Fire and Life Societies to be had at all the Offices in the Kingdom.
